C. F. Richardson, Fergus county, Mont.: "We had a good rain about a week ago and what crops are growing conld scarcely look better. The few parcels of winter wheat that have been sown in this vicinity are looking fine. The spring crops are reported to be all that could be expected. There is much activity among the new settlers and this summer will see several thousand acres of crops growing in this neighborhood."

C. Adams, Weld connty, Colo., was on the South Omaha market May 3 with two doubles of shorn lambs that sold at $8.50, averaging 77 lbs; Theo. Jacobson, Morgan county, Colo., also had two doubles on the same day at $8.40, averaging 76 lbs, and Noah Miller had a donble from Weld county that brought the same figure, averaging 76 lbs. These sales were made by onr house and were the only lambs that went above $8.35.

"Everybody seems to have gone into the raising of hogs in onr territory," said Geo. S. Davis, Redwood county, Minn., who favored onr South St. Paul house with a shipment of cattle and hogs May 7, "and I believe shipments of hogs this fall will be in considerable proportions. However, cattle have been pretty well marketed and are scarce. Most plowing for corn has been completed and some seeding will be done next week. Both wheat and oats were affected by the recent low temperature."

It was our good fortnne and pleasure to sell cattle for the following parties, who are well and favorably known stockmen: C. C. Harbor, Kane county, Ill.; D. O. Kistler, Mercer connty, Ill ; J. F. Miller, Carrol county, Ia.; F. R. Kohtz, York county, Neb.; Homer Decker, Cass connty, Ill.; M. D. Brown, Fremont county, Ia.; T. C. Hovde, Watonwan county, Minn.; T. H. McConnell, Henry oounty, Ill.; Conway & M., Union county, Ky,; J. A. Moreland, Cass county, Ia.; Cryder Collins, Grundy county, Ill.; Dexter Gray, Waupaca county, Wis.; Guiser Bros., Pierce county, Wis.; D. R. Nichols, Cedar county, Ia.; R. Spire, Tama connty, Ia.; Wyman Bros., Peoria county, Ill.; J. J. Donohne, Worth county, Ia.; C. L. Cole, Franklin county, Ia.; Chas. Sexton, Marshall county, Ia.; J. A. Wilcox, Hardin county, Ia.; D. E. Snyder, Marshall county, Ind.; M. McLain, Dunn county, Wis.; J. D. Latonrette, Muscatine county, Ia.; J. F. Murray, McDonough county, Ill.

Don Cochrane, White county, Ill., writes our East St. Louis house: "I saw the cattle. Am well pleased with them and glad you bought them."

C. R. Evans, the well-known feeder of Larimer county, Colo., had 9 cars of cattle on the Denver market last week which were handled by our house, the sales being satisfactory all around.

On Thursday last week the Swan Land and Cattle Co., Laramie county, Wyo., had in four cars of shorn feeder lambs at Denver which our house sold at $6.00. Mr. Dawson, manager of the above company, and Mr. McNabb, one of the directors, were visitors at the Denver Yards that day.

The Caldwell family were well represented on the Chicago market Monday of this week and we had the honor of handling their stock. R. W. and F. D. Caldwell each had a shipment of cattle from Mahaska county, Ia., and E. S. Caldwell a consignment of hogs from the same county.

R. M. McMullen, Burt county, Neb.: "I like the Report very well and think it is well worth the money. Reading it broadens any one's outlook on the live stock situation and tends to keep one up to date on prices of live stock, as well as the general situation. Enclosed find 50c for one year."

W. J White, Joe Daviess county, Ill.: "Received cattle in good condition and am well pleased with your selection. Quite a number of cattlemen saw them and said they ought to suit any one. Thank you for the careful manner in which you filled my order. I am ever your friend."

E. A. Stouffer, Ogle county, Ill.; J. G. Schaffner, Pike county, Ill.; Eyrich & McCowan, Will county, Ill.; Dexter & Gray, Rock county, Wis.; R. H. Carse, Pottawattamie county, Ia., who are well known in feeding or shipping circles in their respective sections, each sold a shipment of hogs through our Chicago house Wednesday last week.

Texas had two representative cattlemen on the East St. Louis market Monday when B. J. Derden, Navarro county, marketed 48 head of beef steers, averaging 1,004 lbs, at $6.40 and R. H. Cook, Wichita county, had in 40 head of 1,058-lbs average at the same price. These cattle were handled by our house. They were of fair quality, horned, and had been fed some cake on the grass.

Representative feeders and shippers on the Monday market at Chicago who favored us with their consignments were: J. Purdin, Mahaska county, Ia.; R. S. Keat, Carroll county, Ia.; W. F. Widick, Webster county, Ia.; M. Culver, Carroll county, Mo.; Hant & C., Cass county, Ia.; E. R. McAllister, Palo Alto county, Ia.; H. P. Goy, Fremont county, Ia.; George F. Meyer and O. C. Mack, Wright county, Ia.; C. C. Charlson, Winnebago county, Ia.; H. Wise, Greene county, Ia.

J. R. Sheldon, who conducts the Sheldon, Sheldon (Minn.) Mercantile Co., had a consignment of hogs to our South St. Paul house Monday. "We had a little rain last week," he said, "and crops are looking good. Farmers are beginning to seed corn. Interest in stock raising is manifesting itself quite prominently. However, hogs predominate and everybody seems to be in the market for brood sows."

Geo. T. Stevens, long-time customer of our South St. Paul house and extensive shipper, was represented at above point Monday with his usual weekly shipment. Mr. Stevens, who is located at Walworth county, S. D., remarked that Seattle and Tacoma packers are operating very extensively in the Dakotas, confining themselves exclusively to buying of hogs. To illustrate the activity of representatives of these outfits, he stated that during the past week they had two double decks out of Selby, nine out of Aberdeen and sixteen out of Mitchell for the West.

It was the good fortune of our Chicago house on Monday to be honored with cattle shipments from following parties who are well known either in feeding or shipping circles: Hans Whitwer, Madison county, Neb.; W. W. Miller, Warren county, Ia.; T. W. Richards, Champaign county, Ill.; R. H. Allerton, Piatt county, Ill.; J. Ellerbrock, Sac county, Ia.; C. Harshbarger, Montgomery county, Ind.; Yuba New, Nodaway county, Mo.; C. E. Cutcher, Scott county, Ia.; J. J. Larson, Webster county, Ia.; J. C. Kuehl, Scott county, Ia.; John E. Nelson, Hamilton county, Ia.; C. Lewison, Mower county, Minn.; Carver Bros., Rice county, Minn.; Green & Beatty, McHenry county, Ill.

Frank Mikan, Shiawassee county, Mich.: "Account sales for car of lambs received and same is very satisfactory."

A. J. & S. D Smith each had a shipment of hogs to our Chicago house Wednesday last week from McDonough county, Ill.

A. C. Brown, Frederick county, Va.: "The Report is a 'peach.' Full of meaty information. Enclosed find 50c for a year's subscription."

D. Halstead represented Jasper county, Ind., on the Monday cattle and hog market at Chicago, he selling his stock through our house.

William Gray, Seneca county, Ohio: "The Report is all right and well worth the price. Enclosed find 50c to cover postage ensuing year."

J. R. Porter & Sons, Dundy county, Neb., marketed hogs at Denver on Thursday of last week which were handled by our house at satisfactory prices.

C. Z. Brundage, Huron county, Ohio: "Cattle came all right and I am well pleased. As soon as I sell will want some more and will give you an order."

P. Dore, Pierce county, Neb., was represented on the Tuesday cattle market at Chicago with 36 beef steers, averaging 1,275 lbs, which we landed at $7.75.

Bicknell & Gemmell, Baker county, Ore., had 10 cars of feeders on the Denver market Friday of last week which our house sold straight at $5.25, averaging 808 lbs.

J. S. Lambert, Nance county, Neb.: "We are having nice spring weather now. Had a good rain last week. Grass is good. Cattle went on pasture in good shape."

Among our valued patrons at South St. Paul on Monday was Paul Damberger of the firm of Damberger & Berndt, Campbell county, S. D., who had a load of hogs on that market.

W. E. Stevens, Douglas county, Minn., prominent in shipping circles and a regular patron of our house at South St. Paul, was there with a mixed car of cattle and hogs and sheep Monday.

G. & J. Hoffman, Buchanan county, Mo., were the owners and our house the sellers of the 28 head of fair quality, half-fat steers which averaged 808 lbs and brought $6.90 at East St. Louis on Monday.

D. F. Herriott, Guthrie county, Ia., sold through our Chicago house Wednesday last week 16 steers and heifers mixed of 1,220-lbs average at the pleasing figure of $7.60. These cattle were of splendid quality.

Sam Smith, Adair county, Ia., was at Chicago on May 9 with 90 head of 185-lb hogs which we landed at $9.50. This price was top for day and also 2½c per cwt higher than any other light weights brought.

Stuebe Bros., Brown county, Minn., and Bell & Lutz, Fremont county, Ia., whom we have on our Chicago roster every week of the year either with shipments of cattle or hogs, were represented on the hog market Wednesday last week with a consignment.

E. Bazarth, McLean county, Ill., was on the Tuesday market at Chicago with 17 head of 587-lb heifers for which we secured $6.10. He stated that rain was needed very badly in his part of the state, the soil being very dry for several inches deep.

H. E. Hershey, the prominent sheep feeder, Buffalo county, Neb., had a double-deck of shorn ewes on the South Omaha market May 9 which our house sold at $6.85, averaging 102 lbs. This price was 5c per cwt higher than any other ewes made that day.

Seven dollars and twenty-five cents proved as high as any shorn sheep in full load lots brought at Chicago on May 10, and this figure was obtained by us for 415 western wethers of 101-lbs average, belonging to the Chester Farm Co., Madison, county, Ill.

Our South St. Paul house had the pleasure of handling a consignment of cattle and hogs for L. Malsam, McPherson county, S. D. Mr. Malsam stated that the crop situation looked very favorable at this time and that there would be a considerable movement of stock out of his section this fall.

J. J. Smith, Linn county, Mo., writes our East St. Louis house: "I was very much pleased with last two sales of hogs. Made more money on next to last one than any I have ever shipped, and the last load was a 'humdinger.'"

Geo. C. Shumaker, Fulton county, Ill., writes our Kansas City house: "Cattle arrived in fine shape. They are a fine lot. Every one who has seen them thinks they are good ones. To say I am pleased is puting it mildly. Thank you for your cordial treatment."

The Colorado Stock Feeding Co. of Boulder county, Colo., had three cars of Utah-fed cattle at Denver on Monday of last week which sold at $6.85 straight. This makes about 2,300 cattle that our house there has handled for the above company in the past two months.

C. Hamilton, Franklin county, Ia., was represented on the Monday cattle and hog market at Chicago with shipments to us. The cattle comprised 37 head of 1,235-lbs average at $7.55 and the hogs 65 head of 232-lbs average at $9.37½. The offerings were of his own feeding.

Nine dollars was the pinnacle for shorn lambs on the Chicago market May 9. We landed two different lots at the price, which follows: For E. C. Giddings, Larimer county, Colo., 484 head of 83-lbs average and for Frank Hershey, Buffalo county, Neb., 113 head, averaging 98 lbs.

May Crop Report Issued.

The Crop Reporting Board of the Department of Agriculture has just issued statistics giving the condition and acreage of winter wheat, percentage of spring plowing and seeding done and the condition of pastures.

Following shows figures on winter wheat for 1910, with comparisons:

	Acreage, Dec.	Loss acres.	Per cent.	Crop harvested.	Condition.	May.
1908	31,069	720	2.3	437,000	91.3	89.0

Comparisons on hay lands, pastures, spring plowing and planting on May 1:

	Hay lands.	Pastures.	Spring plowing.	Planting.

Calf Run Breaks All Records.

Marketing of calves at Chicago last week broke all records. The run totaled 18,174 head, an increase of 1,633 over the previous banner receipts received in the week ending April 23. The high price of milk has caused a great expansion in the dairy business. This is reflected in an increased proportion of steer calves here and the eastern markets and a decrease in marketing of heifer calves, dairymen endeavoring to raise more cows to increase the output of milk. Prices for calves have ruled remarkably high this year. They touched the record figure of $10.50, Clay, Robinson & Co. obtaining this price. Since then the market has taken quite a tumble. However, rates still stand around 75c higher than one year ago.

Missouri and Oklahoma Conditions.

"Owing to cold weather and heavy rains throughout Missouri," writes our East St. Louis house, "crop conditions are not the very best. Warm weather during March got farmers started to planting corn, but they were unable to finish, and there is around fifty per cent to be planted yet. Indications at this time are for a somewhat larger acreage than last year, although the next thirty days may change this. It is generally reported that about 35 per cent of the wheat has been plowed under. From a few counties, especially in the southeast and southwest sections, come complaint of damage by the Hessian fly, warm weather in March being responsible for the spread of this insect. The oat crop is in fair condition, with the acreage for 1910 at 768,518 acres, compared with 698,653 for 1909. Clover, alfalfa and timothy pastures are not in the best condition, owing to the continued cold weather.

"Grass conditions in Oklahoma are better than for years and cattle are in better marketable condition than has ever been known before at this time of year."

Representative Nebraska Cattle Feeders.

There were three highly pleased Nebraska cattle feeders on the Chicago market Monday of this week. They were F. W. Woods, E. E. Angel and M. B. Miller, all of Spencer. Our sales for them were: For F. W. Woods, 89 steers, 1,105 lbs, $7.45, 105 steers, 1,029 lbs, $7.20 and 30 steers, 896 lbs, $7.20; E. E. Angel, 39 steers, 1,233 lbs, $7.75 and M. B. Miller, 37 steers, 1,216 lbs, $7.50. All of the above cattle were branded and sold very high, considering their quality and flesh condition.

Mr. Woods is president of four banks, which follow: First National Bank, Spencer, Neb.; First National Bank, Bristow, Neb.; Gross (Neb.) State Bank and the Gregory county State Bank, Fairfax, S. D. Besides these and other extensive interests, Mr. Woods is a prominent feeder and ranchman, feeding this year 1,400 cattle and 1,200 hogs. "I am a great believer in Clay, Robinson & Co.," said Mr. Woods, "and during the past eight years have been a steady and consistent shipper to them, and at same time have always worked hard among my friends and acquaintances to get them to patronize C. R. & Co. I have always been given a square deal and treated with the greatest of courtesy, and the sales rendered by them have always been satisfactory."

Both E. E. Angel and M. B. Miller are prominent farmers and feeders and are also good friends of our firm.

NATIVE BEEF STEERS.

Range of prices and bulk of sales of native beef steers this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Range.	Bulk.

Previous week	5.50 *8.35	6.75 7.75

*Sold by Clay, Robinson & Co., top by 5c per cwt.

An unusually light supply Thursday last week, total being only 2,963. Prices were generally 10@15c higher and 25@35c up from the Monday basis. Sellers dictated terms, actual orders far exceeding offerings. Both shippers and local dressed beef men were brisk bidders. Best offerings available comprised 17 head of 1,526 lbs average at $8.25. Run Friday 1,279. Strong prices ruled, with demand very good for so late in the week. Top $8 20, we obtaining this price for 22 head of the H. B. Cobb Illinois offerings, averaging 1,395 lbs, which was 45c per cwt higher than any other firm obtained for cattle, the next highest sale being at $7.90, also secured by us for 9 head of 1,222 lbs average from the Iowa Agricultural College. The week closed with prices 25@35c higher than Monday and steady with the finish of previous week.

Marketing at start this week 14,483. This was a very meager run, but demand was also of reduced proportions. Trade had rather active tone, yet prices were merely steady. The decrease in the supply was due in main to feeders wishing to await a more stable situation in the market. It is reported that many cattle in fair flesh condition have been taken off feed and put into pasture. Choice offerings fell off in numbers from late weeks and indications are that the fed yards are now running shy of long-fed lots. A two load bunch of Nebraska beeves, averaging 1,476 and 1,525 lbs, reached $8.55. There were not many sales above $8.00, however, and trading in main was at $6.90@7.90. Supplies Tuesday 2,414. It was a steady to 10c lower deal, with rather dull undertone to the market. Demand favors the handy weight and fat classes, together with choice heavy lots, for the reason that the former are meeting with best consumptive favor and the latter are getting more scarce as the season draws on. Best beeves offered were beet pulp-fed cattle from Colorado, averaging 1,324 lbs, they going at $8.15. Good to prime grades went on a firm basis Wednesday, but other kinds lost 10@15c. Top beeves made $8.70, paid for 21 head of 1,512 lbs average. They were mostly Shorthorns and on the show order. Receipts were 18,500.

COWS AND HEIFERS.

Sellers were unable to stop buyers in their pounding tactics Thursday last week. However, bulk of offerings went merely steady. Grassy stuff, particularly dairy cows, were in very bad favor with killers, buyers claiming that they are killing out unsatisfactorily and also that they are still too high in spite of recent big declines. Scant run Friday and buyers cleared the pens in due season at steady rates. As compared with the close of previous week rates were generally 40@50c lower.

A very light supply and good demand enabled sellers to boost cow and heifer rates 15@25c on the initial market day this week. All price changes Tuesday tended towards strength. Cows of value above $6.25 sold 10c lower Wednesday, while other kinds, as well as heifers, made a strong basis. Owing to a big falling off in the demand on eastern and Kosher account, big heavy cows have met more narrow outlet and few of even the best have gone above $6.25 lately. Local buyers claim that steers costing around $7.00 are relatively much cheaper in the dressed product than cows that have been going around $6.50.

Revised quotations for all grades of cows and heifers:

BULLS

Bulls sold strong to 10c higher Thursday last week. Supply was meager and demand a little better. Steady prices prevailed Friday, but they showed 85c@$1.00 decline from previous week's finish.

Bull market rebounded with surprising force Monday of this week. A short supply and excellent call caused a 15@25c advance for most arrivals. While the demand was more quiet Tuesday, prices held about steady. A 10@15c higher deal Wednesday.

Revised quotations for all grades of bulls:

Good to choice butcher bulls	$6 00	@ 6 60
Fair to choice export bulls	6 00	6 50
Plain to medium butcher bulls	5 85	6 15
Good to choice heavy bologna bulls	5 65	5 75
Common to medium bologna bulls	5 00	5 50

CALVES.

After stoutly resisting lower bids for several hours Thursday last week sellers finally had to cede 25c before they could clear their pens. Some prime vealers reached $8.25 early, but practical top was $8.00. No quotable change in prices Friday. Decline from the close of previous week was 25@50c. The week's run at 18,174 was a record one and compared with the former banner supply of 16,541, made two weeks ago.

Anticipating a good run Tuesday and bearish conditions existing in the East, buyers demanded and secured 25@50c subtraction in rates for veal calves at the start of this week. A very poor call on Tuesday and prices ruled weaker with the previous day and 35@50c down from the corresponding day last week. Outsiders took a few fancy assorted lots at $7.75@8.00, but these were at prices 25@50c more than the local buyers would cede. Legitimate top was $7.60. Prices ruled strong to 25c higher Wednesday.

Revised quotations for all grades of calves:

Good to prime vealers	$7 25	@ 7 75
Poor to fair vealers	5 50	7 00
Good to choice heavy calves	5 00	5 50
Poor to fair heavy calves	3 50	4 75

STOCKERS AND FEEDERS.

Top price and bulk sales of stockers and feeders this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Top Feeders.	Bulk Feeders.	Bulk Stockers.
This week	$6.60	$5.50@6.10	$4.85@5.35
Previous week	6.60	5.35 5.90	4.75 5.35
Year ago	5.65	4.85 5.35	4.35 5.00

A big reduction in supplies and an improved demand from local and country sources enabled sellers to boost prices generally 10@15c over Thursday last week, all of the break early in the week being repaired. A good clearance was made of offerings in both first and second hands. A steady trade Friday, with prices not quotably changed from previous week's close.

It was generally a steady market for stockers and feeders on Monday of this week. Demand was chiefly from local buyers, who were good competitors against killers for the kinds of value above $6.00, although they were not able to get many of the weighty grades. Most of the Tuesday supply went at unchanged rates from the previous day, although plain feeders and common light stockers met poorer call. Wednesday market was steady.

Revised quotations for stocker and feeding cattle:

Good to choice feeders	$5 60	@ 6 25
Poor to medium feeders	5 00	5 50
Good to choice stockers	4 90	5 35
Plain to medium stockers	4 50	4 85
Inferior to common stockers	3 75	4 25
Good to choice stock heifers	4 65	5 00
Common to medium stock heifers	4 25	4 50
Plain to good thin young cows	4 25	4 75

Thursday of last week marketing totaled 9,693. Sellers had no trouble in making buyers do sums in addition to the extent of 10@15c at the start and after the first round or so calculations had to be made at 15@25c higher rates. There was good demand from all sources. Top $9.75, highest since April 16 and obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co. for the R H. Sewell offerings from Iowa. Trading in main was at $9.55@9.65. Marketing Friday 11,929. General market did not show any quotable change from previous day. There was an outside sale at $9.85 to speculator, but practical top was $9.75. Bulk of supplies went at $9.60@9.70. Saturday supply 12,297. Packers were in complete control and slashed rates to the extent of 15@25c. Most offerings sold at $9.35@9.45, with speculator top at $9.57½. As compared with close of previous week there was a decline of mostly 5@10c.

Supply on initial market day this week 27,244. Generally speaking prices were steady with average of last Saturday. Quality was uniformily good and offering had lots of weight. In consequence principal competition centered on hogs weighing 210 lbs down, these selling to best advantage. Local buyers were chief operators, eastern shipping outlet being very narrow on account of goodly runs in the East. Top was $9.50, obtained by us for the Sam Smith 185-lb offerings from Iowa, being 2½c per cwt higher than any other light weights made. Most arrivals went at $9.35@9.45. Run Tuesday 7.476. Opening 10@15c higher, the market closed with sales 20c up. Quality not so good and the price spread was widened, sales in main being at $9.50@9.65, with pinnacle at $9.70. Boars were discriminated against. Receipts Wednesday 19,000. Opening 10c higher than average of previous day, there was a lull in the trade, then rates ruled 5c up and the close was weak. Top $7.80 and bulk $7.60@$7.65.

Revised quotations for all grades of hogs:

*Obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co. †Paid for wooled Colorados, with top for shorn $9.10, secured by Clay, Robinson & Co.

Receipts Thursday last week 11,852. For good to choice offerings prices ruled steady, but all changes for less desirable kinds tended downward. Buyers wanted high-dressing lots and took hold of these kinds readily, but anything that did not present a desirable flesh condition were last to find outlet and the spread between them and the better kinds will be materially widened from now on. Best sheep at hand brought $7.40, paid for 109-lb shorn western wethers. Shorn lots comprised lamb arrivals and went largely at $8.60@8.90. Latter price was the limit and obtained by us for both Colorado and Michigan-fed offerings. The few spring lambs available lacked quality and best made $10. Supply Friday 4,653. There was poor demand from all sources and prices ruled steady to 10c lower, lambs going to best advantage. Top sheep $7.50, we landing 176 head of 122-lb Ohio wethers at the price, which was summit by 35c per cwt. Selling of good to extra choice lambs was largely at $8.25@8.90, latter price being limit and obtained by us for the I. C. Riddle and D. Chandler offerings from Colorado. The break from the finish of previous week was 40@60c.

On Monday of this week receipts were 11,124. There was better tone to the market. Barring high-dressing Mexican lambs, which went 10c higher, the general market did not display any quotable change. A small lot of prime 135-lb shorn ewes reached $7.75 and best wethers offered went at $7.35, while several strings of yearlings and wethers mixed landed at $7.50@8.10. Shorn lambs made up bulk of offerings and went largely at $8.50@8.85, with top at $9.00, we selling the Frank Hershey Nebraska and the E. C. Giddings Colorado offerings at this figure. Receipts Tuesday 13,236. Sheep went at a decline of mostly 10@15c. Shorn yearlings and wethers mixed brought $7.25@8.10, with shorn western wethers at $5.70@7.25, the latter price being top and obtained by us for the Chester Farm Co. offerings from Illinois. Ewes went at $5.00@7.25, those at the latter price being prime heavy natives. It was generally a firm trade in lambs, with the best lots going to a city butcher at 10c advance, prime shorn westerns making $9.10, with sales in main at $8.35@9.00. One lot of wooled Colorados brought $9.25. A small lot of 53-lb spring lambs sold at $11.50. Supply Wednesday 19,000. While good to choice lambs sold steady, less desirable lots, as well as sheep, lost 10@15c. Top shorn lambs $9.10, obtained by us. The Frank Mickan westerns from Michigan.

Pea Vines are Valuable.

In the early history of pea canning the pea vines were treated as a waste product, the disposal of which involved considerable difficulty and expense. Most commonly they were thrown out in piles to rot, the resulting manure being used for fertilizer. During recent years the pea vines have risen to dignity of a by-product, from which the factories derive considerable profit. They are now utilized for silage, or fed to stock in a fresh state or cured for hay. They make a silage superior in value to corn silage. They may be preserved in silos the same as green corn or be put up in large stacks in the open air. If these stacks are well put up and the vines are well tramped decay will only affect the surface to the depth of a few inches. The United States Government of Agriculture has recently made an extsnsive investigation of this subject and published the results in a circular. The pea vines can easily be cured by spreading them on sod land. Pea vine hay is considered better than clover hay. Both the hay and the silage are satisfactory feeds for cattle, sheep and horses. The hay sells at $3@5 a ton. In some cases the pea vines are hauled away from the factory by the farmers who supply the peas, in other cases they are sold in a fresh state and in still other cases the factories either silo the vines or cure them for hay.

Avoid Using Sisal Twine.

Farmers who keep sheep should remember that manufacturers discriminate against wool tied up with sisal binder twine. They demand that a smooth, hard twine be used, one that does not shed fibers in the wool. These fibers from the binder twine get into the wool and cannot be removed before it goes into the cloth. Cloth with such fibers in it is imperfect and must be sold at a discount. This means a heavy loss to the manufacturers and they have united in an effort to stop the practice of using such twine. Another thing to remember is that the wool buyer is buying wool, and not stones, sticks, dirt or rubbish, so when you tie up your wool see that it is all wool. Honest packing pays the best, for buyers who are fooled one season will be on the lookout the next.

Succulent Feed for Lambs.

Recent experiments at the Iowa Experiment Station show that with corn at ordinary prices cheaper gains on lambs may be made with dry feed than with roots or silage. When corn and silage are low in price the gains made with silage are a little cheaper than those made with dry feed. The largest total gains were made by the lambs getting sugar beets and the finish of this lot was also a little better. The lot getting turnips and cabbage required the largest amount of dry matter for each 100 lbs gain. Silage and dry feed came next. The least amount of dry matter was required where sugar beets and mangels were fed. The chief objection to mangels and sugar beets is the large amount of hand labor required to raise them. The results of these experiments are published in Bulletin No. 110 of the Iowa Experiment Station, which may be obtained free by writing to Director C. F. Curtiss, Iowa Experiment Station, Ames, Ia.

Send For This Book

All of our readers who are thinking of buying a carriage, wagon or set of harness in the near future ought to write to the Elkhart Carriage & Harness Mfg. Co., at Elkhart, Ind., and ask for one of their new 1910 catalogs. This company has been manufacturing vehicles and selling them direct to the user for thirty-seven years and are by far the largest manufacturers in their line doing business this way. Their success is wonderful, but it only goes to show that honest goods at honest prices are always appreciated. This firm knows how to get up a book so as to give a prospective buyer an accurate knowledge of what they have to offer. Going through their catalog is as good as a trip through their factory. Everything is illustrated with the finest half-tones, made direct from photographs. They picture each particular feature and describe it so clearly and completely that there is nothing left to the imagination. When you order a job from the Elkhart catalog, you know just what you are going to get. Besides they give you a two years' guarantee on every vehicle they sell, and a guarantee from such a company means what it says. Get one of these books before you buy elsewhere anyway.

"Cavanagh" Reprinted.

Hamlin Garland's new novel, "Cavanagh, Forest Ranger," is being reprinted this week by the Harper's. The timeliness of its subject has been increased by the introduction to "Cavanagh," written by Gifford Pinchot.

The attention of such of our readers as may need good printing at any time is directed to the advertisement of the Traders Printing Co., Chicago, appearing on page 10 of this issue. This concern is equipped to handle any class of printing from the plainest work up to the very finest color effects. They will give careful attention to all orders, small or large. Of the quality of their work it is only necessary to say that many of the finest specimens of printing issued by Clay, Robinson & Co. during the past few years have borne the "Traders" imprint. You will receive from them first-class service and a square deal.

Wool Market is Perplexing.

The wool growers have their ears to the ground. They have heard slight rumblings, but the detonations have not been frequent enough to lend them much encouragement. The buyers are on the ground, but doing very little outside of talking. It sems to be developing into who can stay in the game the longest.

Speculation is rife as to the probable price of wool. Prospective purchasers are spreading adverse reports of the market conditions. This is seasonable and should be taken with the proverbial grain of salt. They tell of quiet trade in Boston at the lowest prices of the year; of manufacturers buying only for immediate needs; of the country not having entirely recovered from the financial depression of 1908; of frequent talk of further tariff regulation. Buyers say there is no immediate relief from these conditions in sight.

Thus far the owners of wool have not weakened in their determination to not trim their asking prices to suit the ideas of the buyers. They point to the opening sales of fine merinos and fine crossbreds at par to five per cent advance in London; to low stocks of wool in Boston; to improved interest of eastern manufacturers; to increased duplicate orders for woolens; to greater employment of labor; to increased wages by many of most extensive employers in this country; to absence of strikes in most industrial lines; to the confidence of the banker in the future wool market; to storing the wool in the great warehouses at Chicago and Omaha if necessary.

Thus are the positions of the buyers and sellers revealed. There is promise of a long-drawn out game. What the outcome will be is problematical.

A few deals have been consummated. Some medium wool in Ohio has been sold at 22@23c. However, in that, as well as other fleece states, some wool is being consigned, owing to unsatisfactory bids. Transactions in Nevada and Wyoming have been the exception, and the Wool and Cotton Reporter understands some wool has been consigned at an advance of 15c. Barring consignments to brokers, buyers have been able to do very little in California or Texas. They have been more successful in Arizona and Utah, some of the better new clips in Utah being secured at 17@18c. Some deals in Oregon are reported at 16@19c. These prices are below the expectations of most western flockmasters, they anticipating 20c or better. The situation in Idaho is very quiet and likewise in Montana. William Rea, the extensive sheepman of the latter state, opines that prices will average as high as last year.

Crop Damage Report Exaggerated.

"The report is being circulated that the fields of South Dakota have been injured to the extent of 10 to 40 per cent," writes our South St. Paul house. "However, this rumor is not given credence generally, and while the wheat fields in some locations show up poorly, mainly because of inferior seed, and a certain amount of damage has been done to oats in consequence of high winds and frost, it is believed that, owing to the earliness of the season, this loss can be largely repaired by reseeding. Conditions throughout Minnesota and North Dakota seem very favorable, at least no damage has been reported. The need of rain is not urgent anywhere, but it would not be at all unwelcome in certain sections. Corn planting has been begun in some parts."

Frozen Meat Output Increases.

The total output of the meat freezing works of the world last year is estimated approximately at 501,371 tons, compared with 429,616 tons in 1908 and 415,680 tons in 1907. Of that total 488,720 tons (chilled and frozen) came to the United Kingdom and 12,651 tons went to other markets, compared with 408,030 tons and 21,586 tons respectively in 1908. The general improvement in trade throughout the country during the past three months has already resulted in freer consumption of meat. Supplies from all sources except North America are likely to increase, especially frozen mutton and lamb from Australia and New Zealand and chilled beef from the River Plate.—London Live Stock Journal.

Record Guaranty of Satisfaction.

[Breeder's Gazette.]

"Whoever ships cattle, hogs or sheep to Clay, Robinson & Co. at any of their ten h uses will get every cent they are worth, which usually means a little more than any other commission house could secure for the same shipment. This old reliable house has the facilities to give the highest class of service to all classes of shippers. Its record is a guaranty of satisfaction."

Prepare for Annual Show.

The fourth annual Show of the Northwestern Live Stock Association will be held at the Union Stock Yards at South St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 15 to 18, inclusive, 1910. This show is planned without classes for breeding animals and is designed to aid the small feeder and farmer in obtaining knowledge as to what constitutes the best types of animals for market purposes. Cattle, hogs and sheep are arranged under two main divisions: First, pure bred; second, grades and cross breds. This avoids multiplicity of classes by bringing together all the pure breds in the classes for pure breds, and all the grades and cross breds in the classes for the grades and cross breds, the champions for each class competing for the grand championship. The premium list contains liberal cash prizes from the association, and some attractive trophy cups and special prizes from others. A special prize is offered this year for amateur exhibitors who have never been in a show with their live stock.

The farmers and feeders of the Northwest can well afford to fit animals for this show, and the experience of those who have been exhibitors in the past shows a very handsome net profit as the prices at which the stock has sold, and the cash prizes won, make excellent returns for the feed consumed in fitting the animals for the show, in spite of the fact that ever since the show was started the price of feed has been high.

Clay, Robinson & Co., South St. Paul, would be glad to give every aid and information desired by prospective exhibitors of fat stock at the coming show. If you are interested, write them.

A Remarkable List of De Laval Separator Users.

In the De Laval advertisement in this issue will be found a truly remarkable list of some of the more widely known of the nearly 1,200,000 users of De Laval cream separators, and it would probably be difficult to find any other article of which a list of patrons could be produced as representative in so many spheres of business and professional prominence and containing the names of so many men well known to the public at large.

While many of them are bankers and the heads of great railroads and corporations, merchants, lawyers, editors, physicans and even actors, they are all dairy farmers as well, and it is pleasing to those of us who are dairying for a living to have the fact thus brought home to us that so many representative men who don't have to practice dairying for dollars-and-cents results nevertheless find pleasure and in many cases their chief relaxation from the cares of their various vocations in the breeding of good cows and the production of pure dairy foods.

The De Laval Company claims, and not without justification, that such a list of users as this is of important significance to every prospective buyer of a cream separator because the fact of the use of De Laval machines by most of these men reflects a thousand sources of authoritative information and experience not possessed by the ordinary purchaser, who not infrequently buys a separator simply because his local dealer happens to handle that particular kind or the claims made in some "ad" or catalogue may appeal to him.

They make the point, too, that while it is true that many of these men are not dependent on profit from their separators they want the best cream and the best butter and the most of it just the same, as well as the machine which will wear best and give the least trouble, and that they are the kind of men who are able to ascertain and command the best and be content with nothing less, in cream separator as in everything else.

There are doubtless prominent users of other makes of separators, but so far as we know this De Laval list is the most unique and widely representative that has ever been published of separators or any other implement, and the De Laval Company is certainly to be complimented upon it.

Robert H. Hazlett, president of El Dorado National Bank, El Dorado, Kan., writes: "I have used Shoo Fly Horn Paint for several years. Have dehorned cattle of all ages, in both cold and warm weather, and never had any trouble in a single case. We use it in cases of castration of calves and pigs with uniform good results."

"Harper's" for May.

Some unpublished letters of Edmund Clarence Stedman, written to his family, his friends, and newspapers with which he was connected in 1861-2, and edited by his daughter, Laura Stedman, under the title, "A Poet in War-Time," appear in Harper's Magazine for May. In this same number Robert W. Bruere, general agent of the New York Association for improving the condition of the poor, writes of that society as "The Good Samaritan, Incorporated;" Mary Heaton Vorse, in the opening article, furnished with Nordfelt etching, characterizes Tangier as "The Infidel City;" and Olivia Howard Dunbar recalls Jacques Coeur, counsellor and creditor of Charles VII, as "A Merchant Prince of the Middle Ages." There are various other strong literary and pictorial features.

USED AND SECOND HAND CARS

Some people imagine that because a car has been used it is necessarily "second hand," but this is a mistake. We have cars on our floor which have been used but which are in no sense "second hand." When we refer to a machine as being used it means just what it says—that it has had some service, perhaps as a demonstrator, and possibly a new car taken from our show room floor and used for a short time for some special service. In that event we put the car in our shops and overhaul and repaint it. It is made just as good as new, looks just as good and carries with it precisely the same guarantee, but because it has had some service the price is materially reduced. This is our loss and your gain. We have some second hand cars too (all have been thoroughly overhauled in our own shops) and each and every one of them is a bargain at the price asked. Address Dept. Vol. 20 | Chicago, Friday, May 20, 1910 | No. 20

Excellent Market for Cattle.

Not only is the cattle market a wonderful one as regards demand and prices, but is a complete surprise to even those traders who are imbued with the most bullish proclivities. Instead of having a net decrease in supply by this time from one year ago, we have a net increase of around 21,000 at the six principal markets for the year thus far. Instead of a sharp break in prices, we have a remarkably high range, choice to prime beeves being quoted at $8.00 @8.70, the highest for May since 1882, when tops reached $9.00. A perusal of the following statistics will indicate the great advance over last year, tops being $1.10@1.65 and bulk sales 70c@$1.70 higher than corresponding periods in 1909:

April 27...	$8.50	$7.00@8.00		April 28...	$6.85	$5.75@6.30
May 4.....	8.35	6.85	7.75	May 5.....	7.25	6.15	6.85
May 11...	8.70	7.10	8.10	May 12....	7.30	6.25	7.00
May 18...	8.70	7.10	8.10	May 19....	7.15	6.15	6.75

The larger receipts than anticipated only go to show that this is a large country, and it is beyond the range of possibility to make anywhere near an accurate estimate of the available supply in the feed lots. The surprisingly high prices can be attributed to the general employment of labor, a sure barometer of a brisk demand and broad outlet for beef.

Highest Cattle Sale of Season.

J. F. Rigdon of Fort Collins, Colo., on May 16 marketed a car of grade Hereford yearlings, averaging 946 lbs, through Clay, Robinson & Co. at Denver at $7.25, being extreme top for that day and the highest price cattle of that weight have made this season. This was a load of the Continental Land and Cattle Co.'s yearlings from Estelline, Tex., that were purchased by our Denver house at the Stock Show last January, at which time they averaged 630 lbs and cost $4.80. The cattle were well fattened, considering the time they were on feed, and the manner in which they were handled speaks well of Mr. Rigdon's ability as a feeder.

MISSOURI-FED CATTLE FOR WHICH CLAY, ROBINSON & CO. OBTAINED $152.85 PER HEAD AT CHICAGO.

A. D. Long, one of Missouri's famous feeders and also an extensive and successful shipper, with headquarters at Clarence, was the owner and feeder of these 32 head of 1,767-lb beeves, which Clay, Robinson & Co. sold to Armour & Co. at $8.65 on the Chicago market May 11, grossing $4,891.57. We also sold for him on the same day 36 head of 1,645 lbs average at $8.20, grossing $4,858.50. These are remarkably high prices. Notwithstanding that these cattle were somewhat discriminated against because of their age and weight, not showing up so well as those of younger age, the lot at $8.65 sold within 5c per cwt of the extreme top for the week, $8.70 being paid for prime 1,512 lbs average, and went considerably higher than any other offerings as heavy in many weeks. All of these cattle were exceptionally well fattened, reflecting the ability of Mr. Long as a feeder, and were mostly grade Shorthorns, with a few grade Angus included.

North Montana Round-Up Meeting.

Mr. William Magivinv, President of the South St. Paul Stock Yards, and the writer attended the above meeting which was held at Fort Benton, Montana, May 6 and 7. We left St. Paul on Wednesday, May 4, on the Great Northern Railway at 10 p. m. The ride through North Dakota was uneventful. When we reached Mondak, which is on the line dividing Montana and North Dakota, a gentleman in our party gave a sigh of relief saying he was glad we were in Montana, as he could irrigate to much better advantage there than in North Dakota, which is a prohibition state. We were met at the train by Mr. David G. Brown, President of the Stockmen's Nat'l Bank, and Major Thomas Cummings, Secretary and Treasurer of the North Montana Roundup Association. We were driven to the Grand Union Hotel where we met cattlemen from all parts of the country. At 2 p. m. a delegation from Great Falls numbering 250 of the prominent business men and bankers at that place arrived and the entire day was given over to sports of all kinds, including a sun dance by a band of Cree Indians dressed in their best toggery, riding wild horses, etc. A delicious lunch was served during the afternoon, prepared by one of the oldest roundup cooks in the Northwest, which was enjoyed by everyone. In the evening a minstrel show was given by home talent which was considered by all present to be the best amateur show they had ever witnessed; in fact, it only escaped being professional by a very narrow margin. The following ladies and gentlemen took part:

John C. Sullivan as Interlocutor.

"Bones"	"Tambos"
Harold Hoover	Louise Paterson
H. G. Sullivan	Leonora Paterson.
Robert F. Browne	Earl D. B. Sullivan

Harry Bjerring	Miss Julia Crane
Edward Bjerring	Miss Florence Crane
Charles Hudson	Miss Mary Sullivan
Glen King	Miss Mary Green

Orchestra.—Under direction of W. S. Towner.

Violin—N. O. Bergh	Clarionet—F. W. Kock
Cornet—W. S. Towner	Drums—E. T. Sullivan

One of the jokes propounded by a colored gentleman was to the effect that Clay, Robinson & Company were attending the meeting and had 150,000 tooth-picks with them. The colored gentleman sitting opposite asked what the tooth-picks were for and the reply was that "So everybody could have them in their mouths." This made a decided hit. Another joke was about a lady who went to a butcher shop to buy a link of sausage. When she got home she found that one end of the sausage was stuffed with bread. She went back to the butcher shop and made a complaint that she was surprised to find bread in her sausage. The butcher replied that owing to the high price of food it was very hard to make both ends meat. After the entertainment was over the floor was cleared, dancing commenced and lasted until the wee hours of the morning.

On Saturday morning the North Montana Round-Up Association meeting was called to order in the Court house with Dr. John Carroll Vice-Pres. of the association presiding in place of Mr. E. T. Broadwater of Havre, Montana, who was prevented from attending on account of important business. Hon. F. E. Stranahan gave the address of welcome which was responded to by the writer.

The report of the executive committee shows the finances of the association to be a very satisfactory condition and expressed the determination to proceed in the future along the same lines that have been found effective in the past in the protection and advancement of the members' interests. The main purposes of the association may be briefly summarized as follows: To promote harmony and effective co-operation, to prosecute cattle thieves and rustlers, to protect against all stock destroying animals and from all impositions upon the stock growing industry from any source. The committee reported that stock train service by railroads last season was much better than in some former years, but that there is still room for improvement.

W. Magivny, general manager of the South St. Paul Stock Yards Co., made a brief address in which he touched upon changed conditions and expressed his belief that more cattle will be raised in Montana under the new system than in the days of the open range. D. W. Raymond, secretary of the State Board of Live Stock Commissioners, also addressed the meeting. He stated that Montana shipped 255,000 cattle last year and sold 17,000 locally. The next annual meeting will be held at Chinook.

The meeting was a great success and well attended, all the "old guard" being present. The chairman appointed the following:

Committee on Membership	Committee on Nominations
Dudley Jones	C. W. Price
Malcolm Marrow, Sr.	Chas. H. Green
P. W. Davidson	Dan. C. Kyle

Committee on Resolutions
David G. Brown
Louis E. Kaufman
James Townsend

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Dr. John B. Carroll, Fort Benton, Montana.

Vice-President—Dan. C. Kyle of Saco.

Secretary and Treasurer—Maj. Thomas A. Cummings, Fort Benton.

Executive Committee for the Ensuing Year

David G. Brown	M. E. Milner
James Townsend	Norval Wallace.
John Harris	John Survant
Simon Pepin	P. A. Cummings
Dan. C. Kyle	C. W. Price
L. E. Kaufman	John P. Murphy
C. H. Austin	P. W. Davidson
A. W. Kingsbury	Thomas Couch, Jr.
G. W. Frields	M. Marrow, Sr.
J. B. Carroll	C. H. Green
J. E. Marcum	C. J. McNamara.

Dudley Jones

Hon. M. E. Milner, who has always been a hard worker in behalf of the above association, could not be present on account of sickness. Mr. Edward Broadwater, Mr. Simon Pepin and Mr. Edward Egan of Osseo also could not be present and all were greatly missed. All the railroads were represented by their hustling stock agents and taken altogether the entire meeting was pronounced a successful one.

The town of Fort Benton is most beautifully-located, being on the bank of the Big Missouri, which stream at that point is more like a mountain stream in Switzerland, flows rapidly and is quite clear, as different as day from night compared to what it is at Omaha or Kansas City, where it is very muddy and dreary looking. The main street of the town parallels the river. One of the leading hotels is situated on the left bank of the river and presents a most beautiful appearance both day and night. The stores are strictly up-to-date. The Stockmen's Nat'l Bank of which our worthy friend Mr. David G. Brown is the president, is one of the strongest in the State of Montana and we were given to understand by some of its clients that it had never gone back on any of its customers who were worthy of credit.

By courtesy of the River Press Publishing Co. of Fort Benton, we are enabled to reproduce the accompanying interesting picture of Fort Benton in 1846, made from an old drawing, which gives a pretty good idea of frontier life in early days. The old fort, ruins of which may still be seen, was once the strongest trading post in the entire Northwest. This was during the days of the American Fur Co. and also the succeeding period when the gold hunters passed that way en route from the East to the mountains of Montana, Washington, Idaho and British Columbia. Many steamboats then plied the waters of the Mississippi and unloaded their merchandise at Fort Benton, which was at the head of navigation. It was a busy and important trading center long before Denver, Kansas City or Omaha were thought of. In 1869 the fort was taken over by the Government and occupied by troops until 1875, at which time it was finally abandoned as an army post. Senator T. C. Power and Hon. W. G. Conrad both did a tremendous business in old days. Mr. W. G. Conrad and D. G. Brown informed the writer that they sent freight teams 600 to 800 miles into Canada from the above point. We also understood Mr. Conrad and others to say that they had made many trips on a steamer from Fort Benton to St. Louis and vice versa.

The population at Fort Benton at the present is about 1,000 people. This is most surprising as it is situated in the heart of one of the best cattle and sheep countries in Montana, and judging from the way the people are flocking to Montana at the present, it looks as though Fort Benton will in the course of five years have a population of something like 5,000 people. All you can hear in that section of the country just now is dry farming, and talk about the different large cattle companies closing out their herds, also the disbanding of the Association. The writer in his speech suggested the advisability of the Association holding together, pointing out the fact that it would be mutually beneficial to every stockman in the country whether he owned one animal or 1,000. Also that if a matter of importance came up one man could do nothing, whereas a committee representing an Association of such as the above would gain their point in any reasonable contest.

When we left Fort Benton on Monday, May 9th, we saw smoke in the distance and thought it was the fast mail coming over the hills. When we approached a little nearer, we found it was a tremendous steam plow breaking up prairie at a rate that would make an ordinary plow look like thirty cents. It is very hard for people to realize the tremendous resources of Montana. We had many instances last fall where the best grass cattle sold at $7.50, a single grade Hereford grass steer sold at $8.25 and Shorthorn grass yearlings that weighed but 930 lbs sold at 8c per lb, and both animals when dressed were just as good as if they had been fed corn. There is no reason why cattlemen cannot continue in the business as they can cut their herds down so that they can be fed in the winter and grazed during the summer. This spring we sold several loads of grade Hereford steers that had been wintered on alfalfa on the open market for feeders at $7.10@7.30.

We spent two days in Helena, putting up at the Montana Club which, like the Miles City Club, is a haven for the weary traveler. Too much credit cannot be given the ladies who entertained during the cattle meeting. In the language of the poet, "One touch of Nature makes the whole world kin." It is a pleasure to mingle for a few days with such men as represent the stock growing industry and kindred interests of Montana. —C. O. R.

No Bear Campaign in Hog Market.

Surface indications warrant belief that packers have utterly abandoned, for the time being at least, any thought of an aggressive or successful bear campaign in the hog market. Four weeks ago last Monday on a run of 38,781 they started out to take off 25@35c, being willing to buy the crop on a $9.50 basis. Anxiety to accept the price on the part of sellers opened the eyes of buyers and, meeting so little resistance, bids were lowered still more, resulting in a selling panic, which carried the market down to $9.10@9.15 at the close, a loss of 75c per cwt from prices prevailing the preceding market day. Further recession of 10@15c was enforced the following day, but there the decline was checked. Producers resented the break and padlocked their gates, with result that values steadily climbed from a pinnacle of $9.15 and bulk around $9.00 on Tuesday, April 19, to a top of $9.85 and bulk $9.70, Saturday, May 14.

Since the opening of the present month it has been apparent to close observers that hogs were considered "worth the money" in slaughtering circles. Effort was made as usual to create a "bear" atmosphere and disguise the real situation, but it was noticeable to shrewd operators that all packers were anxious for their full share of each day's receipts and were keeping close tab on one another. Small independent packers, idle for some weeks, also came to life and contended for a share of the run. The arch bear, Armour, put on a bear front, lagging until late each day, but when the dilatoriness resulted in getting "left" twice last week he pulled off a stunt Friday morning that set the trade by the ears. His head buyers stopped in the lobby of the exchange building to entertain operators for other packing houses, while the Armour "second" buyers were in the alleys picking up the hogs as fast as they could get to them.

Monday of this week, with the largest run since February, approximately 39,000 hogs, market was 15@20c lower, 'tis true, but closed at the high point of the day, with practically everything sold. Tuesday, with a run of 12,000, more than half the Monday decline was recovered, putting rates back to within 5c of the high point of the month.

Advices indicate a light supply of hogs for the summer months. As forecasted in these pages weeks since, the May and June run will show 30 to 40 per cent shortage from a year ago. Evidence accumulates that the packers in laying in a supply of pork products now are preparing for a high summer market. Fearful that repetition may become wearisome, we nevertheless make bold to again advise: Keep matured hogs coming to market, but take good care of the pigs, shoats and brood sows and thus fatten your bank account both now and in the future.

Letting the Other Fellow Raise Cattle.

Three hundred farmers and stockmen from the central west were recently asked what they had to say about live stock conditions and prospects. Most of them reported the hog crop short, but everybody interested in getting brood sows rearing and caring for pigs so that something approaching a fair supply of swine might be expected in the next year or two. All agreed that sheep had been very profitable to those who had handled them, but the difficulty of getting raw material in the way of feeding sheep and lambs had been and was the big problem. Not one among the 300 but said there was either no interest or a decreasing interest in growing and feeding cattle. Nearly all agreed that those who wanted cattle to feed were disposed to let the man "out West" do it. Most of them admitted that "out West" where thin steers were formerly produced in tens of thousands was rapidly going under ditches or dry farming and getting out of the cattle producing business. Many of them reported increasing interest in dairy stock with a disposition to knock the calves in the head at birth or sell them for young veal. Nearly all of them said the high prices for cattle had induced close marketing of much stock that ordinarily would be held for reproduction. Every farmer was reported to be imbued with the "save and sell the corn" idea. Not one of the 300 men interviewed but said there was more old corn and other feed than a year ago. One Iowa man with 12,000 bushels himself said it was not good enough to carry over safely and that he wished he had sold or fed it last winter. Not one of these men but admitted that he did not know of an 80 acre farm where the owner couldn't keep two to five head more of cows on what is now going to waste. Nearly all agreed that if everybody continued to quit cattle and go to selling corn that prices for the latter would naturally be heavily cut in there is a crop failure and land values wi Many of them complained that the packer butchers were not only punishing producers of good cattle by paying less dollars than they would have yielded before so much corn was put into them, but were discouraging further operations on the part of feeders by paying 50c@$1.00 per cwt more for thin cattle to slaughter than feeders could afford to pay. A majority also thought that the present year's rather surprising increase of cattle marketing over last year is caused by a desire to quit and are evidence not so much of present plenty as future scarcity. So it looks, does it not, as if those who wisely prepared for keeping constantly in the cattle business would be in better position to profitably employ and conserve all the production possibilities of the farm than by following sheep-like the crowd that wants to "let the other fellow raise the cattle."—Live Stock World.

Future Supply of Live Stock.

Frank E. Reynolds live stock agent of the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad Co., with headquarters at Indianapolis, Ind., writes Clay, Robinson & Co., in part: "I am taking the liberty to write you for information concerning the future prospect for supply of live stock in Illinois and Indiana, also throughout the country in general. You keep yourselves so well posted on live stock matters in general that I thought you might be able to furnish me something suitable for the occasion referred to. I get the REPORT regularly and it is read by a good many stockmen who visit this office, as well as myself."

Replying to the above Clay, Robinson & Co. wrote Mr. Reynolds as follows: "The present stock of cattle in Illinois, Indiana and contiguous territory undoubtedly is lighter than a year ago and considerably below normal supplies, while as concerns hogs there is a very sharp reduction in both marketable and young stuff. However, there is a tremendous demand at the present time for breeding stuff and we look to see the supplies of both cattle and hogs make material increases in the next year or two. Until of course we have material enlargement in the numbers of live stock in this and other states prices will undoubtedly continue upon a more or less high plane."

Big Crop of Range Lambs.

W. E. Miner of Greeley, Colo., who marketed the last of his lambs at Chicago last Friday, said: "The lamb feeding business in Colorado is full of some surprising vicissitudes, and while this year turned out all right, there is no telling what may develop next year. Feeding stock put in this season cost very high and feed was high, which made a combination which would have lost owners a barrel of money if it had not been for the fortunate circumstances of market prices being at such a high level. I hear that the lamb crop is very heavy in the range country, in many sections running over 100 per cent. The weather for lambing has been fine up to date. Looks like there would be plenty of feeding material available, but sheep growers are bullish and they will likely ask prohibitive prices for their feeders next fall. All things considered, it looks to me that it will be a good time to buy fchadid. m.douv.ofe.v will be a good time for the feeder buyer to be very conservative."

Mr. Miner fed and marketed 3,200 lambs through Clay, Robinson & Co. at Chicago this season, and the great bulk of his offerings topped the market on the days they were sold, the last of his feeding going at $9.05, within 10c per cwt of the limit for prime offerings that day. There are no better feeders than "Billy," as he is so well known by his many friends, and is a prince of good fellows. He remarked that he highly appreciated the superior service rendered him by Clay, Robinson & Co. this season, as well as in past years.

Argentine's Corn Crop Loss.

The corn crop of the Argentine this year is officially placed at 164,000,000 bushels, against 168,000,000 bushels last year and 136,057,000 bushels in 1907-8. The acreage under corn last year amounted to 7,248,600 acres. The amount of corn exported last season amounted to 87,085,000 bushels and 66,158,000 bushels the previous season.

NATIVE BEEF STEERS.

Range of prices and bulk of sales of native beef steers this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Range.		Bulk.
This week	$5.50	*8.70	$7.10@	8.10
Previous week	5.75	8.70	7.00	8.10
Year ago	4.80	6.95	5.60	6.60
Two years ago	4.50	7.25	6.00	7.00

*Obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co., being 10c per cwt higher than any other firm secured for the week.

Receipts Thursday of last week 5,215. Bulk business transacted on a steady basis. Top $8.35, paid for 63 head of 1,515 lbs average. Friday run 1,354. Supply was soon cleared at unchanged rates. Best offerings comprised 18 head of 1,277 lbs average at $7.50. As compared with the close of last week the best grades of cattle showed a firm price basis and others indicated 10@15c loss.

While receipts of 21,484 cattle Monday of this week were not excessive, buyers experienced no trouble in obtaining the big end of the offerings at 10c lower prices. The only exception was the choice to prime offerings which went steady. The half-fat and coarse, heavy grades, including yearlings half to two-thirds fat, met with dull demand. The summit was $8.60, paid for 37 head of prime 1,513 lbs average from Iowa. Bulk sales at $7.10@8.10. Arrivals Tuesday 2,261. Market slow but about steady. Best offered averaged 1,275 lbs and went at $7.60. Run Wednesday 17,000. A very uneven trade. While good to prime kinds went strong to 10c higher, medium classes sold steady to strong and common and plain lots weak to 10c lower. Top was $8.70, obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co. for 17 head of grade Hereford branded westerns of 1,510 lbs average from the Jacob Weiss & Sons feed lot in Iowa. The next highest price was $8.60, also secured by Clay Robinson & Co. for 17 head of 1,467-lb grade Angus offerings from Iowa, this sale being 10c per cwt higher than any other firm made.

COWS AND HEIFERS.

Generally a 10c decline Thursday of last week. An extra choice class of 826-lb heifers brought $7.25. No price changes were noticed on Friday. The decline from the previous week's close was 40@50c.

On Monday prices were generally 15c lower. Trade lacked life most of the day. In spite of the short supplies the market was barely steady Tuesday. Grassy stuff from Wisconsin showed up in fair numbers and these were the meanest sellers. More active trade Wednesday, although rates were not quotably higher.

CALVES.

Prices Thursday of last week broke 50@60c from the Tuesday range. On Friday buyers' pounding tactics ceased, rates being generally 75c under the previous week's close.

In spite of the moderate run Monday weaker prices were in force for most offerings, the poor situation in the eastern trade having a bearish influence. Top to packers was $7.25. It was a steady deal Tuesday and while one prime lot went to an outsider at $7.40, packers would not go above $7.25. Market was mostly 25c up Wednesday.

Steady prices prevailed Thursday of last week. No change was noted on Friday. The supply in both first and second hands was well thinned out. The advance over the previous week's close was 10@15c.

A 10@15c lower deal for stockers and feeders Monday, with some of plainer kinds going 25c down. Demand from all sources was dull. Weak trade Tuesday. The narrow outlet is accredited to dry pastures in some parts of the country and to farmers being busy planting corn. Steady rates prevailed Wednesday, although there was no marked improvement in the demand.

Marketing Thursday 12,004. While it was a 10@20c lower deal in sheep, lambs held about steady. Top sheep $7.35, paid for fancy 95-lb shorn western wethers and summit on shorn lambs was $9.05, with a string of wooled Colorado lambs at $9.40. Friday run 5,479. The better grades of lambs went strong to 10c higher, other kinds, as well as sheep, going steady. Best sheep offered at $6.75 and top lambs $9.15, with wooled Colorados at $9.25. A lot of 50-lb spring lambs brought $9.75. As compared with the close of the previous week sheep declined 50@65c. On the other hand the best lambs were generally 25c higher and the plainer kinds about steady.

Receipts Monday 20,598. Prices were mostly 25c lower all around. There was a liberal run in the East and this eliminated eastern shippers from the market and enabled the local packers to dictate terms. While some prime shorn heavy native ewes reached $6.75, limit for western wethers was $6.60. The first grass sheep of the season showed up. They were California yearlings, heavy hided and anything but fat. Around 500 of them, averaging 86 lbs, brought $6.50. A small lot of wooled Colorado lambs brought $9.10 and summit for shorn lambs was $8.90, both sales being made by us, the latter price being pinnacle by 5c per cwt. Most of the spring lambs went at $9.00@9.50. Marketing Tuesday 14,603. While a good many sheep sold 10@15c lower, the lambs brought steady rates. The best shorn sheep went at $6.25, although some two year olds, averaging 87 lbs, reached $6.75, against $7.35 last Thursday. Summit for shorn lambs was $8.90, this price being obtained by us and 5c per cwt higher than any others brought. Marketing Wednesday 15,000. The best handy weight, high dressing lambs went 10c higher Wednesday, but other kinds, as well as sheep, were merely steady sale.

Sheep Supply Surprisingly Liberal.

The way the markets are being supplied with sheep and lambs it seems that the feed lots are not bare. Colorado manages to keep the western markets amply supplied with lambs and sheep brought in from Montana for a finish are more than filling trade requirements at Chicago. Indiana, Ohio and Michigan have not liquidated, this being indicated by the liberal runs at Pittsburg and East Buffalo from those states. The high market of a month ago was an inducement to put many sheep on feed late and caused many lamb feeders to overstay a good market. Result has been a sharp drop in the price range. The class of wethers that are going at $6.25 now are similar to those that made $8.35 on the high spot in April and the lambs that are selling at $8.85 are just as good as those at $9.80 at that time. It will be a few weeks yet before the feed lot supply is out of the way. The May run both in the East and the West promises to be far larger than anyone anticipated.

Texas Cattle at $6.50 to $7.50.

Monday of this week the first Texas cattle offered on the Chicago market this season were here. There were twenty-seven carloads of cake-fed steers. They met a good demand and sold at $6.50@7.50, bulk going upwards of $7.00, being around $1.00 higher than May arrivals of one year ago. It is stated that in many parts of North Texas about the usual number were fed and that they would be marketed freely from now on, as grass is getting short, no good rains having fallen since early last month. Fort Worth, East St. Louis and Kansas City have been receiving cake-fed cattle for several weeks and buyers have shown them good favor.

Grass Offerings are Moving.

Grass stock is beginning to show up at the markets. This, is always a sure sign of a readjusting of prices, and a widening out of the range. This class of offerings when showing much effects from green feed "kills" out with a big shrink, and buyers generally shrink the price before purchasing them. The season is advanced and the run of grassers will come sooner than usual. In fact, some cows have made their appearance already, as have native sheep, and they are being discriminated against by the buyers. Texas beef is being forwarded from the River markets. Next will come grassy light hogs and sows. These will also meet with the seasonable price adjusting process.

Spring Lambs Lack Quality.

A sprinkling of spring lambs are coming. Louisville and East St. Louis are getting a few from Tennessee, Chicago some from Illinois and Kansas City a limited number from Arizona. However, quality is lacking, and there is very narrow outlet for anything grading below good. There is no doubt that the crop is behind schedule. This is fortunate for the owners, for had the lambs arrived at market early as usual there would have been a bad smash-up in prices, owing to the belated run of fed lambs and the slump in the veal calf market. With the feed lot stuff out of the way spring lambs will meet with a better reception. Prevailing prices are good, being 25@50c higher than one year ago, although showing around $3.00 decline from the start of this season.

Wool Market Notes.

Good wool should not be sacrificed, as stocks of this class are low.

Considerable wool, it is said, is being consigned to Chicago and Boston.

Shearing is quite general, except in the far northern sections of the country. As yet there have been few deals reported.

The foreign wool market continues strong. Buyers are taking hold readily at firm prices. This is encouraging for the trade in the domestic clips.

Wool buyers are not so numerous, in Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa, and readjustment on a lower price basis have been made by buyers at recent meetings.

Two million sheep are being sheared in Utah. The clip is between 12,000,000 and 14,000,000 lbs. Most of it, according to reports, was contracted for last fall at 18@22c per lb.

"The wool market is not as bad as some would have us believe," comments the Wool and Cotton Reporter. "It begins to look as if the best bargains in most wools have been disposed of."

Manufacturers are buying wool on the hand-to-mouth order. However, they are showing more interest and would doubtless buy liberally were it not for the muddled condition of the goods market.

"We believe that the bottom has been touched on wool prices," say Silberman Bros. of Chicago. "Ultimately higher prices will ensue. We base our belief on the fact that for nearly five months the mills of the country have bought but little wool and having been well employed during this period must necessarily be by this time somewhat short on raw material."

Good Lambing in Colorado.

L. H. Kephart of Holly, Colo., who is marketing a string of good lambs through our Kansas City house, is one of the most successful sheep feeders in the Arkansas Valley. He established himself in the sheep business there eleven years ago. The past winter he fed about 2,000, and in all the years that he has been feeding there he has never made a better showing in feeding or in profits, than he did on these sheep. "We all made money this time," he said. "And everything seems to be favoring us now for the coming season. About all the fed sheep are in. Now very naturally attention is being turned to the range sheep, and the lambing, which is now in progress. I have been raising my own lambs. I have at present on the range 1,800 head of breeding ewes. I had them arranged in two lots in lambing, one lot following the other. The first lot is well along in lambing now, and so far I have saved 100 per cent of the lambs, which is a very high per cent. To save 90 per cent is good, and anything above that is extra good. But the ewes are in good condition, and then what is still better the weather has been favorable, while the grass is good on the range. My case is no exception to the rule, I believe, as good reports have been coming in from other sheepmen, who have breeding ewes."

"Finest I Ever Bought."

A. G. Rothernel, Burks county, Pa., writes our East Buffalo house: "On Nov. 29 I bought through Clay, Robinson & Co. at Chicago 25 steers at $4.50, weighing 22,850 lbs. I fed them 4½ months and sold them on April 18 at $7.50, weighing 29,100 lbs. They made a good gain and were all Herefords. People of this community admired them considerably. I have been feeding cattle for the past thirteen years and this was the finest lot I ever bought and first I ever purchased in Chicago. Clay, Robinson & Co. have done great work for me. M. V. Bastian of the firm of Arbogast & Bastian, Allerton, Pa., visited my place to buy the cattle and in less than half an hour the cattle were sold to him. He was highly pleased with them. I am a great reader of your REPORT.

Scale Manufacturer Likes "Report."

George B. Oldham, vice president of the Dayton Pitless Scale Co., Dayton, Ohio, writes us under date of May 4: "You will find enclosed 50c for the REPORT, the best periodical of the kind published at any price. It is worth many times more than it costs. I read it with great satisfaction and feel that I could not very well do without it."

Kind of Brood Sow.

Serenity, undisturbed by fretful restlessness, are characteristics of a good brood sow. Any breeder of experience will know just what is meant when it is said that a sow is "motherly," but the exact meaning is difficult to set down in words. This maternal manifestation has an important bearing on success with a litter, and the dam's promise in this regard should have weight in her purchase. In making a selection the teats should be examined to discover that there are a dozen, well formed, not too small or obscure, and giving indications of supplying abundant milk.—From Coburn's 'Swine in America'"

"Like Letter from Home."

W. D. Blattenberg, Warren county, Ia., (formerly of Blattenberg Bros., Freeland, Wyo., sends us $1.00 for two years' subscription to the REPORT and writes: "I have been receiving copies of your paper for some time. They are like letters from home. I am not shipping anything now, but remember past service."

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

Friday last week A. Swenson, Cass county, N. D., had a load of cattle and hogs mixed to our South St. Paul house.

R. A. Chace, Morgan county, Colo., was on the Denver market last week with a shipment of ewes and lambs to our house.

C. Hughes, Gage county, Neb., was on the Kansas City market May 10 with two cars of steers which our house sold at $7.80.

Mitchell county, Kan., furnished some $7.00 heifers from the pens of H. Deneke May 10. They were sold by our Kansas City house.

T. E. Roberts, Johnson county, Neb., had a string of light steers and heifers mixed to our Kansas City house May 10 that made $7.00.

Gebhard & Son, Otero county, Colo., among the largest feeders of cattle in that state, Tuesday of last week had 175 head to our Kansas City house.

On May 11 our South St. Joseph house sold for John Kienkerman, Bent county, Colo., two double decks of 67-lb lambs at $8.90, topping the market.

Bartlett & McKissick, who fed quite extensively in Boulder county, Colo., last winter, had a two-car shipment to our Denver house Thursday last week.

A usual weekly patron of our South St. Paul house, John R. Jones, Richland county, N. D., had a car of cattle, hogs and sheep mixed there Friday of last week.

S. Sechrist & Sons, extensive merchants and cattlemen, Riley county, Kan., on Tuesday of last week had another shipment of their cattle to our Kansas City house.

C. H. Butler, Marshall county, Kan., whose farms and feeds on an extentive scale, had some heavy steers to our Kansas City house May 10 which landed at $8.00.

Wm. E. Abbott, Linn county, Kan., well known as a feeder and shipper, was on the Kansas City market May 11 with a shipment of 178 beef steers to our house.

Seven dollars and seventy five cents was the figure realized May 10 by our Kansas City house for a car of steers marketed by J. M. Franke, Brown county, Kan.

Greene county, Mo., was represented on the Kansas City cattle trade Wednesday of last week in the person of R. J. Perryman, who had a consignment of feeder steers to our firm.

L. Morgan, Hennepin county, Minn., prominent butcher, had a load of hogs to our South St. Paul house Friday last week and expressed himself as being well pleased with the results.

Willis O. Wing, Champaign county, Ohio, an expert farmer and successful feeder: "I want to thank you for the way you have kept me posted on the Chicago and Buffalo markets."

Carter & McFadden, Jasper county, Mo., one of the largest live stock shipping firms in Southwestern Missouri, had both cattle and hogs to our firm at Kansas City Tuesday of last week.

W. A. Miner, Weld county, Colo., who is one of the noted feeders of that state, marketed 549 shorn lambs of 76 lbs average on the May 12 market and we secured the top price of $9.05 for them.

E.W. Henderson, an enterprising farmer and stockman, Brown county, S. D., helped swell the sheep receipts at South St. Paul on Friday last week and we had the pleasure of handling the consignment.

S. D. Vance, Hancock county, Ill.: "Account sales for car of cattle at hand and I find same correct and satisfactory. These cattle were on full feed only sixty days and I think $7.40 a very good price."

Kinney & Graves had in from Colfax county, Neb., on May 12 a string of 945 shorn yearlings and wethers mixed, averaging 93 lbs, and we landed them at $7.35, summit for that class of offerings.

F. R. Hesly, a good feeder and buyer of cattle, marketed from Pottawattamie county, Ia., Thursday last week 35 branded western steers of 1,221 lbs average, we landing them at the pleasing price of $7.85.

Our South St. Joseph house May 12 sold for C. M. Stitt, Morgan county, Colo., 513 Mexican wooled lambs at $9.00, top for week on that class. Mr. Stitt accompanied the shipment and was greatly pleased.

F. Keith, Monroe county, Mo.: "There is little fat stock of any kind in this section. Corn prospect is poor, most having to be replanted. Your REPORT is a great paper. I told one of our neighbors, who is quite a stockman, about the paper and enclose herewith his subscription."

S. Cortez, Union county, N. M., was on the Denver market Tuesday last week with a shipment of steers which had been fed hay and cottonseed cake. They averaged 1,020 lbs and were sold by us for $6.25 straight.

George Leigh, Kane county, Ill.: "It looks to me that $7.75 for practically a straight load of heifers on a really declining market was more than I had hoped for. Another load will will follow in a few days. Thank you."

Gustafson & Isaacson, Kandiyohi county, Minn., frequent patrons of the South St. Paul market, were represented there Tuesday of last week with a consignment of cattle and hogs, which we had the pleasure of handling.

Our Denver house handled Thursday last week hogs for the following well known shippers: J. R. Porter, Dundy county, Neb.; Kilpatrick Bros., Chase county, Neb.; A. T. Shull, Logan county, Colo.; G. W. Hinman, Weld county, Colo.

Monday last week our Denver house had the pleasure of handling shipments for the following well-known cattle feeders of Colorado: C. R. Evans and H. R. Mitchell, Larimer county; L. C. Grant, Pueblo county; Walker & McCaslin, Boulder county; W. C. Stiles, Larimer county.

W. H. KUNKLE OF PERU, IND.

Mr. Kunkle was at Chicago May 11 with cattle and we had our staff photographer take a snapshot of him. There were 17 grade Angus steers in the shipment, averaging 1,416 lbs, and we landed them at $8.40. He bought them at $6.00, tipping the beam at 1,220 lbs, and they were fed about eight months. "I was surely delighted with the sale," remarked Mr. Kunkle, "for $8.25 was all that I expected." We are proud to say that he has shipped to us for fourteen years. Mr. Kunkle is prominent in farming and feeding circles and owns 1,000 acres of farming land worth $125@150 an acre. He farms 420 acres himself and the balance is tended by his six sons, each of whom is a "chip off the old block."

Belt & Hamilton, Carroll county, Mo., were represented on the East St. Louis market Thursday of last week with 73 beef steers of 1,152 lbs average which we sold at $7.15. These cattle were branded, of common to fair quality and half fat.

Henry county, Ia., was represented on the cattle market Wednesday of last week by Miller Bros. with 17 beef steers of 1,350 lbs average, we selling them at $7.90. We are proud to list Miller Bros. as our staunch friends and steady patrons.

I. W. Seaman, prominent in South Dakota live stock and business circles, had in from Davidson county Thursday last week a string of cattle which we sold at $7.35@7.60. We have had the honor of handling his shipments for many years.

A. L. Duncan, Mercer county, Ill., who is one of our valued friends and steady patrons, brought in 33 head of 1,420-lb beeves Wednesday of last week and we sold them at $7.90. Mr. Duncan is one of Illinois most prominent and pioneer feeders. His son, L. G. Duncan, of the same place had in 20 steers of 1,274 lbs average which we sold at $7.75. He is also a prominent feeder.

P. A. Johnson, Kandiyohi county, Minn., one of our frequent and valued customers at South St. Paul, and who acts as shipper for the farmers in his section, was represented on the market May 13 with two cars of stock, the hogs making the top figure of $9.30.

Seven dollars and eighty cents and seven dollars and fifty-five cents were the prices obtained by our Kansas City house May 10 for yearling steers and yearling steers and heifers mixed respectively, both being the top for their classes. H. A. Knight, Dickinson county, Kan., shipped them.

D. J. Cooper, Bent county, Colo., was on the South St. Joseph market Thursday of last week with two cars of shorn lambs, averaging 76 lbs, which our house sold at $8.75. This shipment was a clean-up of Mr. Cooper's feeding this year. He expressed himself as decidedly well satisfied with the sale.

Our South St. Joseph house sold May 10 for J. W. Higgins & Son, Mitchell county, Kan., 259 lambs, averaging 64 lbs, at $8.70. Higgins & Son are prominent feeders and business men of the Sunflower state, J. W. Higgins, Sr., also being one of the leading bankers, while his son is mayor of Cawker City.

E. C. Giddings, Larimer county, Colo., an excellent feeder and who has frequently topped the market through our house this season, had in 476 head of his 86-lb shorn lambs on May 12, we again landing them at the summit—$9.00. On the same day we obtained this price for 546 head of 76 lbs average, belonging to W. A. Miner, Weld county, Colo.

Well-known Indiana stockmen who were represented on the East Buffalo market Monday last week with shipments that were handled by us: C. J. Schumacher, Blackford county; Gossett & Harris, Madison county; Zimmerman & Walters, Lagrange county; Deihl & Fetcher, Wells county; L. F. Hill, Randolph county; Levi J. Keiser, Whitley county.

Hamilton county, Neb., shippers to the South Omaha market Wednesday of last week included a part of a car of very good steers from L. M. P. Jensen at $7.60, averaging 1,279 lbs; one car from J. M. Shaneyfelt, a regular buyer, at $7.50, averaging 1,194 lbs, and one car from J. H. Fenster at $7.45, averaging 1,270 lbs. All of the shipments were handled by us.

The Elkhorn Valley Land and Cattle Co., Boyd county, one of the most extensive ranching and feeding firms in Nebraska, marketed 119 head of 1,163-lb beef steers Wednesday of last week, we selling them at $7.40. At the start of this week they also had us sell 17 more, averaging 1,165 lbs at $7.45, making the fourth big shipment to us from them the past three weeks.

On May 9 our South St. Joseph house landed three double decks of Mexican lambs, averaging 76 lbs, at top price of $9.00 for Coleman & Kreeker, Larimer county, Colo. Mr. Coleman is one of the veteran Colorado feeders for whom we have been selling many years. Mr. Kreeker accompanied this shipment and expressed himself as decidedly well pleased with the sale.

The 18 head head of 1,254-lb beef steers which made $8.00 at East Buffalo on Monday of last week were handled by us and marketed by C. F. Harsh, Delaware county, Ohio. After going around the Yards Mr. Harsh compared his sale with others and expressed himself as being highly pleased, and said that he did not believe there were any other sales on that day to equal his.

Colt & Sons, Bent county, Colo., had at South St. Joseph May 10 a double deck of 60-lb lambs which our house landed at $8.70. Colt & Sons are among the largest feeders in the Arkansas Valley and since January but few weeks have passed without our having the pleasure of handling a shipment from them, our sales of their ewes, yearlings and lambs as a rule being among the market toppers.

Lewis Mariman, Bent county, Colo., one of the extensive feeders of the Arkansas Valley, had May 10 at South St. Joseph 237 Mexican lambs, averaging 73 lbs, which our house sold at $9.00, pinnacle that week. John Kinsman of the same place brought in a double deck of light lambs for which we obtained $8.90, top for their class. Mr. Kinsman says it requires Clay, Robinson & Co.'s service to satisfy him.

Taylor Fouts, Carroll county, Ind., was on the market Wednesday of last week with both cattle and hogs. The former shipment included 25 heifers of 826 lbs average that topped the market by 25c per cwt, going at $7.25, and the latter comprised 19 swine, averaging 201 lbs, at $9.60. We sold both lots. The next best price that day for heifers was $7.00, which we also obtained for 79 head of 773 and 785 lbs average, these being marketed from Nebraska.

FOR SECURITY

For the future security and protection of the family and dependent ones, the wise provider carries life insurance. To insure future individual comfort and freedom from want, the provident man every month puts aside from his earnings something for the "rainy day." For present security the prudent man protects his home and property by buying fire insurance. Many men, who exercise all prudence in these particulars, are not so careful in the protection of their every-day business and financial interests. The feeder or shipper of cattle, hogs and sheep who exercises good judgment selects a commission firm that is in every way dependable and reliable—the firm that has the most perfect organization, the best salesmen and, above all, unquestioned financial standing and responsibility. Clay, Robinson & Co. have the organization and the salesmen. Their financial standing and responsibility are beyond question. Any bank, banker or commercial agency will thus certify to you. Are you interested? If so, inquire about us and consign to us next time.

J. H. Thomas, Lake county, S. D., had a load of stock cattle to our Sioux City house Monday of last week, and said: "Well, last time I was here I got more than I expected, and this time they brought 10c per cwt more than I looked for."

Curry & Maloomson, representative live stock dealers, had in from Schuyler county, Ill., on Tuesday three loads of hogs for which we obtained very satisfactory prices. We landed one load of their butchers at $9.75, top for such offerings.

Phil Most, Cedar county, Neb., one of the biggest feeders in that section, had three loads of cattle to our Sioux City house Monday of last week. He said in the twenty years he has been in the business he never received such a high price for cattle.

Geo. French, Will county, Ill., who had shipped to another firm for fifteen years, made his initial shipment to us Thursday last week and he was delighted with the service rendered him, and we are safe in saying he will be found on our roster again.

J. H. Shulenberger, Knox county, Neb., sold through our Sioux City house May 10 a load of short-fed steers averaging 1,015 lbs at $7.10, and he remarked: "I bought these cattle right and could have sold them at $6.10 and made money. Of course receiving $7.10 I am delighted."

Eight dollars and seventy-five cents was top for shorn lambs at Kansas City on May 11 by 35c per cwt and was obtained by us for 458 head, shipped by Wight & Co., Bent county, Colo. Next highest figure was $8.40, also secured by us for the W. S. Smith offerings from the same place.

John Lewis, Jasper county, Mo., a prominent feeder and frequent shipper to our house at East St. Louis and Kansas City, paid our Chicago house a visit and was looking over the Yards. He, accompanied by his wife and daughter, was on his way to visit Eau Claire, Mich., and Mt. Lebanon, N. Y.

W. J. Miller, the well-known breeder of Angus cattle and Shropshire sheep, Jasper county, Ia.: "I wish to thank your firm at Fort Worth for helping me to secure an overcharge in freight on show cattle. I have also found your "boys" at Denver and Kansas City O.K. and ever ready to assist."

Hugh Strachan, a popular and progressive Scotchman of Larimer county, Colo., was on the May 16 and May 17 lamb market with 261 shorn offerings of 77 lbs and 258 of 76 lbs average respectively, for which we obtained $8.90, being 5c per cwt higher than any other shorn offerings brought both days.

M. C. McLain, Dunn county, Wis., has demonstrated that a good class of beef cattle could be produced in that state. Monday we sold for him 60 head of beeves, averaging 1,241 and 1,376 lbs, at $7.60 and $7.80 respectively.

F. A. Woods represented Marshall county, Ia., on the cattle market last week with 26 heifers of 726-lbs average which we sold at $6.90. They were bought through our Kansas City house last fall at $4.25. Mr. Woods is a well-known feeder and he was delighted with both the buying and selling of these heifers.

Belt & Hamilton, extensive shippers and feeders, Carroll county, Mo., marketed four cars of cattle at East St. Louis at the start of this week. From the same place T. D. White had in two cars of hogs, while A. Stanley and C. S. Miles each sent in one car. All of the above shipments were handled by our house to their entire satisfaction.

J. W. Stocks, progressive farmer and feeder Sac county, Ia., was on the hog market this week with offerings which were mostly of his own raising and feeding. He is a fancier of Duroc Jersey swine. "During the past ten years I have frequently patronized Clay, Robinson & Co.," said Mr. Stocks, "and have quite often been told that you were too big a firm to give the right kind of service to the small feeder or shipper. I feed from one to two loads of cattle and three to four loads of hogs every year and I want to state that all shipments handled by your firm have received just as good attention and have sold relatively just as high as any other stock on the market." Accompanying Mr. Stocks was J. W. Scothorn of the same point who is a young but progressive dealer in live stock and is already a familiar figure on the market.

Paine & McDonald, Kossuth county, Ia., regular and frequent shippers, were on our hog books at the start of this week.

John Bahr, prominent shipper, Carroll county Ia., sent us a load of hogs at the start this week and we sold them to his satisfaction.

W. E. Cummings, well-to-do farmer and feeder, Benton county, Ia., sold through us Monday 18 beef steers of 1,404-lbs average at $7.95.

Brundage & Cobb, Ogle county, Ill., frequent and valued patrons of our firm, had in their weekly consignment of cattle Wednesday of last week.

Sims & Smith, prominent feeders and shippers, Cooper county, Mo., disposed of a car of hogs through our East St. Louis house Friday of last week.

J. W. Kennell, a noted German-American feeder and farmer, Woodford county, Ill., sold through us 21 head of 1,200-lb beeves at $7.40—Thursday of last week.

Bell & Lutz, Fremont county, Ia., one of the most frequent shippers to the Chicago market, Wednesday of last week favored us with a shipment of cattle.

A. D. Johnson sent in from his feed lot in Sac county, Ia., 16 heifers and steers mixed of 757-lbs average and we landed them at $7.75, top for this class of offerings.

M. Mayfield, one of the largest cattle shippers to the East St. Louis market, had in from Cooper county, Mo., on the initial market day this week three cars of hogs to us.

F. F. Coffiin, Mahaska county, Ia., on Monday of this week marketed 21 nice beef steers that were branded westerns, averaging 1,268 lbs, and were sold by us at $7.75.

C. G. Johnson & Son, Marshall county, Ia., prominent shippers, had their second consignment of cattle to us Wednesday of last week and were delighted with their sale.

V. B. Mayberry, a noted feeder of Cass county, Ia., was here on the initial market day this week with 17 head of 1,144-lb beef steers for which we obtained the pleasing price of $8.15.

W. B. Hobbs, cashier of Bank of Arnot & Mark, Saniiac county, Mich.: "Cattle came through in good condition and in 49 hours. If you remember they told us it would take 72 hours."

C. P. Downing, Monona county, Ia., well known in shipping, feeding and grain circles in that country, shipped us a load of hogs Monday and we disposed of them to his satisfaction.

J. Leibee, Henry county, Ill., a big shipper and feeder and a patron of the Chicago market for 25 years, sold a shipment of steers through us to his satisfaction Wednesday of last week.

B. F. Dragoo, Woodbury county, Ia., who has had a load of stock to us practically every week since January, sold a load of hogs through us Monday of this week at a satisfactory price.

H. Benton, representing Audubon county, Ia., on the Monday cattle market with 60 beef steers of 1,217-lbs average. We obtained $7.65 for them, they being of a good grade and well fattened.

J. H. Latta, Harrison county, Ia., prominent farmer and feeder and extensive hog raiser, had steers and butcher stock here Wednesday of last week and landed the same at very satisfactory prices through us.

Clark & Martin, Hancock county, Ill., were both in with butcher stock Wednesday of last week and expressed their satisfaction with our sales for them. They are prominent in both shipping and feeding circles.

A. T. Jones, Clay county, and P. F. Weidauer, Calhoun county, who are among the most successful Iowa shippers and who have shipments to us every week, each had a load of hogs to our firm the start of this week.

F. W. Picking represented Charles Mix county S. D., on the Monday market with two loads each of cattle and hogs. We had the pleasure of handling his stock. He is one of the prominent and big feeders in that country.

J. Moffett, Lee county, Ill., was on the market Wednesday of last week with a shipment of cattle and hogs, included in which were 30 head of 338-lb hogs which we landed at $9.70, proving the summit for big weight offerings.

Mose Downey, Mercer county, Ill., a big feeder and prominent shipper, had in a shipment of cattle to us Wednesday last week. The steers averaged 1,581 lbs and brought $8.35 and a tailend heifer, weighing 560 lbs, brought $6.90.

Sales & Batcheller represented Watonwan county, Minn., on the Wednesday market last week with a shipment of butcher stock, we handling the same. They are regular and successful dealers and this was the second shipment to our firm

J. W. King, prominent shipper from Marion county, Mo., had in two cars of hogs and A. G. Smith, regular shipper from Massac county, Ill., marketed one car on the East St. Louis market Friday of last week, same being disposed of by us.

Stuebe Bros., Brown county, Minn., well and favorably known business men, extensive shippers, and members of the Minnesota and Dakota Land & Cattle Co., a big firm, obtained satisfactory prices for their cattle through us Thursday last week.

AS UNCLE HIRAM SEES IT;

"I'm doin' my best to help this runt to make a hog of himself, but he don't seem any more anxious to eat than when hogs was sellin' for 4 cents."

Ezra Boukenhauer, Dixon county, Neb.: "I have been almost lost without the REPORT, which you kindly sent me for quite a while. Am sending herewith 50c for a year's subscription. I think the paper is worth a good deal more than it costs."

Charles E. Dutcher, Scott county, Ia.: "I received returns for car of cattle and am well pleased with results. They were bought right and sold right. Inclosed find $1.50 for which please send me the REPORT and Breeder's Gazette for one year."

S. W. Allerton had in from Piatt county, Ill. a load of 1,265-lb cattle to us Thursday last week for which we secured $7.50. He is an extensive and successful feeder and farmer and is a son of that famous financier and agriculturist, Samuel Allerton of Chicago.

William Courtney & Son, Henry county, Ia., who are on the market practically every week of the year with stock and who are good friends of ours, sold a consignment of butcher stock and lambs through our house Wednesday of last week to their entire satisfaction.

Dupage county, Ill., was represented on the Wednesday cattle market of last week by R. H. Pahlman with a shipment and the hog market by P. J. Pahlman with a consignment. We handled both the shipments. They are prominent feeders and the prices obtained were very satisfactory.

It was our good fortune to handle a load of hogs at East St. Louis for the following prominent shippers Monday of this week: R. H. Garrett, Henry county, Mo.; Knox Evert, Obion county, Tenn.; J. B. Spiva & Co., Stoddard county, Mo.; L. Zeno, Craig county, Okla.; Haney & Prindaville, Lewis county, Mo.; Franken & Belt, Carroll county, Mo.

Bedford county, Tenn., was represented on the East St. Louis spring lamb trade May 16 [illegible], a deck of 67-lbs average which we sold at $[illegible] pinnacle by 25c per cwt. They were mar[illegible] by M. A. Butler. Next highest price was $[illegible] also obtained by us for 298 head of 60-lbs average, sent in by Joseph Hagey, Maurcy county, Tenn.

We are proud to record the following names of parties who are well known either in shipping or feeding circles, they selling hogs at pleasing prices through our firm last week: McAuley & Lee, Dallas county, Ia.; H. E. Chichester, Peoria county, Ill.; Pauliina Live Stock Co., O'Brien county, Ia.; C. E. Plattner, Linn county, Ia.; C. G. Johnson & Son, Marshall county, Ia.; William Daily, Dupage County, Ill.; H. Marty, Franklin county, Ia.; Paine & McDonald; Kossuth county, Ia.; First National Bank, Iroquois county, Ill.; M. Ashton, Piatt county, Ill.; F. H. Brown, Humboldt county, Ia.; A. J. Pence, Howard county, Ind.; P. F. Weidauer, and A. Toyne, Calhoun county, Ia.; Stuebe Bros., Brown county, Minn.; Taylor Fouts, Carroll county, Ind.; Schultz Bros., Carroll county, Ill.; William Downey & Blakely Bros., Mercer county, Ill.; Morgan Williams, Iowa county, Ia.

Hog Cholera on Decline.

Hog cholera is on the decrease, according to reports to the State Live Stock Sanitary Department. While the weather may have something to do with it, the inspectors believe that hog cholera serum is the greatest cause of the decrease.

"The Agricultural College is now able to more than supply the demand for serum," said Live Stock Commissioner Mercer. "This shows that the disease is abating. The farmers of Kansas should not sustain any heavy losses in the future from hog cholera, for it has been demonstrated that the disease can be mastered by the serum process."

Our Vanishing Beef Supply.

A warning has been sounded that our country is eating up its beef and that within a measurable space of time there will be a meat famine. Government estimates of the number of cattle in the United States have brought about this conclusion. A look at the statistics for the last three years shows that beef production is not keeping pace with the increase in population. Since 1907 the total number of beef cattle has decreased from 72,100,000 to 69,000,000, or about 5 per cent. Both the population and consuming power have increased enormously. To give this question a fair consideration, a comparison of increase of our cattle and population for a longer period is necessary. In the last thirty years the total number of cattle has increased from forty-six to seventy millions, or at the rate of one and one-half per cent per annum. Our population has not increased as rapidly, but our consuming power has become vastly greater because of our accumulated wealth.

The causes for this diminution in beef production for the last few years are the transformation of the western range into smaller farms and the high cost of production in the corn belt. The contraction of the area of free grazing land is a determining factor. After the territories of Kansas, Missouri, Texas and Oklahoma were admitted to the Union free grazing land gradually disappeared. The homestead and fencing laws which permitted homesteaders to take title to a quarter section of land, fence it and forbid trespassing, absorbed the greater area of free grazing lands. The loss of this free pasturage is gradually eliminating the range business. Most of the large ranch outfits have been broken up. Our western ranches have been developed by individuals and syndicates possessing capital because to own and operate a ranch called for an outlay of millions of dollars. These large ranchmen have individually owned as much as 4,236 square miles and half a million head of cattle. They have improved the quality of the Texas long horn by the use of pure-bred Hereford, Shorthorn and Angus bulls from the corn belt. But within the last few years the supply from this source has decreased. The immigration of the ambitious farmer of the Middle West to these lands is largely the cause. Real estate firms and our transcontinental railways have allured the corn-belt farmer to these regions and have induced the large ranching syndicates to cut up large areas of land and deal them out piecemeal.

This limitation of free grazing areas and the parcelling out of ranch lands will not affect production permanently. True, this land is not as productive as our corn-belt soil, but the spread of cultivation and intensive farming means a heavy stock of cattle for the consumption of the grain and the maintenance of soil fertility. The decrease is noticed at this time because the range is being converted into the smaller farm and the producers have not fully realized the need of cattle with which to maintain soil fertility. The checking of the industry in the West is serious at the present time, but it is beyond a doubt only temporary.

In the second place, our beef supply is vanishing because the profit of exclusive beef production is scant. The high cost of feed and the advance in value of pasture land are the causes. The westerner depends upon the large area of uncultivated land for feed, while the corn-belt feeder has to depend upon limited areas of high-priced pasture and expensive fattening feeds. Cattle feeding in the Middle West is expensive compared with twenty years ago. Corn has increased in price from 20 to 60c per bushel; hay and roughage have doubled in value and land has soared from $20 to $100 to $200 per acre. As a result many have abandoned stock raising for grain farming. Experience has shown that a greater net income can be had for a few years from cultivated crops than from pasture land. This is a serious condition, but there is a remedy. Cattle breeding and feeding can be made an issue in the pursuit of general agriculture on our rich stock farms. This means the application of scientific and business principles. The perished herd and high power feeding or baby beef production will fill our coolers in the future.

The influences in the West and the expense of production in the corn belt can be overcome to a degree, but the dairy cow is sure to permanently check the beef industry. The high prices of dairy products have caused feeding barns and lots to be filled with dairy cows. The milk cow can never help the beef business because she is not sought for by the butchers.

In beef or milk production grain is consumed and fertility is maintained, but the present greater profit of dairy products is bound to crowd out the beef business to a marked extent.

Our market statistics indicate a shortage of available beef supply, but this is no barometer of our reserve and potential supply. Intensive farming is capable of increasing the cattle of this country by the million. Knowledge of scientific agriculture and enough confidence and farmers to begin it are needed. Let the cry be more beef!—H. L. Thornton in Iowa Agriculturist.

Mark Twain on Farming.

One of the funniest things which the late Mark Twain ever wrote was his article entitled "How I Edited an Agricultural Paper." For sheer whimsical imagination the article is not surpassed by anything which Twain wrote and that is saying a great deal, for the depths of his wit and humor were never completely sounded. The article is supposed to deal with his experiences in supplanting the regular editor of an agricultural weekly. The editor is supposed to have started to Europe on a vacation trip and Mark, being given complete charge of the plant, proceeded to write farm misinformation exactly as it came to him on the spur of the moment. The sensation of the subscribers when they picked up their favorite weekly farm paper and read such paragraphs as the following may be imagined better than expressed:

Turnips should never be pulled; it injures them. It is much better to send a boy up and let him shake the tree.

The guano is a fine bird, but great care is necessary in rearing it. It should not be imported earlier than June or later than September. In the winter it should be kept in a warm place where it can hatch out its young.

It is evident that we are to have a backward season for grain. Therefore it will be well for the farmer to begin setting out his cornstalks and planting his buckweat cakes in July instead of August.

Concerning the pumpkin: This berry is a favorite with the natives of the interior of New England, who prefer it to the gooseberry for the making of fruit cake, and who likewise give it the preference over the raspberry for feeding cows, as being more filling and fully as satisfying. The pumpkin is the only esculent of the orange family that will thrive in the North, except the gourd and one or two varieties of the squash. But the custom of planting it in the front yard with the shrubbery is fast going out of vogue, for it is now generally conceded that the pumpkin as a shade tree is a failure.

Now, as the warm weather approaches, and the ganders begin to spawn—

Mark goes on to tell that after the paper had been published the awe-inspired natives followed him at some distance paying him what he supposed to be homage for his wonderful journalistic ability. It was not until later that he discovered they believed he was insane and looked on him as a sort of escaped and wandering circus freak. The paper had not much more than reached the subscribers before the real editor made a sudden and unexpected return, and this is the way Mark says the real editor addressed him:

This is a sad business—a very sad business. There is the mucilage bottle broken, and six panes of glass, and a spitoon and two candlesticks. But that is not the worst. The reputation of the paper is injured—and permanently, I fear. True, there never was such a call for the paper before, and it never sold such a large edition or soared to such celebrity—but does one want to be famous for lunacy and prosper upon the infirmities of his mind? My friend, as I am an honest man, the street out here is full of people, and others are roosting on the fences, waiting to get a glimpse of you, because they think you are crazy. And well they might, after reading your editorials. They are a disgrace to journalism. Why, what put it into your head that you could edit a paper of this nature? You do not seem to know the first rudiments of agriculture. You speak of a furrow and a harrow as being the same thing; you talk of the molting season for cows, and you recommend the domestication of the polecat on account of its playfulness and its excellence as a ratter. Your remark that clams will lie quiet if music be played to them was superfluous—entirely superfluous. Nothing disturbs clams. Clams always lie quiet. Clams care nothing whatever about music. Ah, heavens and earth, friend! if you had made the acquiring of ignorance the study of your life you could not have graduated with higher honor than you could today. I never saw anything like it. Your observation that the horse chestnut as an article of commerce is steadily gaining in favor is simply calculated to destroy this journal. I want you to throw up your situation and go. I want no more holiday—I could not enjoy it if I had it. Certainly not with you in my chair. I would always stand in dread of what you might be going to recommend next. It makes me lose all patience every time I think of your discussing oyster beds under the head of "Landscape Gardening." I want you to go. Nothing on earth could persuade me to take another holiday. O! why didn't you tell me you didn't know anything about agriculture?

Mark was forced to admit that there might be some grounds for the editor's complaint, but he maintained he could have run the circulation up to 20,000 inside of two weeks if he had kept on at the progress made in the first day, nor was he depending simply on quantity of circulation, for that he also had quality in mind was evident when he remarked to the editor: "And I have given you the best class of readers that ever an agricultural paper had—not a farmer in it nor a solitary individual who could tell a watermelon tree from a peach vine to save his life."

Twain did not touch any subject which he did not enliven by his remarkable genius for the unexpected and for the harmless quip. His best humor was at his own expense, for he never went so far as to make his wit harm or injure the feelings of any others. In the last analysis this is the real test of genuine wit and humor, and judged by all standards, Twain must go down in history as the greatest humorist which America has yet produced.—Iowa Homestead.

Timely Rains in Northwest.

Following comes from our South St. Paul house: "It is now apparent that the recent heavy frosts have harmed oats in some localities, and wheat in certain districts is making a poor showing on account of bad seed. Some flax seeding remains to be done and considerable barley will be sown in North Dakota during the next two or three weeks for the purpose of killing off weeds. Where oats and barley have not been resown some fields may show a sparse stand later. However, most of the Minnesota and Dakota small grain is in fine shape at this time. One redeeming feature of the heavy frosts is that many of the weeds, which the early high range of temperature had given a good start, were killed as a result thereof. Rains have been quite general throughout the Northwest the past week and in a good many parts this moisture was badly needed and came at an opportune time."

Light Montana Lamb Losses.

Drenching rains from Livingston to Glendive have put the country into as fine condition as it has ever been in during a spring, and insure the grass crop for the year, according to William Rea, Jr., of Forsyth, Mont. Mr. Rea is a member of the firm of Rea Bros., whose sheep holdings are the second largest in Montana. "Conditions are ideal from Livingston to Glendive," said Mr. Rea, "soaking rains of the past few days have freshened everything and given the grass a good start, insuring a luxuriant range this year. Lambing is about half over in eastern Montana, and losses will be slight—far below the normal. While the Boston buyers are apparently clinging to the belief that wool should be lower than it was last year, my judgment is that Montana sheepmen should receive every cent as much for this year's clip as that of last. The prices paid at the London sales would indicate as much. The average price last year was around 22c, some of it bringing as much as 16c, however. While there are just as many sheep in the state now as there were a year ago, I believe that the clip will fall about 5,000,000 lbs short of what it was last year—34,000,000 lbs. This is because the fleeces are lighter. There were heavy snows last winter, and it remained on the ground a long time. Consequently the fleeces are freer from dust than after a dry winter, and therefore will weigh less."

Former Cattle Range Under Plow.

Thos. F. Carroll, Two Rivers, Wyo., writes: "Please change the address of my REPORT from Mandel, Wyo., to Two Rivers, Wyo. Two Rivers is a new post office just established on the old Ora Haley home ranch at the junction of the Big and Little Laramie Rivers. This was once the largest cow ranch in Albany county, but the man with the plow has it now and where Haley's, Harrison's and Coble's steers used to run is about all plowed up, there being about 200 families on the Haley ranch alone.

"We had an unusually good winter and cattle are going on the range in better condition than I ever saw them at this time of the year. Though grass is a little backward, owing to want of moisture, I think we will be able to ship earlier than usual. The calf crop is also very satisfactory."

Increasing the Hog Supply.

"All over the Middle West there is a movement under way for conservation of the brood sow crop as a first aid to the hog shortage matter which has confronted the country for the last six months," remarked Professor William Dietrich of the Illinois Experiment Station, who was at the Yards, "and the outcome of this wise move by farmers will be a liberal increase in hog production within another year. Down in our country the demand for brood sows is keen and even the sow pigs, where they can be bought, are being taken liberally by farmers at high prices. The phenomenally high prices of the last few months have stimulated breeding interest to a great extent and the farmers' prosperity will be greatly enhanced."

The Sublime Oberammergau

Passion Play

In the little village of Oberammergau, in the Bavarian Highlands, the Sacred Drama of the Passion Play of Jesus the Saviour will be presented this summer. It has been presented every ten years by the people of this village as a religious fete in fulfillment of a vow made to God centuries ago in return for His mercy in delivering them from pestilence and spering their lives. It will be an event of world-wide interest. Already the full capacity of many steemships has been sold out for months ahead to those who will make the pilgrimage to see this wonderful religious ceremony.

"The Passion Play" on Post Cards

At enormous expense the original photographs taken from scenes in the Passion Play have been secured and reproduced in many beautiful colors. There are fifty-five views in all, regular post card size, packed in a neat box ready for mailing.

A full description is printed on the back of each card, so by beginning with No. 1 and looking at the pictures in the regular order you have the Passion Play before you—a wonderful and beautiful presentation of the greatest event in the history of mankind.

A booklet describing the play and the people in it accompanies each set of the cards. It is estimated that 50,000 people will visit this play. Everybody will be talking and reading about it, and you will be fortunate to have this opportunity to secure this fine set.

How to Secure a Set for Yourself Without Cost

The Commoner, WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN editor, has arranged a plan whereby all who are interested in the political principles advocated by that paper may view this remarkable religious play by fifty beautiful post cards without expense. That's What The
DE LAVAL Cream Separators
Have Been From The Very Beginning of Separators 32 Years Ago.

Why bother with "copies", "imitations", "substitutes", "just-as-good" and other "near" separators, that merely utilize cheaply the expired DE LAVAL patents and cast-off DE LAVAL types of construction of from ten to twenty and thirty years ago?

There is no other cream separator made that comes WITHIN TEN YEARS of the IMPROVED DE LAVAL of TODAY.

SEE, COMPARE AND TRY a 1910 DE LAVAL for yourself beside any other separator made and you cannot help so decide.

Any DE LAVAL agent will be glad to help you to do this. It will cost you nothing and may save you a great deal. You have but to ask for the nearest agent's name and address if you don't know it.

Farmers' Pork Hog.

The hog raiser who is up to date and understands his business has his settled belief in regard to what is the cheapest and most profitable hog for him to feed for the pork market. The majority of the feeders now are turning off a hog from 225 to 300 lbs as being more profitable than one that is kept longer and made heavier.

The feeder is anxious to have pigs that come in March and April, as the farmer who produces pork hogs does not want to take the risk of having his sows farrow in January and February. In this way he can by good feeding have his pigs ready for market not later than November. There are a few feeders who still persist in making a 500 and 600-lb pork hog, but the majority of them have come to the conclusion that the best profits are from the 225 to 300-lb porkers.

The first 100 lbs are put on for less cost than the next 100 lbs, and the following hundred takes still more feed to produce the pound showing. As size and age is added the cost of producing the pound is increased.

Another point that hog raisers are looking after: They don't want a sow that will only farrow three to five pigs; they want at least eight good pigs, and prefer nine or ten to having the three to five litters. It is a big saving where you have to keep but one sow for nine pigs instead of three. We want also a vigorous, heavy, strong, quick maturer and easy feeder to make our greatest profits. We also want a smooth hog to get our best prices at the pork market; we want all the size we can get with quality and easy feeding proclivities, as this is what counts over the scales. We want uniform color, but don't care whether it is black, red or white —Hog raiser in Swineheid.

Old Idea Exploded.

Governor Gooding of Idaho says that a 12-lb fleece is not heavy for either Cotswold or Lincolns in that country, yet it is a large average when the facts are known that this is a sage brush country, and it speaks very strongly for both breeds that they retain their fleece while on a range of this kind. The Governor says: "Of course the Lincoln and Cotswold lose some weight of fleece, but nothing like the blackfaces." The governor's registered flock of coarse breds, like most of the other stud flocks in Idaho, are kept on the range from nine to ten months of the year, which accounts largely for the healthy condition of the flocks and means much for breeding purposes. Then again the rams are used to being herded and stay with the flocks very much better. The old idea that a high-bred, coarse wooled sheep would go to pieces on the sage brush ranges of the West has been exploded. No stronger or hardier coarse wools can be found than on the ranges of Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Idaho, Utah and other western states where these sheep are bred.

Attention, Cattle Feeders!

There has been a break of 35@65c for common and medium steers and 25@40c for butcher stock from the close of last week. We anticipate still further declines in these classes of cattle. Keep the above grades, where intended for the market within the next four to six weeks, coming as fast as possible. Texas grass cattle are and will continue to have a depressing effect on natives in plain and half-fat condition from now on. Good quality steers lacking good flesh, however, can be held for longer feeding to good advantage.

Silage is a Great Feed.

Ensilage as beef-making feed, after having been given a thorough test at the Indiana Experiment Station, has been pronounced a cheap beef-building material by animal husbandry experts of the stations.

Late last Thursday the Indiana Station marketed at Chicago six lots of silage-fed steers which had been on feed for 180 days, although for the purpose of the experiment records were compiled only for 160 days, the extra twenty days' feeding having been because of the mean market for cattle at the expiration of the 160-day period. The various lots sold as follows:

Lot 1—Ten head, 1290 lbs	$7.90
Lot 2—Ten head, 1239 lbs	7.90
Lot 3—Nine head, 1266 lbs	7.90
Lot 4—Nine head, 1261 lbs	8.00
Lot 5—Ten head, 1246 lbs	7.90
Lot 6—Ten head, 1230 lbs	7.75

The cattle were valued at $4.65 on going into the feed lot. They were fed shelled corn, cottonseed meal, clover hay and corn silage. Cost of each 100 lbs gain ranged from $9.42 to $10.98, while the necessary selling prices were at $6.05 to $6.49. Profits on the various lots ranged at $10.12 to $13.02 per head, lot No. 1 showing greatest financial gain.

Lot No. 3 was the bunch fed straight silage as roughage, and they shrank only 345 lbs from home weights, as against an average shrink of 50 lbs for all six lots.

Henry P. Rusk, instructor in animal husbandry at the Indiana Station at Purdue, was in charge of the shipment. "Our experiment shows that silage is a very good roughage in cattle feeding," said Mr. Rusk. "It is the aim of the Station to demonstrate to cattle feeders that economic feeding methods will result in a fair profit, and we believe this test feeding has proven it." The Indiana Station will shortly issue a bulletin detailing complete results of the experiment.

R. L. Carruthers an Extensive Dealer.

There are times when no rain falls down there for a year, and it has been dry for a longer time than that. Very naturally one would wonder what keeps alive the sheep and cattle that are there in such large numbers. "But there is a way by which we can get our stock through these long drouths," said Mr. Carruthers. "Soto is a peculiar plant or growth found in that country which furnishes feed for stock in the dryest times. It is not exactly like a cactus, nor like a woody shrub, as it has no leaves. In the mountains and higher parts it sometimes grows so thick that a person could hardly ride through it on horseback. The head resembles a little the head of a cabbage and tastes a great deal like it, but is sweeter. Around the head grows sharp stickers that prevent the sheep or cattle from getting at it. But we hire Mexicans with axes to go through the ranch in a very dry time and cut down the Soto plant and then split open the head in such a way that the stock can eat it. They like it and fatten on it. Last year I knew one cattleman who kept 3,000 head of cattle in this way. He had as many as twenty Mexicans working at times."

Hog Raising in Wyoming.

W. L. Tillotson of Moorcroft, Wyo., well known to our readers as an extensive cattleman, writes us that he has embarked in pig raising as a side line on his fine stock farm in Crook county. He has 125 brood sows, Poland-Chinas and Berkshires, which are fed barley and grazed on alfalfa bottoms. He states he is having great success with them and that they will follow in the feed lots 500 steers which he bought through our Denver office.

Mr. Tillotson adds: "I wish to thank you for the continued receipt of your valued REPORT, which, in my opinion, is the best paper of the kind published. I am sending 50c for another year's subscription."

Violation of Cattle Quarantine Law.

In order to prevent the spread of the disease known as southern, splenetic, or Texas fever of cattle, and to further the work of eradicating the ticks which convey this disease, the United States Department of Agriculture maintains a strict quarantine on the infected region and endeavors to enforce this quarantine by court prosecutions when necessary. In a recent case in the United States court for the Western District of North Carolina at Asheville, one W. W. Anderson entered a plea of guilty to a charge of violating the law and regulations, and a fine of $100 and costs was im the court. The offense consisted in drivin certain cattle from Fannin county, Ga., Polk county, Tenn., which two counties we quarantine, into Cherokee county, N. C county was outside the quarantined area.

Fine Conditions in Arkansas Valley.

"Everything in general is in fine condition in my section of the country," said John Klusman who was at South St. Joseph with a load of lambs to Clay, Robinson & Co., from Las Animas, Colo., which is situated in the Arkansas River valley. "Our alfalfa is showing up in fine shape and it is in better condition now than it has been at this time of the season for three years, when we had our last bumper crop. If nothing happens to it from now on we will have a heavy yield. Only a few scattering loads of fed stock remain in the valley now and they will be marketed soon."

When asked as to the prospects as to feeding the coming year, he replied: "The whole situation will be ruled by the way values hold up for fat grades and how the feeding stock sells. Last year we were able to stock up at reasonable enough prices that the rise in the market after we had them in our feed lots made us plenty of money. Prospects point toward very high prices for feeders this season. Last year I was able to buy my lambs, which were a pretty decent kind, at slightly over $5.00, but I do not expect to get them any way near that figure this year. I bought them in New Mexico. All the sheep raising states are reporting a good crop. In my estimation prospects are that there will be about a normal number fed in the valley this coming fall."

Writing our South St. Joseph house regarding our work, Mr. Klusman says: "I am writing to thank you for making a good sale for me. I feel that I received all the lambs were worth."

New Mexico Cattle Scarce.

J. E. Rhea, of the well-known and extensive cattle and sheep firm of J. E. & J. W. Rhea of Roswell, N. M., was at Clay, Robinson & Co.'s Chicago office, consulting with them on the live stock situation. They handle steers extensively in the Kansas pastures and are heavy raisers of sheep on the range, besides having large land interests.

"It was very dry all over eastern New Mexico when I left there," remarked Mr. Rhea. "Unless that country has gotten a good wetting down there will be a short lamb crop. However, if a good rain has fallen the crop will be large, as sheep wintered well. Cattle also came through in excellent shape. New Mexico is shy on all classes of cattle, a result of a decreasing range area and spaying of heifers. New high prices have been paid for steers of all ages this spring. Kansas pastures are in fine shape, being about three weeks earlier than last year. Cattle are making a nice start. If conditions continue favorable the movement marketward will be earlier than usual.

"We have been shipping nearly exclusively to Clay, Robinson & Co. for ten years. Not once during all that time have we had cause for complaint. We have been treated fine and served in both the office and selling departments in a most satisfactory manner."

was only 75c per cwt. The widening prices is now on. This is due partly to plentiful supplies of warmed-up and half-fat offerings and a shortage of choice to prime grades and partly to increased runs of grass cattle from Texas at the northern markets. Less desirable natives will have to sell more on their merits from now on and the well-fatted lots will come more into their own. When grassers from Texas have spent their force, then will steers from the native pastures and southwesterners from the Kansas and Oklahoma pastures make their bow in heavy numbers to the buyers. There is no apprehension regarding the future market for the top grades of corn-fed beeves, but the partly-fatted steers will likely sell still lower. If there is a spread of $1.50@2.00 per cwt in the bulk of sales before long it will cause no surprise. We also advise letting fat cattle come right along.

Montana Pulp-Fed Cattle Sell High.

A shipment of cattle that attracted considerable attention and caused much comment was that of the fourteen carloads marketed at Chicago on Monday by Charles O'Donnell of Billings, Mont. These cattle were fed beet pulp and alfalfa at the sugar factory of the Great Western Sugar Co. of Billings. The whole consignment was handled by Clay, Robinson & Co. and Mr. O'Donnell expressed his entire satisfaction with the prices obtained. They made an excellent showing for the time on feed and Mr. O'Donnell said that he would feed again next year. The offerings were bought by Armour & Co. and Swift & Co. The sales included 112 dehorned steers of 1,308 lbs. average at $7.80, with the second cut, numbering 72 head, averaging 1,183 lbs. and making $7.45; 57 horned steers of 1,365 lbs. average at $7.65, with the second cut, averaging 1,279 lbs., going at $7.45. The cattle arrived on the Chicago market Sunday and were out in the rain over night, and this adversely effected their sale at least 10@15c per cwt. They showed a remarkably light shrinkage from home weights, being only 81 lbs. per head, although they had traveled around 1,000 miles. The cattle netted $89.70 per head, while the whole number, totaling 270 head, sold at an average of around $7.64 per cwt.

Big Price Loss for Aged Sheep.

An unprecedented break in prices for ewes and wethers has taken place in a little over a month. The decline has been right around $3.00 per cwt. This was made possible by prices resting on new high levels, surprisingly liberal runs for this time of the year and unpopularity of heavy mutton. The packers claim they are having great difficulty in finding outlet for big mutton meats. In late years the consumptive demand has been turning more to the lamb meats. Many years ago there were as many aged sheep sold on the market as lambs. But the wants of the public have changed. Taking the year as a whole now, the proportion of lambs going for slaughter is far in excess of aged sheep.

Lamb Market Conditions Reversed.

One year ago there was a high and bounding market for lambs. At that time new records were being established. The feed lots were nearly bare and buyers were clamoring for supplies. Conditions have been reversed this spring. A lot of lambs were put in for a late feed in Colorado, which, along with Michigan, Indiana and Ohio feeders overstaying a good market, has kept the market hoppers well filled. Prices have been slipping down at a swift pace for several weeks. Tennessee and Kentucky spring lambs will soon be moving in liberal numbers to market, and western rangers are hovering on the horizon. A shipment from Oregon is expected at Chicago early next month. Native lambs are making themselves more and more a price factor.

Buyers Eager for Yearling Cattle.

Well-fatted yearling cattle are claiming the undivided attention of buyers. This is history repeating itself. During the spring and summer months the consumptive demand always switches from the heavy to lighter cuts of beef. Fat yearling stock is now selling at relatively high prices. Reflecting this are a few recent sales of yearlings by Clay, Robinson & Co. of 28 head, mostly heifers, of 776 lbs. average at $7.75; 16 head, principally heifers, averaging 757 lbs, at $7.75; and 34 heifers of 656 lbs. average at $7.65. These prices display around 75c advance over one year ago. It should be remembered that yearlings to bring such prices have to be well fatted. The plain and half-fat lots sell at a big discount from the best grades.

IOWA-FED BEEVES WHICH TOPPED CHICAGO MARKET LAST WEEK BY 10c PER CWT.

On Wednesday, May 18, Clay, Robinson & Co. landed these 17 head of 1,510-lb beeves at $8.70, or $131.37 per head. The price was 20c per cwt higher than any other firm obtained, the $8.60 sale also being made by us, and was pinnacle for that week by 10c per cwt. This is the third time that we topped the market with cattle of the same breeding from the Weiss feed lots. The cattle were grade Herefords and branded westerns from Sand Hills in Nebraska and were fed and marketed by those famous Iowa feeders, Jacob Weiss & Sons of Denison. They were bought on the South Omaha market at $5.20, averaging 1,050 lbs. The cattle were on feed seven months. They were started on a light ration of ear corn and timothy hay and later on given ear corn and clover hay. In about three months they were gotten on full feed, the ration being all the shelled corn they would eat and clover hay, with the roughness changed to timothy hay and straw during the final feeding. The senior Mr. Weiss accompanied the cattle to market and said that he, as usual, got the service that satisfies. He remarked that he never lets his cattle get hungry or thirsty and always feeds at a certain hour, morning and evening. If they clean up the corn in the morning he gives them more at the noon hour. On the above day they also had in 251 western lambs of 84 lbs average which we sold at $8.90, top for westerns that week.

Good Beef Expected from Montana.

Our Mr. Charles O. Robinson, after a trip to Miles City and Fort Benton, Mont., where he attended cattle meetings, makes the following conclusions regarding range and cattle conditins in Montana: "Cattle wintered very well in Montana and entered into spring in good flesh condition. The further north they were the better their condition. It is a little dry up in that country now, but the season is fully a month earlier than usual. If the usual rains are had very good beef will come out of that country this season. The movement of cattle to market will start about the usual time. The many cattlemen with whom I talked said there was a shortage of aged steers. However, they look for liberal shipments of mixed cattle, which will be due to many outfits cleaning up on account of the great influx of settlers. Southeastern Wyoming suffered with a very severe winter, as did also parts of the Dakotas. Cattlemen are hopeful, however, and with good climatic conditions from now on cattle should arrive on the markets in very good shape."

Colorado-Fed Cattle at $8.10.

An unusually high sale of cattle was negotiated at Kansas City on May 23, when Clay, Robinson & Co. landed 23 head of Colorado-fed beeves of 1,237 lbs average at $8.10. This price was the extreme top there that day. They were fed and marketed by Ballantine & Beggs, who feed thousands of cattle at Rocky Ford and Sugar City, Colo., as well as raise fine cattle on an extensive scale at Collbran, Colo.

Tennessee Lambs Top Market 25c Per Cwt.

C. V. Bobo of Flat Creek, Tenn., was on the East St. Louis market May 24 with a string of lambs and sheep to Clay, Robinson & Co. The offerings included 48 shorn lambs of 80 lbs average which brought $8.00 and 26 sheep of 115 lbs average at $5.60. Both sales were the extreme top of the market by 25c per cwt. Mr. Bobo had in 182 spring lambs, averaging 67 lbs, which Clay, Robinson & Co. landed at $9.25 straight. This was considered the highest sale of spring lambs during the past two weeks, as all offerings which brought $9.50@9.75 last week were sorted to the extent of 50 to 60 head out to the double deck.

Illinois Yearling Heifers at $7.75.

The top price by a big margin for heifers at Chicago this week was $7.75. This figure was obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co. on May 23 for 28 yearlings, principally heifers, of 776 lbs average. They were grade Herefords, of good quality and well fatted. H. J. Cleveland, the progressive farmer and feeder of Rochelle, Ill., was the feeder and shipper of these cattle.

Enforcement of Twenty-Eight Hour Law.

A controversy has arisen between some of the railroads of the country and the larger live stock shippers in regard to the space in the cars which must be afforded animals in transit from one state to another in order to make unloading unnecessary and still comply with the twenty-eight-hour law. This law provides that when the animals are carried in cars "in which they can and do have proper food, water, space, and opportunity to rest" they shall not be required to be unloaded. The department of agriculture has been appealed to by both railroads and shippers, and the position of the department is tentatively announced as follows:

If cars are not loaded beyond the minimum weight fixed by the tariffs, the department will not, for the present, raise the question as to whether sufficient space is provided for the animals to rest; but railroads which load beyond the minimum and do not unload for rest will have to take their chances of prosecution in the courts.

It is the intention of the department to institute a number of test cases and secure rulings from the federal courts as to what space must be afforded. It is claimed by the department that this is the only course open, since no power is given the secretary of agriculture by the law to make rulings and regulations regarding the space to be afforded in cars.

In all cases where live stock is not unloaded en route "into properly equipped pens for rest, water and feeding" the cars must be provided with facilities for feeding and watering in transit, and live stock must, when so fed and watered, receive proper feed and water.

Topped Cattle Market 10c Per Cwt.

On May 19 the top for cattle at Chicago was $8.25. Clay, Robinson & Co. landed at this figure 22 head of 1,513 lbs average, being 10c per cwt higher than any other firm obtained. These cattle were fed and marketed by C. Y. Miller of Marion, Ill., who is one of the best feeders in that part of the country. While the cattle were mixed breeds and of only fair to good quality, they were well fattened, reflecting the great ability of Mr. Miller to prepare cattle for shambles. We also sold two other lots for Mr. Miller at $7.75 and $7.85, averaging 1,326 lbs and 1,395 lbs respectively. The above prices were considered very high, as most traders complained very much of that day's market.

Keep 'Em Coming to Market.

Look out for breakers in the market for common and medium steers and also cows and heifers. These offerings are riding for a fall. Prices are 50c@$1.00 higher than a year ago, and buyers say they are having trouble in finding outlet for this class of beef, owing to the relatively high cost of it. Prices have already started downward, but the bottom is not in sight yet. The spring movement of grass cattle from Texas is gaining in volume, and before long trainloads of this beef will be forwarded freely. Then will the slashes in the price range for the plainer and lighter weight native steers, as well as butcher stock, be deep. This occurs every spring. Our advice is to keep the above classes of cattle moving to market as fast as possible and avoid the rush.

George Leigh Feeds Top Heifers.

It will be recalled that George Leigh of Aurora, Ill., put the top on the Chicago heifer market the second week of this month, when Clay, Robinson & Co. sold his offerings at $7.65. He was in again May 18 and repeated the stunt, we landing his 34 heifers of 656 lbs average at $7.65. This price was 35c per cwt higher than any other full load brought that day and extreme top for the week. In fact, the sale was the highest of the season, considering their young age and light weight. They were about half grade Herefords and Angus, and remarkably fat and even for their class, indicating that Mr. Leigh is an expert in preparing the hardest of all cattle for market—baby beef.

"Raise More Cattle"—Ogden Armour.

Speaking of the price of meat and explaining its constantly increasing cost, J. Ogden Armour says: "The increased cost of beef is due to natural conditions which the great packing interests of this country have no control over. If you want cheap meat, raise more cattle."

The truth of this assertion is amply borne out by the statistics just compiled by the Texas Commercial Secretaries' Association, which show the number of head of cattle in Texas on January 1, 1909, to have been 8,794,000, while on January 1, 1910, there were about 5,949,926, a decrease of 2,834,074 head.

The remarkable fact brought out by these figures is an abundant proof that Mr. Armour was giving the real facts in the case and knew what he was talking about. In Texas, which has the largest grazing area now left in the United States, the actual number of cattle has decreased 30 per cent. The remedy for this condition of affairs has been suggested by Mr. Armour himself. It consists in getting people to raise more cattle.

To Make Serum Experiments.

Through the efforts of Senator Burkett the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture will begin an active campaign for the eradication of swine plague in Nebraska. Exha[illegible] ive experiments are to [illegible] conducted at the S[illegible] Omaha Stock Yards, w[illegible]re the yards manage[illegible] has placed every facility in the hands of the [illegible]eral auth[illegible] says the Journal-Stockman.

A di[illegible] Washington announces that Dr. W. B. [illegible]ector in charge of the field experiments [illegible] stationed at Ames, Ia., has been [illegible] South Omaha Stock Yards to conduct similar e[illegible]ts there, according to information received [illegible]ator Burkett from Dr. Melville, [illegible]ief of th[illegible]au of Animal Industry. Wool M[illegible]t Notes.

At Portland, Ore., it is understood considerable mohair has been purchased at 32@33c delivered there.

From London comes the news that merino wool is making a stronger range and that crossbreds are advancing.

Reports are to the effect that a great deal of wool is being consigned in Texas, Utah, California, Nevada and Wyoming.

"Nothing doing" is the news conveyed from the West. Shearing is now on in full blast, but the grower and buyer have failed to strike a trading basis. The clip is estimated at 300,000,000 lbs.

At the recent Mountain Home, I[illegible] wool sale only 30,000 lbs. were taken by on[illegible] dealer, although there were twelve other [illegible]n buyers there. This reflects how far apart are the sellers and buyers.

It is said that the Idaho wool clip will not be as large as last year. An Oregon Short Line man says that the clip along that railroad, including the triangle country, will be 25,000,000 to 28,000,000 lbs., against 30,000,000 lbs. last year.

Do not tie your wool with sisal of binder twine. Clips tied in this manner are discriminated against, owing to the fibers being caught in the wool and can only be removed at great expense. It always pays to cater to the market demands.

Although there has been no quotable change in eastern wool market quotations since our last issue, there is a stronger feeling. Old stocks are low, manufacturers are still increasing their inquiries and advices from abroad are encouraging.

The Wool and Cotton Reporter of Boston says trading has commenced in the new Oregon clip. For best No. 3 grade of Cotswold wools buyers have paid 18c delivered and 17c for the coarser. For No. 2 grade 19c is being offered, and for choice 20c.

Eastern wool dealers seem intent on preventing any rise in prices. This is their usual game at this time of the year, as they are now trying to purchase the new clip. Should there be a bulge in the market for old wool they would be compelled to pay more for the new clip.

Idaho flockmasters say they will not sell their wool lower than 18@21c, and eastern buyers say they will not pay higher than 14@16c. The producers say they will store their clip rather than concede such low prices, and believe that their bankers will stand behind them in this move.

H. P. Miller of Ohio is of the opinion that wool growers are in a good position to exhibit independence and remind wool dealers that it takes two to make a bargain. He thinks wool is relatively too low, and says it is a good year to hold and await the change of mind in the manufacturer.

Included in the sales at Boston recently, as published in the Wool and Cotton Reporter, were: 15,000 lbs. Ohio XX and above, 33@34c; 75,000 lbs. fine delaines, 35@36c; 70,000 lbs. unwashed delaines, 26@27c; 50,000 lbs. Ohio ¾-blood, 30c; 35,000 lbs. Ohio ¼-blood, 28@29c; 65,000 lbs. Michigan ¼-blood, 28@29c; 60,000 lbs. California, 16@25c; 15,000 lbs. Texas 10 months, scoured basis, 60c; 70,000 lbs. Indiana and Wisconsin ¼-blood, 28@29c; 650,000 lbs. Oregons, 17½@19½c; 1,400,000 lbs. territory wools, 17@24c.

J. E. Lavely, Wyandot county, Ohio, marketed 165 shorn western wethers of 112 lbs average on the Chicago market May 23 and we sold them at the top price of $5.65, being 15c per cwt higher than any other wethers made.

NATIVE BEEF STEERS.

Range of prices and bulk sales of native beef steers this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & CO.'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Range.		Bulk.
This week.....	$5.50@	$8.75	$6.85@	$8.20
Previous week.....	5.65	8.70	7.10	8.10

Two years ago.....	4.50	7.30	5.90	7.00

Supply Thursday last week 5,136. It was generally a steady deal. There were instances where the best kinds developed strength and cases where the common grades went weaker. Short-fed offerings were very uneven sale. There was a liberal proportion of distillery feds and buyers showed them good favor, owing to their attractive quality and insufficiency of choice corn-fed offerings. Pinnacle was $8.25. We sold 22 head of the C. Y. Miller 1,513-lb offerings from Illinois at the price, being 10c per cwt higher than next best sale. Only a few lots went upwards of $7.85 and most sales were at $7.00@7.85. Run Friday 995. The very meager offerings made a steady range. One load of 1,450-lb offerings brought $8.35. As compared with the close of the previous week, choice to prime lots went 10c higher, the medium to good kinds sold strong, while the common to plain grades declined 20@35c. Top for the week by 10c per cwt was $8.70, obtained by us for 17 head of 1,510-lb branded grade Herefords from the feed lot of Jacob Weiss & Sons, Denison, Ia.

Arrivals of 22,003 cattle Monday were slightly in excess of buyers' wants. Strictly good to prime offerings sold steady with last week's close, but other kinds were dull sale at 10c lower prices. Partiality was shown for the well-fatted lots, both light and heavy, by the local and eastern buyers. A trainload of Texas steers and rather liberal supplies at the River markets of grassers materially hurt the sale of the $6.00@7.25 natives. Top price was $8.75, paid for two lots of prime Angus beeves of 1,558 lbs average from Iowa. Tuesday receipts 2,235. It was a weak to 10c lower deal. Fortunately the supply was small, as demand from all sources was at low ebb. This was particularly true of the outside demand, the eastern beef trade being reported in poorer shape. Best offerings here were 1,296 and 1,316-lb distillery steers at $7.80. Wednesday supply of 18,000 far above all expectations, especially with the eastern beef trade in such bad condition. Prices for the $6.75@7.65 grades were 25@35c lower than Monday, with other kinds 10@20c down. Three loads of prime heavy beeves from Illinois brought $8.60.

COWS AND HEIFERS.

Sellers were enabled to check the downward trend of prices for cows and heifers Thursday last week under a very light run. However, demand was narrow. A big string of extra choice 1,090-lb South Dakota heifers reached $7.25. A scant supply Friday made steady prices with the previous day and went mostly 15c lower than finish of previous week.

On the initial market day this week prices were generally steady, although later in the session all price changes for medium and plain grass-fed offerings tended towards a lower basis. The latter were fairly numerous, while choice grades were in short supply. The 28 head of 776-lb yearling cattle which brought $7.75 were principally heifers. The price was top by a big margin and the sale was made by us for H. J. Cleveland of Rochelle, Ill. In spite of the moderate run Tuesday prices were hammered down to the extent of 10@15c, with instances as much as 25c for the less desirable grassy lots. Offerings which bore the brunt of the decline were those of value below $5.50. Mostly 25c lower market Wednesday. Demand was slack from both local and outside buyers.

BULLS.

Prices held steady Thursday last week in spite of buyers' efforts to lower the range. Choice butchers reached $6.50, with selected bolognas making $5.70. Market ruled steady Friday, but showed 15@25c advance over finish of previous week.

Any price changes at the start of this week were lower. Yearlings were scarce and best sellers. Rates fell 15@25c Tuesday, bolognas showing most loss. Wednesday trade 10@15c down.

CALVES.

Outsiders paid 10@25c advance Thursday last week at the start, but after these orders were filled the packers came into the trade and put up their droves at prices no higher than the previous day. Fancy 130 lbs average reached $8.00, top for week and obtained by us, but just as good had to go at $7.75 later on. While the better grades sold steady Friday, plain and medium lots showed a weaker basis. Top to regulars was $7.60, although a few prime vealers made $7.75@8.00.

Prices held about steady on initial market day this week. A few prime vealers sold at $7.75@8.00 to outsiders, but it was a $7.50 market for bunches that went to packers. Tuesday market was strong to 25c higher, with packers paying up to $8.00 and outsiders $8.25 for tops. Good to choice grades steady Wednesday and others 15@25c lower.

A steady to weak market Thursday last week, the plainer kinds being in dull request. Demand from all sources was quite limited. All price changes Friday tended towards weakness. The well-bred offerings showed a steady price basis with close of previous week and other kinds 15@25c decline, plain and medium lots bearing brunt of break. Not until corn planting is finished is their expectation of a broader outlet.

Where prices showed any change Monday they were lower. Demand was quickly reduced from all sources. Some of the country buyers are of the belief that prices will work still lower as soon as grassers commence to move to market in larger numbers. Bulk of trading Tuesday was 10c lower than last week's close and 25@35c down from two weeks ago. There was a price break of 10@15c Wednesday, and outlet was rather narrow at the lower range.

Buyers had an inning Thursday last week. The run was 23,254, and both speculators and shippers were weak props under the market. Result was a 5@10c decline. Top $9.75, paid for all weights. Bulk business at $9.65@9.70. Stag market was demoralized, only choice light weights going above $10. Receipts Friday 18,538. Draggy trade all day at 5@10c lower rates, with close at the bottom. Top $9.72½ for 170 lbs average, with bulk arrivals at $9.60@9.65. Demoralized trade in stags, prices being 75c@$1.00 lower. Marketing Saturday 7,218. A steady to strong deal. Summit $9.70, with most trading at $9.60@9.65. As compared with previous week's close prices were mostly 10@15c lower.

At the start this week 32,620 hogs were recorded, being about as many as expected. Opening steady, market in middle ruled 5c higher, but the close was weak. Quality was very good and weights heavy. Light hogs were hard to find and one selected lot topped the trade at $9.77½. Most business transacted around $9.70. Marketing Tuesday 13,887. Starting steady to strong, the trade settled to a 5c lower basis and finished a full 10c off. A speculator paid up to $9.80 for a load and resold them later at $9.70. Most of the early business was at $9.70@9.75 for the good kinds, but it was hard to beat $9.65 to regulars. After ten o'clock $9.60 was about the limit, some pretty good mixed selling for less money. Run Wednesday 30,000. Opening 15@20c lower, market closed mostly 25c down from the previous day's average. Pinnacle $9.55 and most trading at $9.40@9.45.

*Sold by Clay, Robinson & Co.

Marketing Thursday last week 11,806. Dull, draggy trade at mostly 25c lower prices for sheep and yearlings. Best wethers brought $5.85. Rates for lambs fell 10@25c, with most later trading at the outside decline. Two lots of prime Colorados reached $9.00 early, but $8.90 obtained extra choice ones. Spring lambs brought $9.00@9.50. There was practically no eastern outlet, the markets there being in a semi-demoralized condition. Supply Friday 4,316. Owing to very unsatisfactory bids, many of the sheep were locked up. A few sales were negotiated about steady with previous day. Lambs were generally 25c lower. Practicable top for sheep was $5.75, realized for prime native ewes. Pinnacle for lambs was $8.70, paid for a fancy class of 74-lb Colorados. As compared with close of previous week, bulk lambs were 40@75c lower and sheep and yearlings 65@85c down.

Monday run was 16,006. Market for both sheep and lambs was in very bad condition. Demand from all sources was very limited and prices generally 25c lower. Top sheep went at $5.65, we obtaining this for 112-lb Ohio wethers. Top lambs made $8.60 for Colorados, we landing three different strings at the price, with best spring lambs at $9.25. Supply Tuesday 8,881. Generally a steady trade in lambs and 10@15c lower one in sheep. One deck of fancy Colorado lambs reached $8.65 and a small lot of fancy spring lambs brought $9.50. The limit for heavy wethers was $5.35, a string of 114 lbs average having to go at this price. Showing the sharp break in the sheep market, these would have gone up to $8.35 or the high spot. On May 9 a cut-off of these wethers sold at $7.10, on May 16 at $6.20 and on May 23 at $5.50. Receipts Wednesday 13,000. Sheep sold steady and lambs went 10@15c higher, tops making $8.75, obtained by us for Colorados.

International Show News Items.

The International Live Stock Exposition Association directors held their spring, or classification, meeting in the rooms of the Saddle and S[illegible] Club, Union Stock Yards, Chicago. It was decid[illegible] hold the International Live Stock Exposition Nov. 26 to Dec. 3, 1910. It was found that practically all the live stock associations had increased their appropriations for special prizes to be offered in connection with this year's show. To recognize the breeders as well as the feeders, two additional beautiful silver trophies will be offered by the Exposition, one to the breeder of the Grand Champion carload of fat cattle and another to the breeder of the Grand Champion carload of feeder cattle of the show. A new rule was adopted, requiring a three months' ownership of at least twelve of the cattle constituting each carload entered in the fat carload classes, making it necessary to have the exhibitor make affidavit to this effect and to have this affidavit accompany the entry. The "tenant farmer" condition in America and how he could be induced to take up the production of improved domestic animals with the view to increasing the yield of food products from our American farms is a subject that will be given the encouragement and full support of the International Live Stock Exposition in the future. It was the consensus of opinion that the 1910 show would in every respect outclass any of its predecessors, and it was decided to put forth every effort to bring about this result.

Continuance of High Prices.

We have frequently expressed the opinion that the period of low prices for farm products is past; and, while we do not expect the present reign of high prices to continue indefinitely, we do believe there will be good money for every man on good land who farms right and raises the right kind of stuff, whether that be meats or grain, comments Wallaces' Farmer. A recent letter from the president of the New York Central Railroad expresses an opinion which, as the lawyers say, "goes on all fours" with the above We quote:

"The fundamental thing and the one which must be secured if the country is to prosper is the doubling of the productive capacity of the nation's farms. I have talked with some farmers who fear that increasing the productive capacity of the farms will result in a serious slump in prices; but I do not believe there is any ground whatever for this fear. With population and consumption increasing so rapidly, the best we can hope to do in the way of increasing the production of our farms will, in my judgment, only serve to hold prices at about their present level. I do not believe there is any danger whatever of a reduction in the price of these products."

This, it must be remembered is the view of a former Iowan, president of an eastern railroad that has bought three or four farms in New York state, has engaged a very high-class man as superintendent of these farms, and proposes to demonstrate what can be done in the way of bringing them back to their original fertility.

Census Irrigation Investigation.

The Census Bureau is proceeding actively with the irrigation investigation required by act of Congress approved Feb. 25. It is expected to develop exact and practical information relative to the investment of capital in the various projects and enterprises, and also as to the location and prices of irrigated lands now open to settlement, in the arid and semi-arid states of the Union. Irrigation experts estimate that there are between 40,000,000 and 50,000,000 acres of land susceptible of irrigation, of which about one-third are actually under irrigation. Of the latter there are fully 5,000,000 acres not yet taken up by settlers. It is estimated that the completion of this work will add to the farm area of the United States an acreage equaling the farm area contained in the New England states.

The present census investigation has a breadth of scope not given to any other branch of the Government. It should meet the constantly increasing demand from farmers and others for definite information enabling them to obtain and settle upon irrigated lands.

The limit for shorn lambs on the Chicago market May 23 was $8.60. We landed three different strings at the price, sales following: For E. C. Giddings, 407 head of 85 lbs average; Rudolph & Co., 495 head, 81 lbs, and F. J. Schroeder, 244, 80 lbs. The above gentlemen are all from Larimer county, Colo.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

C. C. Clawson, buyer and shipper, Cedar county, Mo., last week had a shipment of hogs to our Kansas City house.

C. M. Wheeler, extensive buyer, Hamilton county, Neb., last week had a shipment of hogs to our South Omaha house.

Henry Heiman, big stock buyer, Mitchell county, Kan., had another shipment of hogs to our Kansas City house last week.

The popular shippers, Thomas & Williams, Livingston county, Mo., sold hogs through our Kansas City house last week.

T. Tinsdale, with large feed lots in Merrick county, Neb., sold cattle and hogs through our South Omaha house last week.

Hans Hansen, prominent feeder, had two loads of cattle at Sioux City on Monday last week, shipped to us from Cedar county, Neb.

T. T. Plummer, Keith county, Neb., marketed a load of hogs, averaging 263 lbs, through our Denver house May 16 at $9.30, the top.

Farley & Catlett, Hamilton county, Neb., old-time patrons of our South Omaha house, had three loads of hogs there Tuesday last week.

Thompson & Sons, prominent in shipping circles, Todd county, Minn., last week consigned a mixed load to our house at South St. Paul.

Walter Brooks, Okfuskee county, Okla., had cattle in the quarantine division at Kansas City on Monday last week which our house sold at $5.75.

John Johnson, Bent county, Colo., writes our Kansas City house: "I am more than pleased with sales of lambs. Thank you for past favors."

Dickerson Bros., Marion county, Kan., writes our Kansas City house: "Thank you for your way of handling our shipments the past season."

Wallace & Harvey, frequent shippers, Anderson county, Kan., and regular patrons of our Kansas City house, had in a shipment of hogs last week.

James Paradise, Richardson county, Neb., one of the old-time patrons of our Kansas City house, had a shipment of cattle on that market last week.

Harry Brown, well-known feeder of Weld county, Colo., was on the Denver market last week with three cars of cows which we sold at satisfactory prices.

O. Malberg, prominent shipper, with headquarters in Pierce county, Wis., disposed of a load of mixed stock through our South St. Paul house last week.

J. F. Bundy, progressive farmer and stockman, Burt county, Neb., was at South Omaha last week with a car of steers to us that sold quite satisfactorily.

A. W. Sultzbaugh, Nemaha county, Neb., writes our South St. Joseph house: "I am well pleased with your handling of my consignment. Accept thanks."

Chambers Bros., who do an extensive buying business in Cass county, Mo., were on the Kansas City market Tuesday last week with a shipment of hogs to us.

Our South St. Joseph house was favored last week with a shipment of sheep from W. J. Elliott, Andrew county, Mo. He is one of the leading stockmen of that part.

W. A. Wight, Bent county, Colo., whose sheep feeding operations are very extensive, was at Kansas City last week with two consignments of shorn lambs to our house.

Pinnacle for beef steers at Kansas City on May 17 was $8.25, obtained by our house for 18 head of 1,421 lbs average, shipped by C. G. Russell, Marshall county, Kan.

Luther Van Doren, Ottawa county, Kan., had 32 steers and heifers mixed to our Kansas City house Tuesday last week which averaged 679 lbs and brought $7.10.

Montgomery county, Kan., was represented on the Kansas City hog market last week with a shipment from Goodell & Johnson, regular shippers and good patrons of ours.

J. M. Devers, a prominent stockman and farmer, Butler county, Neb., had a load of 1,238-lb cattle to our South Omaha house Tuesday last week good enough to bring $7.50.

Fowler & Tod, Wabarenell county, Kan., who enjoy the reputation of being the largest cattle feeders in the Sunflower state, had a shipment to our Kansas City house last week.

G. A. Teitweiler and D. A. Large, Edwards county, Tex., each had shipments of goats on the Kansas City market May 17 which our house sold at the top prices of $3.75 and $3.85.

The 98 spring lambs of 56 lbs average which made $9.50, the extreme top by 25c per cwt at Chicago on May 18, were handled by us and marketed by A. L. Ward, Shelby county, Ill.

JACOB WEISS OF DENISON, IA.

Our staff photographer snapped Mr. Weiss while on the Chicago market with cattle to Clay, Robinson & Co. Mr. Weiss is one of those German-Americans who has contributed much to this country's welfare—the type of citizen that Ex-President Roosevelt extols so highly. Mr. Weiss landed in Chicago about thirty years ago, coming from Alsace-Lorraine, Germany. But afterwards he wisely moved to the country, going to Iowa. He now owns 600 acres of valuable farming land, feeds several hundred cattle, hogs and sheep every year, and is rated as one of the best farmers and feeders is the Hawkeye state. Mr. Weiss has shipped to Clay, Robinson & Co. for many years. He is an excellent example of the saying "a pleased customer is the best advertisement," for he tells all stockmen whom he meets that there is only one safe and reliable road to best service—the C. R. & Co. route.

Last week our Denver house handled hogs for the following well-known feeders: John Welty, Sagnache county, Colo.; O. W. Jergens and J. E. Labertew, Scotts Bluff county, Neb.

Top of hog market at Kansas City on May 17 proved $9.55 and was secured by our house for 73 head, averaging 226 lbs, marketed by G. N. Merryfield, Ottawa county, Kan.

M. L. Marshall, Mitchell county, Kan., a regular buyer; H. W Estes, Fewton county, Mo., a frequent shipper, and W. E. Barnard, Barton county, Mo., a large dealer, each disposed of a consignment of hogs last week through our Kansas City firm.

H. C. Talbott, Barton county, Kan., on Wednesday of last week sold through our East St. Louis house two cars of 1,182-lb beef steers at $7.65. These cattle were Angus, branded, two-thirds fat and of fair to good quality. On the same day they disposed of 21 of fair quality, half fat, 1,165 lbs average at $7.00 for Thomas Hyde, Green county, Ill.

J. N. Rardin and J. B. Dougherty were among those who had their initial shipments to us Wednesday last week and they were glad that they made the trial consignment. Both hail from Coles county, Ill. The former party, prominent farmer and feeder, had in a load of steers, and the latter, regular shipper, a mixed load of butcher stock and hogs.

Extreme top for shorn lambs at Kansas City on May 16 was $8.65, obtained by our house for offerings sent in by Wallace & White, Rio Grande county, Colo., and White & Mitchell, Bent county, Colo. Next best price was $8.60, also secured by us for shipments from Robb Bros., Rio Grande county, Colo., and Hillman & Lindstrom, Bent county, Colo.

R. G. Springer, postmaster at Timnath, Colo., and a large feeder, was on the South St. Joseph market May 16 with the last of his season's output. Our house sold for him 793 wooled lambs, averaging 81 lbs, at $8.85, extreme top of the market. The quality of Mr. Springer's lambs indicated that he understands finishing lambs as well as handling Uncle Sam's mail.

J. A. Smith, Kingsbury county, S. D., had a load of short-fed steers and cows at Sioux City on Monday last week and expressed himself as being well pleased with our service. He said the pig crop in his part was very good. Mr. Smith further remarked that he made more money handling stock the past winter than ever before and thinks prices are exceedingly high.

M. Bailey, progressive farmer and feeder, Des Moines county, Ia., sold through our firm Wednesday last week 20 head of 1,271-lb beef steers at $7.50. These cattle were fed only four months and Mr. Bailey was delighted with the price. They cost $4.00 when put in the feed lot and he secured the corn at 50c, against 75c a year ago. We sold the cattle at $1.00 advance over offerings of a similar grade one year ago. This is the second year that Mr. Bailey has favored us with his consignments.

Dr. Curtis Atkinson, prominent physician, Larimer county, Colo., and who also conducts a farm and lamb feeding plant, has wound up his season's lamb shipments, selling all through our house. The doctor has shipped to our houses at South Omaha, South St. Joseph and Chicago during the past four years. The late Cephas Atkinson, of Indiana, was his uncle and Dr. Atkinson stated that he was one of the first patrons of Clay, Robinson & Co. The doctor said that Northern Colorado has received a good wetting down and that crops are now in excellent condition.

We desire to mention the following prominent stockmen who were represented on the Kansas City market last week and for whom we disposed of offerings at satisfactory prices: C. A. Bloom, Tom Green county, Tex.; Rose & Thompson and Joseph Higgins, Love county, Okla.; Gephardt & Son, Otero county, Colo.; W. J. Donnelly, Canadian county, Okla.; J. H. Morgan, Denton county, Tex.; M. Lill & Son, Sedgwick county, Kan.; Howenstein Bros., Washita county, Okla.; W. S. Smith, Bent county, Colo.; W. S. Tipton and Mastin & Nettrouer, Marion county, Kan.; T. R. Edwards, Richard county, Neb.; Hadley Bros., Redwillow county, Neb.; R. A. Tynan, Richardson county, Neb.; I. B. Moorhouse, Clyde county, Kan.; L. Stafford, Republic county, Kan.; F. Schwab, Dickinson county, Kan.; Beckman & Thomas, Atchison county, Kan.; Corrick & Wylie, Gove county, Kan.; C. Cope, Stone county, Mo.; G. R. Hamlin, Norton county, Kan.; J. H. Summers, Mitchell county, Kan.; H. E. McKee, Ottawa county, Kan.; S. R. Sinkey, Miami county, Kan.; R. M. Reeder, Cedar county, Ia.; Marshall & Judy, Cowley county, Kan.; M. E. Webb, Trego county, Kan.; Hillman & Lindstrom, Bent county, Colo.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

Among the Colorado shippers to our Kansas City house Monday of last week were Roediger & McHodgkins, Morgan county, who had in a large string of steers that brought $7.25.

Chas. Shreiner, whose bank at Kerrville, Tex., is recognized as one of the leading financial institutions in Southwest Texas, had three cars of goats to our Kansas City house last week.

F. A. Furness, progressive farmer, Cedar county, Neb., secured the very satisfactory and strong price of $7.75 for 17 head of branded western beeves of fair quality through us Thursday last week.

Frank Curley, Plymouth county, Ia., calledon our Sioux City house and stated that the pig crop in his locality is rather poor. Some corn has been planted and quite a little replanting is necessary.

F. B. White, one of our regular patrons and a heavy feeder and shipper, DeKalk county, Mo., was on the South St. Joseph market last week with both sheep and hogs which sold at satisfactory prices.

M. F. Franke, Brown county, Kan.: "I shipped my cattle to your firm in Kansas City. Was on the market May 10 and my steers sold for $7.75, averaging 1,306 lbs, and was greatly pleased with sale."

R. N. Mills, Wright county, Minn., a regular and weekly shipper to our South St. Paul house, was in May 18 with a load of hogs that averaged 251 lbs and landed at $9.50, being summit by 5c per cwt.

L. B. McLean, W Tabor, M. Humbrick, W. L. Goodwin, J. B. McKeen and C. L. Harmsberger, Pierce county, Wis., jointly favored us with a mixed car of hogs and sheep at South St. Paul last week.

On May 18 we topped the hog market at South St. Joseph with 62 head averaging 278 lbs, at $9.60, shipped H. Williamson, Jefferson county, Neb., and 56 of 309 lbs average, sent in by E. C. Whitford, Fairfax, Mo.

E. E. Smith, Redwillow county, Neb., who does an extensive feeding and shipping business, had a load of 1,383-lb steers to our Kansas City house May 16 which went at $7.90, within 10c per cwt of the top.

Ed. J. Hogan, Wm. Schwandt and Geo. Williamson, Saint Croix county, Wis., progressive farmers and feeders, had a shipment of cattle to our South St. Paul house last week which sold at satisfactory prices.

J. M. Cartwright, Dodge county, Minn.: "We have not had any rain since last fall. Think it is too late for a good hay crop now if rain should come. Grain looks bad and very thin. Thank you for market reports."

R. W. Simpson, a noted hog raiser and who is gaining a great reputation in feeding cattle circles, had in from Dupage county, Ill., on Thursday last week 17 plain quality 1,010-lb steers which we landed at $7.25.

Snyder & Roediger, Morgan county, Colo., among the largest feeders of that state, had at South St. Joseph on Monday and Tuesday last week six cars of shorn lambs which our house sold at $8.60, averaging 71 lbs.

W. J. Reeves, Fayette county, Ill., marketed through our East St. Louis house Thursday last week 17 steers, averaging 1,295 lbs, at $7.65. These cattle were of rather plain quality, coarse and about two-thirds fat.

William Eggers, Crawford county, Ia.: "I shipped my stock to your house at South Omaha and was well pleased with their work. Enclosed find $1.00 for which send me REPORT two years. I cannot get along without it."

Frank L. Pim, proprietor of the Prairie View herd of Red Polled cattle, Lucas county, Ia., writes our Kansas City house: "Goats arrived in good condition. They are a dandy lot. Thanks for the way you filled my order."

Makes Money in Cattle Feeding.

"Financial success in stock feeding depends a good deal on how a man gets in and gets out, and not altogether on his ability as a feeder," remarked W. L. Moreland of Atlantic, Ia., who was here Monday with a string of cattle to Clay, Robinson & Co. "Under present conditions it is possible for a feeder to clean up a barrel of money and equally possible for him to lose heavily. Undoubtedly most feeders have made good money on their cattle, hogs or sheep feeding operations the past winter, and some of them have doubtless made small fortunes. Yet the great success one man may have attained does not necessarily indicate that his friends and neighbors can do as well, though they might know fully as much about the business. Financial returns from my season's cattle feeding have thus far this year proved very satisfactory. I got in right when purchasing the feeders and sold on a good high market. The cattle did well and those of them that are sold have made lots of money.

"Stock feeding is the biggest kind of a gamble, and the man who is not a good loser and does not keep his head after a successful season's feeding had best stay out of the business. None of us know when something in the shape of widespread labor troubles, a panic or hard times will hit the market a blow below the belt that will knock the daylights out of prices. The good ship of state is never in such danger as when going at such a fast clip as it is at the present time. Personally I believe the great mass of the American people are living beyond their means and that the slowing up and the exercising of a greater conservatism in all lines of commercial activity is the only thing that will stave off trouble for us all. The average farmer is beginning to go at about as fast a gait as anyone else. It seems that the prosperity wave struck him all at once and turned his head."

Mr. Moreland has been a farmer all his life, fed live stock thirty years and shipped to Clay, Robinson & Co at Chicago and South Omaha around twenty years, and bought his feeding cattle through our houses at Denver and South Omaha for many years. He migrated from Illinois to Iowa in 1862. His feeding operations are usually 300 cattle and 400 hogs annually, and he owns and farms 240 acres of land worth $125@150 an acre. There is no better farmer, feeder, judge of cattle, or fellow, than "Billy" Moreland.

F. L. Falmlen represented Hamilton county, Neb., on the market Wednesday last week with 30 beef steers of 1,436 lbs average which we sold at $8.25. They were of fair to good quality and uneven, yet in good flesh, reflecting Mr. Falmlen's ability as a feeder.

Ed. Ferber, Fond du Lac county, Wis., a regular feeder and who we are proud to [illegible] among our customers, disposed of a load of steers through our house last week at a very satisfactory price.

J. W. Bridenbaugh, Maricopa county, Ariz., writes our Sioux City house: "Your letters in regard to the selling of our stock have been received and I find the placing of the proceeds and the sale of all stock was very satisfactory."

Ed Sutton, Lincoln county, S. D., sold a load of hogs through our Sioux City house Monday last week and was well pleased with the price and had a very light shrink. Mr. Sutton is a regular customer of ours and a prosperous farmer.

Robert Real, Kerr county, Tex., who has shipped goats to our Kansas City house each season for the past several years, had a consignment there May 18 which made $3.90, being 5c per cwt higher than any other goats brought that day.

H. A. Gudger, Phillips county, Kan., accompanied the following shipment of sheep to the South St. Joseph market Wednesday last week, which we sold at very high wrices: 167 shorn lambs, 67 lbs, at $8.60, and 28 shorn ewes, 78 lbs, at $6.00.

O. L. Knowlton, Weld county, Colo., writes our Denver house: "Received returns for sale of hogs. Thank you for satisfactory sale." W. F. Hall, of same county also writes: "Am well pleased with the price you obtained for the 18 hogs."

W. F. Widick, frequent and popular shipper, Webster county, Ia., was represented on the market Wednesday last week with a mixed load of hogs, calves and feeding cattle. We have the honor of handling all of Mr. Widick's shipments.

Frank Robbins, Mills county, Ia., pioneer settler of that country, large land owner and extensive feeder, had in the clean-up of his winter's feeding Wednesday last week. The lot comprised 52 steers, averaged 1,207 lbs and we obtained $7.55 for them.

C. E. Peterson, DeKalb county, Mo., who was at South St. Joseph last week with a shipment of native sheep which we sold at satisfactory prices, reports native sheep not doing well in his locality, being troubled with the stomach worm. The farmers there are having best results from feeding western-bred stock.

G. L. Martin, Hancock county, Ill., was a much pleased man after learning of the prices we obtained for his butcher stock Wednesday last week. Mr. Martin is associated with J. Clark in an extensive buying and shipping capacity. Mr. Martin is popular with his fellow citizens, being assessor of Hancock county. Mr. Clark is one of the most prominent feeders in that section.

E. & H. Boyd, prominent farmers and feeders, Eaton County, Mich., write: "Early in April we sent our cattle to East Buffalo for Clay, Robinson & Co. to sell and they made us money. Twenty-five of them cost $1,125 through your company Jan. 2 and brought us $1,885. We were well satisfied. Besides, we sold $300 worth of hogs that had run with the cattle. We are under deep obligations to you for many favors, such as special information on markets, souvenirs, calendars, etc., and more than all for the REPORT. If we go to the market to buy we will give you the order."

James Loring, progressive farmer and feeder, Schuyler county, Ill., had on the market Thursday last week two loads each of cattle and hogs. Both shipments were handled by us to his entire satisfaction. The cattle were short fed, averaged 1,065 lbs and brought $7.25. They made a good gain and also netted good money. The hogs numbered 209 head, tipped the beam at 221 lbs and sold at $9.70. C. S. Loring, assistant cashier of the Schuyler County Bank, Rushville, Ill., and Lloyd Loring, both sons of Mr. Loring, accompanied the stock to market and were interested and close observers of how business is conducted on the Yards and by Clay, Robinson & Co.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

Wm. Hill, Republic county, Kan., whose popularity as sheriff is widespread in that country, favored our Kansas City house with a shipment of swine last week.

Stop and Think!

Do not be governed by habit. Find out for yourself what Clay, Robinson & Co. can do for you. If we can get you better prices for your stock than most others, is not that reason enough for consigning to us? The unsolicited testimony of thousands of customers proves that our service excels. Investigate, consider and decide that that billing shall read

Clay, Robinson & Co.

Nels Vorup, Clay county, S. D., marketed Monday 18 branded western beef steers of 1,326 lbs average for which we obtained $7.70. These cattle lacked finish.

I. O. Hull, Richlank county, N. D., consigned a car of cattle and hogs to our South St. Paul house last Friday. "I am well satisfied with the sale," said he.

Edwin Watts, Sangamon county, Ill.: "Weather is too wet for farming. Wheat, oats, clover, grass and meadows are in fine condition. Corn is mostly planted."

Burden & McCollum, Johnston county, Okla., large cattle dealers, last week obtained a satisfactory price for a shipment of cattle at Kansas City by consigning them to us.

J. E. Greub, Johnson county, Wyo.: "Thanking you for your prompt and reliable information, I enclose herewith 50c for which please continue REPORT another year."

Blankenship & Riley represented Marion county, Ill., on the East St. Louis market last week, selling a load of sheep and hogs mixed through our house at very pleasing prices.

Cox & Cobb, Barton county, Mo., probably the largest buyers and shippers from Southwestern Missouri, last week had a consignment of hogs to our Kansas City house.

R. F. Duncan, Louisa county, Ia., an old-time and popular dealer in live stock, had us sell his butcher stock last week and he expressed himself as being extra well satisfied.

Frank Owen & Son, Marshall county, Ill., write our Kansas City house: "Received goats in fine shape. They are just what we wanted. Thank you for the good choice."

Treschel & S., Clay county, Kan., had steers and heifers mixed, averaging 917 lbs, to our Kansas City house Wednesday last week which they sold at $7.40 and the hogs at $9.50.

M. Mayfield, Cooper county, Mo., one of the most prominent shippers to the East St. Louis market, sold a load of cattle through our house there at a very satisfactory price.

Wallace & White, Rio Grande county, Colo., had another shipment of their shorn lambs on the Kansas City market May 18 which our house sold at $8.75, top for that class.

C. Weborg, Thurston county, Neb., an old patron of the South Omaha market, had a shipment of cattle there last week which our house handled at very satisfactory prices.

James G. Nichols, McHenry county, Ill., prominent in feeding and dairy circles, marketed butcher stock through our firm last week. Every spring he favors us with his shipments.

M. McLain, Dunn county, Wis.: "I acknowledge receipt of your check of $5,753.31 for three cars of cattle. Taking the sales as a whole I am very well satisfied and thank you for the same."

J. L. Bennett, Cass county, Mo., old-time customers of our Kansas City house, had a shipment of cattle there Wednesday last week which we sold at $8.00 and also landed his hogs at $9.50.

E. L. Lemert, Doniphan county, Kan., had at South St. Joseph Thursday last week 261 western lambs, fed on grass and corn, which we landed at the satisfactory price of $8.50, averaging 76 lbs.

Weld county, Colo., was represented on the Denver market Monday last week by Harry Brown, the well-known feeder, who consigned three cars of cows to our house, obtaining satisfactory prices.

Last Friday our Sioux City house sold two loads of short-fed cattle for E. E. Lundquist, Cedar county, Neb. He is one of our best customers and is also one of the biggest feeders around his country.

John Gloden, progressive farmer and stockman, Renville county, Minn., was on the South St. Paul market last week with a shipment of cattle and sheep which we sold to his entire satisfaction.

J. K. Peck, Piatt county, Ill., one of the oldest shippers to the Chicago market and a frequent patron of ours, had us sell a load of his steers Wednesday last week, they bringing very pleasing prices.

W. J. Landon, Winona county, Minn., prominent farmer and feeder, sold through our firm at the start of this week 35 beef steers of 1,404 lbs average at $7.75. These cattle were rather coarse and uneven.

Stoltze Bros., Dixon county, Neb., had in a load each of cattle and hogs to our Sioux City house last week. Herman Stoltze, who accompanied the shipment, expressed himself well satisfied with the weights and price.

John Bonderson, Dixon county, Neb., one of the most prominent feeders in Northeastern Nebraska, marketed through our Sioux City house last week a load of light, short-fed heifers at $6.00. He was well pleased with the sale.

Conway & Mason represented Union county, Ky., on the East St. Louis cattle market Monday with two loads of Angus yearling steers of 735 lbs average and we sold them at $7.30. These cattle were of good quality and two-thirds fat.

The Elkport Co-operative Co., Clayton county, Ia., sold a string of 120-lb veal calves through our firm Thursday last week at $7.85. The price was the practicable top, as this lot went straight, while those at $8.00 were fancy and had to be sorted. The above firm deal in live stock extensively and we are proud to say that they have favored us with their shipments for the past several months.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

John Ray, prominent stockman, Madison county, Neb., was on the South Omaha market Monday with four cars of steers that we sold at $7.35, averaging 1,301 lbs.

May 21 our South Omaha house had two cars of hogs from O. J. Gehrig and one from W. A. Kretzinger, both progressive young farmers of Carrol county, Ia.

D. E. Ingram, progressive farmer and feeder, Buena Vista county, Ia., was on the Monday market with beef steers and hogs and he was highly pleased with our service.

L. F. Rapp, for twenty years located in Custer county, Neb., was on the South Omaha market Monday with a car of 234-lb hogs that we sold at $9.45, a very satisfactory price.

J. Arngrimson, representative farmer and feeder, Lincoln county, Minn., had a shipment of steers and hogs to us Monday and he now believes more than ever that "Clay, Robinson & Co. are O. K."

Evans & Richards, Larimer county, Colo., were on the South St. Joseph market May 23 with three double decks of shorn lambs, averaging 82 lbs, which our house sold at $8.40, the extreme top.

J. E. Major, Belmont county, Ohio: "Received check and account sales of sheep all right. I am highly pleased with your sales and appreciate your honesty and best efforts. I will have more to follow."

George Gohlinghurst, regular feeder and prominent farmer, Fremont county, Ia., brought in a shipment of steers, butcher stock and hogs Monday and said that he was delighted with the prices we obtained.

Lincoln Frantz, Bonhomme county, S. D., sold two loads of hogs and one of cattle through our Sioux City house last week. He is one of our best customers and is one of the heaviest shippers in South Dakota.

W. P. Turner, Ringgold county, Ia., a steady patron of ours, was in Monday with a shipment of steers, butcher stock and hogs which made satisfactory prices. He remarked that these cattle made him very good money.

Green & Beatty, one of the extensive shipping firms to the Chicago market, had in from McHenry county, Ill., their usual shipment of butcher stock at the start of this week, obtaining very satisfactory prices for the same through us.

Our liberal patron and friend, Fred Schulte, Pierce county, Wis., was at South St. Paul with two cars last Friday. As already mentioned, Mr. Schulte ships for the farmers in his neighborhood. Thirty-one owners were represented in the shipment.

J. E. Boog-Scott, breeder of Hereford cattle, Coleman county, Tex.: "We have just had the heaviest rain that has fallen here in two years, and everything is looking up. We will run some cattle out of the territory next week. They are doing well there."

P. W. Kennell, Woodford county, Ill., regular shipper and a good feeder, was on our cattle books Wednesday last week and we obtained a price that thoroughly satisfied him. Mr. Kennel has several brothers in the same vicinity that are also excellent feeders of live stock.

W. D. M., cashier, Longmont, Colo.: "I am in receipt of account sales for two cars of lambs. Mr. Davies has been in to see me and states that your treatment was fine and that he believes that you obtained the best price possible for this shipment. I think that we will send three or four more cars next week."

E. J. Howe, progressive farmer and feeder, Mitchell county, Ia., was on the market Monday with 15 head of 774-lb steers which we landed at $7.15. These cattle possessed desirable quality and had they been in desirable flesh condition would have brought 60@65c per cwt more than they did.

W. J. Billick, Mahaska county, Ia., a prominent feeder and extensive land owner, marketed butcher stock through our firm on the initial market day this week and stated he was never so well pleased before. "I always ship to you and must say that your service is getting better right along."

O. J. Nordlie, owner of 1,600 acres of farm land in Walsh county, N. D., had his initial shipment to our South St. Paul house Monday. Mr. Nordlie's hogs, which were of his own raising and feeding, commanded the top figure of $9.40, averaging 250 lbs. He expressed himself as well pleased.

Ed. Merricks, of the progessive firm of Merricks Bros., Watonwan county, Minn., together with his nephew, Ivan Merricks, accompanied two cars of stock to South St. Paul on May 23, same being handled by us. One load, exclusively hogs, we succeeded in getting $9.40 for, the top figure.

J. B. Cline, Lyon county, Ia., was on the Sioux City market last week with a load of hogs. Mr. Cline is one of our good customers. We sell his stock in Chicago and Sioux City, while our South Omaha house purchase sheep for him. He says Clay, Robinson & Co.'s service is very satisfactory.

C. R. Hunt & Son, Cass county, Ia., noted feeders and owners of some of the best farming land in the Middle West, were represented on the market at the start of this week with 35 branded western beef steers of 1,483 lbs average. We sold them at $8.50. They were of fair to good quality and had a splendid top

J. F. Greene, Fremont county, Ia.: "Stocker and feeding cattle are higher than a 'cat's back,' which, along with corn dear in price, makes the feeding proposition look a little discouraging. I have a nice crop of spring pigs. Planting is nearly finished, although some replanting has to be done. The weather is a little too cold and seed corn is weak."

W. A. Snyder, Denver county, Colo., writes our South St. Joseph house: "Beg to acknowledge receipt of account sales for six cars of lambs. Wish to assure you that the sales were very satisfactory to me. You 'skinned' Chicago right this time. Our lambs at South St. Joseph netted considerably more money than the cut-off that went to Chicago."

Last week our Denver house handled consignments of hogs for the following well-known shippers: J. E. Labertew, Scotts Bluff county, Neb.: John Welty, Costilla county, Colo.: O. W. Jergens, Scotts Bluff county, Neb.: T. T. Plummer, Keith county, Neb.: J. W. Plessinger, Sedgwick county, Colo.; Dr. C. A. Atkinson, Larimer county, Colo.: A. Wild, Larimer county, Colo.

T. K. Smiley, Decatur county, Ind.: "I saved 80 lambs out of the 100 western ewes that you bought for me last October. Part of them came in that big snow in February. All of the ewes stayed out on grass all winter, yet only three died out of the 100. The cattle that I got in January are doing fairly well. We are short on clover pasture in this part of Indiana."

Last week our East St. Louis house had the pleasure of handing cattle for the following prominent parties: A. C. Talbott, Barton county, Kan.: Thomas Hyde, Greene county, Ill.: E. B. Harned, Cooper county, Mo.: W. J. Reeves, Fayette county, Ill.; J. B. Griffith, Webster county, Mo.: Gladney & Mitchell, Lincoln county, Mo.: J. Kinkead, Benton county, Mo.; A. D. Wells, Polk county, Mo.

E. Draheim, Mills county, Ia., well known throughout the Middle West as an excellent feeder and farmer, was the owner and we the sellers of 17 head of 1,404-lb beef steers which brought $8.50 on the initial market day this week. They were grade Angus and Herefords and while of good quality were lacking a little in finish. Mr. Draheim's son h[illegible] made his mark in Iowa farming and feeding circles.

York county, Neb., was represented on the cattle market Monday with 73 branded western beeves of 1,281 lbs average which we sold at $7.90. They were grade Herefords and possessed good quality. Had they averaged 200 lbs more they would have made around $8.40, as competition for the fat heavier weight cattle of good quality is very keen now. Bedient Bros., who are excellent feeders, were the feeders and shippers of these cattle.

John Nisbet, together with C. W. Stephens, both of Oliver county, N. D., were represented at South St. Paul on May 21 with a double deck of sheep and lambs, which we handled. Mr. Nisbet's lambs, of which there were 82, averaged 85 lbs and sold at $8.50, his yearlings, 126 lbs, at $7.00, while 59 Mr. Stephen's lambs, 70 lbs, brought $8.00. Mr. Nisbet, who accompanied the shipment, stated that there was little stock in his country, as the farmers were largely interested in grain raising. He also said that seeding was about completed and conditions were very favorable for a good crop yield.

Thursday last week our South St. Joseph house was favored with shipments of hogs from the following, the first two having two loads each and the remainder one load each: E. C. Christy, Webster county, Neb.: H. S. Rhoades, Atchison county, Mo.; S. D. Lantz, Saline county, Neb.: I. W. Teller, Nucholls county, Neb.: S. S. Crilly, Franklin county, Neb.: Wehrlie & Abbott, Gage county, Neb.; M. A. Littlejohn, Gage county, Neb.; F. Harshman, Decatur county, Kan.; G. H. Blessing, Gentry county, Mo.; W. Freet, Atchison county, Mo.; J. F. McQueen, Page county, Ia.

The initial market day this week, through our selling service, we brought good cheer to the following prominent farmers and feeders who had in cattle: L. Frantz, Bonhomme county, S. D.; P. E. Huffman, Woodbury county, Ia.; W. A. Robbins, McDonough county, Ill.; W. L. Moreland, Cass county, Ia.; O. B. Simpson, Kossuth county, Ia.; W. Lakings, Turner county, S. D.; G. H. Ballard, Blue Earth county, Minn.; H. Miller, Grundy county, Ia.; L. W. Peterson, Ida county, Ia.; Ed. DeLong, Calhoun county, Ia.

It was our good fortune to render very pleasing account sales to the following parties who had hogs on the market at the start of this week: P. Hopley & Son and W. L. Moreland, Cass county, Ia.; Pyle & H., Franklin county, Ia.; Bell & Lutz, Fremont county, Ia.; F. A. Hesley, Pottawattamie county, Ia.; George Walters and B. F. Dragoo, Woodbury county, Ia.; A. W. Hawley, Humboldt county, Ia.; W. C. Bohen, O'Brien county, Ia.; A. C. Weston, Sac county, Ia.

Last week the following parties, who are well and favorably known either in feeding or buying circles, favored us with their shipments of hogs, and we do not hesitate to say that the service rendered by us will cause them to again appear on our hog books: R H. Allerton, Piatt county, Ill.; H. R. Laird, Fremont county, Ia.; F. Belz, Butler county, Ia.; Uhl & Bloom, Buchanan county, Ia.; C. L. Keagle, Ford county, Ill.; E. L. Hayes, Ogle county, Ill.; First National Bank, Iroquois county, Ill.; Paine & McDonald, Kossuth county, Ia.; Smith Bros., Cedar county, Ia.; F. R. Hesley, Pottawattamie county, Ia.; R. S. Keat, Carroll county, Ia.; C. P. Downing, Monona county, Ia.; E. Bogue, Lincoln county, S. D.; P. F. Weidauer, Calhoun county, Ia.; Curry & M., Schuyler county, Ill.

Included in the well-known and popular live stock dealers who increased the hog business of our East St. Louis house last week were: C. S. Dougherty and A. J. Holt, Nodaway county, Mo.; Wilford & Page, Ballard county, Ky.; J. J. Smith, Linn county, Mo.; J. M. Mayfield and E. B. Harned, Cooper county, Mo.; Charles Brookway, R. H. Garrett and S. P. Priestly, Henry county, Mo.; Presley Robinson, Schuyler county, Mo.; K. S. McBride, Perry county, Mo.; J. E. Lindsey, Lewis county, Mo.; Harry Bell, Edgar county, Ill.; Jacoby Bros., Saline county, Mo.; Wilcox & Littrell, Randolph county, Mo.; Irvine & Duncan, Pike county, Mo.; Gladney & Mitchell, Lincoln county, Mo.; Frank Kommer, Massac county, Ill.; L. O. Nanney, Calloway county, Ky.; J. H. Patton, Gentry county, Mo.; Franken & Belt, Carroll county, Mo.; Newt Brown, White county, Ill.; Smith & Hodges, Adair county, Mo.; Thomas Dodds, Schuyler county, Ill.

Long on Pasture; Short of Cattle.

B. F. Blythe, Jefferson county, Neb.: "There are only two small bunches of cattle on feed here besides mine. There will be no summer feeding. Few stock cattle left to go out on pasture, farmers prefering to sell them out when prices were at the high point last winter. There are pastures for thousands of cattle that will not be filled this year and as a result we are having the cheapest pasturage in ten years. Prospects for fall feeding do not look promising, as the supply of hogs to follow cattle is so short that it looks like it would be out of the question to think of feeding. Our shippers can't pick up a load anywhere at one time and have to fill up the car with a few stock cattle. Considerable old corn is in the cribs about here. The planting season is now on in full blast and prospects are very promising for the new crop, as the land is breaking up in excelent shape."

Mitchell, S. D., Shorthorn Sale.

On Friday, June 3, a sale of money-making Shorthorns will be held in Mitchell, S. D., under management of the American Shorthorn Breeders' Association. The sale includes 20 bulls and 20 cows, half of which are Scotch and the others topped with superior Scotch bulls, contributed by some of the leading breeders of Iowa. N. A. Lind has consigned 8 bulls and 8 cows, part of which are by Fancy's Pride 182018 and Imp. Blackwatch 153334, a half brother of Choice Goods. Among the cows is Imp. Nonpariel 33d by Clan Alpine. H. G. McMillan & Sons contribute 5 bulls and 7 cows sired by Morning Joy 198620, a son of Joy of Morning 153003, and Lakewood Sultan 270041, a son of the great sire Whitehall Sultan. W. J. McLean is represented by 6 head carrying the blood of Valley Sovereign 239136 and other good sires. R. S. Miller has 4 head, the offering carrying the blood of Trout Creek Marquis by Spicy Marquis. Other contributers are Walpole Bros., H. M. Corwin and Wm. Taylor. These cattle have not been fitted for the show ring, but are a good, useful lot, and are presented in good, strong breeding condition and will prove useful and profitable to those who wishto improve their herds. See "ad" of sale in this issue.

Practical Poultry Book.

Miller Purvis, poultry editor of the Gazette, and widely recognized authority on that subject, is the author of a beautifully illustrated volume of 323 pages entitled "Poultry Breeding," which is just off the Breeder's Gazette press. A book that tells exactly what every poultry keeper wishes to know, and must know in order to make fowls worth keeping. "Poultry Breeding" is alphabetically arranged, so that any point on which advice is sought can be quickly found. All varieties of poultry, including also turkeys, ducks, geese and guineas, are identified with pen and camera, the pictures being instructive supplements to the text. Methods of management and feeding for profit are made simple and definite for practical use; incubation and all the problems that it brings up are fully discussed; common diseases are considered and treatment is prescribed; the art of fitting for market and exhibition is presented in detail; the best types of coops, yards and houses are illustrated and described; in short, every known fact of value to keepers of poultry of any sort is stated in concise, simple language. The most complete and useful work ever published on the subject. Price, $1.60 prepaid. Address the Breeder's Gazette, 358 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

Will Hire to Farmer.

I want to work on a farm where they have hogs. I have made a specialty of every phase of the hog question.

Have investigated the methods and practices of hog men who have made a striking success of any feature in the hog business.

By this means I have become possessed of a knowledge of producing pork by the most progressive, up-to-date methods. I have accumulated information that has cost those who tested it hundreds of dollars in time and money to secure; I am therefore prepared with this hog information that they have dug out by hard work and years of weary toil.

I feel that I am qualified as an expert to direct, show and teach this valuable knowledge to others and thereby save them from squandering money by adopting it at once without cost to them.

I will enter into a contract with anyone wishing my services for two years (I used to say four, but I was giving them so much they could not believe it real) I will charge 4c a month or $1.00 for the two years, payable in advance, and I guarantee to give you the best information and the last word on the progressive lines of hog raising, which includes feeding, handling and all things connected with the business. In addition I give you besides the two years the following premiums:

A copy of the Pig Feeders' Manual, worth dollar to anyone.

A copy of the Progressive Scientific Feeding Formula, would be worth many dollars to any hog man fattening hogs.

A copy of the Hand Book on Hog Hygiene, containing a number of recipes that have sold heretofore for $10.00 and $20.00 for farm rights.

These are in addition to my services in the monthly work in which I visit each farmer. Send $1.00, it will be the full payment for the two years' subscription and these premiums.

Many Cattle Moving Northward.

"The movement of southern cattle to the northern ranges is in full swing at the present time," writes our Denver house. "The yards here present a scene of great activity, as a large number of these cattle stop and feed and are branded there. The total receipts of southern cattle for week before last was 30,916 head. On May 18 all previous records were broken, the total receipts of southern cattle being 9,989 head. Previous to that the largest run for one day was 8,797, on June 6, 1902.

"Watson & Johnson of Gillette, Wyo., received 18 cars of the Green two year olds.

"W. L. Tillotson of Moorcroft, Wyo., received ten cars of yearling and two-year-old steers, which originated at Alamogordo, N. M.

"I. N. Bard of Cheyenne, Wyo., received a string of "CCC" twos, while F. M. Whitten of Gillette, Wyo., purchased a string of Arizonas originating at Phoenix.

"W. P. Ricketts of Gillette, Wyo., received 500 of the Wood-Hagenbarth twos, and also a like number of native cows and heifers, purchased from the Tomkins Cattle Co.

"Wallis Huldekoper, Twodot, Mont., was here Friday and received 720 of the "CCC" Arizonas. They were an exceptionally fine string of cattle, good quality, well grown and in good flesh.

"We also delivered at La Junta twenty cars of the "crowfoot" brand of cows to M. J. McMillin of Lamar, Colo., and 585 head of the "JBL" yearlings to S. J. Altman of Colorado Springs.

"At Pueblo, Colo., we delivered 1,000 head to James L. Morrison and Philip Geren of Dolores, Colo., and also 1,200 head of the Green yearlings to Chas. Wolff, of the Wolff Packing Co., Topeka, Kan., which he will run near Cimarron, Colo.

"Among other prominent stockmen of the north who are receiving cattle at Denver are St. John & Taintor of Birney, Mont., who are putting up 4,500 Old Mexicos; Spear Bros., Sheridan, Wyo., who are putting in 5,000 Arizonas, bought of Hysham & McPherson, and 2,000 of the McAdams two year olds. J. M. Boardman of Helena, Mont., who is manager for the Pioneer Cattle Co., is awaiting the arrival of a string of about 6,000 Old Mexicos, which he is shipping into Montana this spring. John Welsh of Wolcott, Colo., received a fine string, consisting of 1,000 of the "LFD" Panhandles."

New Use of Corn Stalks.

The government experiments in the manufacture of a high grade of commercial paper from cornstalks is of a most satisfactory character. Samples of this paper have been on exhibition at Washington, D. C., and pronounced by experts as equal to any wood pulp product. It is now believed that arrangements will soon be completed for the use of cornstalks for this purpose, thus adding to the commercial importance of this crop. It is believed that the cornstalk product will first enter into competition with the wood pulp in the manufacture of the finer qualities of paper for books, etc. There are many experiments being planned in the way of paper manufacture from fibrous plants, rice straw, broom corn and some others are in line of experimentation.

Leading Farming Statistics.

States which stand in the first rank as to the number of farms comprising the cultivated area of the country average about 250,000 farms each. Some of the leading agricultural states run as low as 220,000 farms, as in the case of Mississippi and Indiana. Texas had the largest total of 352,190 farms by the census of 1900. There are fourteen states of this general class, the crops in which are watched daily through the progress of the season as indexes of what the purchasing power of the country for the coming autumn and winter is likely to be.

The following table gives the states with the largest number of farms, the number of farms worked by owners, and the percentage of farms operated by owners in each state:

Ohio	276,719	200,788	72.5
Pennsylvania	224,248	165,982	74.0
Tennessee	224,623	133,483	59.5
Texas	352,190	177,199	50.3

These states show a higher percentage of farm ownership in the North, with a much smaller percentage in the South. New York leads with 76.1 per cent of her farms operated by owners, followed by Pennsylvania with 74 per cent, Ohio with 72.5 and Indiana with 71.4. Georgia, with about the same number of farms as Pennsylvania, has only 40.1 per cent of her farms operated by the owners. Kentncky, on the other hand, has 67.1 per cent, ranking ahead of Iowa with 65.1 and below Missouri with 69.5.

Do You Need Fencing?

Every farmer who needs fencing of any kind should get "American Fence News." It tells a good many interesting facts that you really ought to know before you decide on or buy any fencing. The book is beautifully printed, contains many illustrations and tells how to fence for best effect. It tells how to make permanent wire fence and contains the whole story of fence building. It contains an interesting and valuable article on "The Operation of a Farm," showing the best methods of rotating the crops for biggest profits. Then here is a very interesting article showing how you can save work, time and money, avoid worry, increase your income and get more fun out of life. Also you will find an article on "Ornamenting the Farm." Last, but not least by any means, you will find some facts about American Fence. It will indeed pay you to send a postal card addressed personally to Mr. F. Baackes, Vice-Pres. and Gen. Sales Agent of American Steele & Wire Co., Chicago, Ill., for your copy of "American Fence News."

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATOR

Nearly 1,200,000 farmers, creamerymen, milk dealers and owners of country homes, throughout the world, are already doing so, and 150,000 or more are being added to the number every year—many more this year than ever before.

If you haven't a De Laval Cream Separator already you can't be anywhere near the head of this tremendous procession that started thirty years ago, but it will be foolish to wait to bring up the tail end of it.

Why not fall into the De Laval procession now? You can't recover the dairy waste and worry of previous years, but you can stop it going further. Why not do so? Every day of delay means just that much more waste of product, quality and dairy comfort. Why prolong it?

If you don't know the nearest De Laval agent write for his name and a catalogue, which we shall be glad to send you.

Clay, Robinson & Company's LIVE STOCK REPORT

Vol. 20 | Chicago, Friday, June 3, 1910 | No 22

Initial Range Lamb Arrivals of Season.

The first grass lambs from the western range to arrive at Chicago this season were here Tuesday. The shipment included 1,299 head of 68 lbs average at $9.00 and 175 head, averaging 62 lbs, at $7.00. They were from California and were very choice. The initial shipment last season came during the week ending July 9. They were from Idaho and sold at a range of $7.00@8.75, with the bulk going at $8.30@8.75. The latter price up to then was the record one for rangers. The first sales of rangers in 1908 were at $7.25.

It will be several weeks yet before the movement of western range lambs will gain much volume. Several shipments are expected this month and consignments will increase considerably in July. The season has certainly started out in a most encouraging way for the western range flockmasters. The initial sale this season showed 25c advance over one year ago and $1.75 above that of 1908. It is thought that by the time western range lambs commence coming marketward in big numbers the force of the southern lamb shipments will have been spent. Not alone is a good demand on slaughtering account anticipated, but the call on feeding account will doubtless be very insistent.

Oklahoma Hogs Top the Market.

The extreme top price for hogs at Fort Worth on May 30 was $9.55. Clay, Robinson & Co. sold two loads at this figure, the sales following: For George Holdman of Clinton, Okla., 70 head of 236 lbs average and for J. H. Lowery of Granite, Okla., 77 head, averaging 250 lbs. Oklahoma is fast gaining a great record for the fine class of fat stock sent to market from there, and the above sales reflect much credit to the new state. The above price was within 10c per cwt of the top at Chicago that day and was as high as paid at both Kansas City and South St. Joseph.

A Scarcity of Fat Southwest Grass Cattle.

George Jennings, who is chief of the cow buying department for Swift & Co. at Fort Worth, Tex., was at Chicago and when asked about the probable grass cattle supplies from the Lone Star state this spring and summer said that Fort Worth and the River markets were receiving fair supplies, but that straight grassers of a good or even decent beef quality are scarce. He looks for this to so continue. Rains in the South Texas range country came too late this spring to make any early grass beef or to give the promise of very many later, as cattle don't do very well after fly time down there, regardless of range conditions. Most of the straight grassers now reaching Fort Worth are not good and are selling largely from $4.75 to $5.00. Recent sales of thick fat heavy caked cattle have been made on that market up to $7.00.

ON THE MAGNIFICENT 400-ACRE FARM OF S. P. STEVENS OF BARTLETT, ILL.

The above cut shows part of his new barn, one of the largest and best in the state. At the end are seen two silos. The barn is equipped with carriers running the entire length of 210 feet. Part of the fine dairy herd of 160 Holstein cows are shown. In the foreground, in keeping with the up-to-date, modern equipment of the place, is a sectional concrete tank made by the Chas. B. Hurst Co., Union Stock Yards, Chicago, to whom we are indebted for use of this attractive photo.

Flanagan Heifers Top Market 10c Per Cwt.

It was Memorial day that Clay, Robinson & Co. sold 30 head of 739-lb heifers at $7.35 on the Chicago market, which price stood 10c per cwt higher than any other full load of heifers brought that day. This figure was 35c per cwt lower than two weeks ago, buyers having hit the market for yearlings a severe blow during that period. These heifers were grade Herefords and were very well fattened. They were marketed by E. Flanagan of Franklin, Ind., who is a good feeder.

Nebraska Beeves Top Chicago Market at $8.55.

On Wednesday, June 1, Anthony Wilkinson of Grand Island, Neb., marketed 30 beeves of 1,698 lbs average at Chicago and Clay, Robinson & Co. sold them at $8.55, the top price that day, as well as for the week. These cattle were mostly grade Herefords, heavily branded westerns and rather coarse. Their weight was against their sale and had they tipped the beam around 1,600 lbs they would have brought more money. Mr. Wilkinson is one of the most prominent feeders and ranchmen in the West, he having his feed lots in Nebraska and his ranch in Wyoming.

On the above day Clay, Robinson & Co. also obtained $8.50 for two other strings of cattle. J. F. Allgaier of Shelbina, Mo., had in 18 head of 1,472 lbs average which brought $8.50 and another party marketed 45 head, averaging 1,440 lbs, at the same price.

Native Cattle are Meeting Competition.

About four weeks ago we predicted a decline in low-priced killing steers and also for cows and heifers. That there was a fulfillment of our prophecy is reflected in a decline of 50@75c for the common and medium grades of beef steers and 40@50c for she stock during the past two weeks. All along we have advised our customers to market these classes of offerings as fast as practicable. During the past two weeks there have been fairly good supplies of grass Texas steers, bought on the Kansas City and East St. Louis markets, shipped direct to Chicago slaughterers. Late last week there was a string of Texas steers on the Chicago market which cost $4.75 and others costing $5.60@6.15. This week there have been grass Texas steers here which sold at $5.25@6.35, with Texas cake feds going at $6.60@7.00. The former grades will increase in numbers from now on, as well as show better flesh condition, and will seriously damage the price range for native beef steers selling under $7.00 and most grades of native cows and heifers. The latter offerings will work harm to the market for native beef steers now selling at $7.00@7.75. This readjusting of prices is only reasonable and we look for still further declines in prices for common and medium steers and for most grades of she stock. The only safe course for owners to pursue would be to ship these classes of cattle as fast as convenient. We also advise letting all fat offerings come right along, but such as possess good quality and lack desirable flesh can be held for longer feeding to good advantage.

Las Animas Hogs Top Denver Market.

The first carload of hogs shipped from Las Animas county, Colo., was sent to Denver by the Hey-Patterson Meat Co., who are raising hogs on a ranch near Hoehne. They arrived on the Denver market May 27, averaged 183 lbs and were sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. at $9.00. These hogs sold at a very attractive price and it goes to show that raising hogs in Colorado under right methods is a very profitable business.

Southwest Cattlemen Win Victory.

In a final report to the United States Court of Appeals at St. Louis, Special Master James A. Seddon finds for the cattle shippers in the Texas cattle rate injunction suit, and recommends the court dismiss the bill of complaint of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway Co. and fifty other roads which sought to enjoin the Interstate Commerce Commission from enforcing new rates ordered under the Hepburn act. If the court's decision is in consonance with the masters finding, as it probably will be, the Southwestern Cattle Raisers' Association wins a decisive victory in the litigation which has been pending since the rates were ordered in July, 1908. The rates involved include those on live stock from the principal cattle districts of the Southwestern states to St. Louis, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Omaha, Chicago and other packing house centers of the Middle West. The reductions range from 1@10c per cwt.

Judge Seddon in his report finds that the railroads failed at all essential points to prove that the rates were so low that they were confiscatory, and the railroads alleged that they would lose from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000 a year if forced to transport live stock at the new rates.

Marketing Half-Fat Grass Texas Cattle.

J. E. Boog-Scott, of the noted ranching and Hereford breeding firm of Boog-Scott Bros. of Coleman, Tex., regarding conditions, has the following to say:

"The season in the Southwest pasture districts has been a very peculiar one this spring. In the early part of the spring we had dry weather. The grass was slow in starting. Then when rains came the weather turned cool and the grass failed to respond, and simply stood still. In many cases steers have not gained any in the past two months. In some cases owners had to feed steers a little cake to hold them up. This condition has been very disappointing. So this accounts to a certain extent, perhaps, for the run of this half-fat grass steers from Texas and Oklahoma. Some of the owners of cattle feel that they must let some of them go now, and hold the balance till the grass gets better. The heavy runs have caused a big decline in prices, but there are cases, perhaps, where the cattle had to be shipped, which is in a way responsible for the rather liberal runs of quarantine cattle at Kansas City and East St. Louis. If the weather should turn warm now the grass would come in in a hurry, as there is plenty of moisture in the ground."

Agricultural Journalism Prize Winners.

The winners of the cash prizes aggregating $100 given by John Clay of Clay, Robinson & Co. for best work in agricultural journalism in the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconson have just been announced. First prize ($50) was won by F. B. Morrison, Marshfield, Wis., who entered an article entitled "More Wisconsin Pork;" second prize ($30), L. F. Graber, Mineral Point, Wis., with an article on "The Beef Steer in Wisconsin;" third prize ($20), G. C. Morris, Madison, Wis., who prepared an article on "The Economical Beef Production in the Northwest." Honorable mention was awarded to C. A. LeClair, Green Bay, Wis., who wrote upon the topic "How Wisconsin may be made one of the most Important Sheep Raising States in the United States."

This competition was for the best articles on live stock topics to be written by members of the Hoard Press Club in the College of Agriculture. A strong competition resulted, articles of superior merit being entered. The contest has awakened considerable interest in agricultural journalism. The judges were Prof. G. C. Humphrey, Prof. A. S. Alexander and J. C. Marquis, Agricultural Editor.

United States Pork Meeting Competition.

A Chicago provision specialist, who spent three months abroad, made a special study of conditions in the provision trade in Europe, and discovered an alarming situation from the United States export standpoint:

"In consequence of abnormally high prices for hogs in the United States," he said, "American bacon is 'out of it' on the English market at present. Consumption is only about one-third of normal. The people there are eating pork freely, however, and are well supplied from other quarters. In addition to English, Irish, Canadian and Danish, there are heavy receipts now of Servian, Dutch, Siberian, Russian, Chinese and even French hog products. These countries have been encouraged to ship to England, and although some of the sides are rough and poorly cut, it is good meat and the quality is being improved right along. Supplies from Siberia, Russia and China especially are inexhaustible, or at least will prove to be if an outlet is established. At present shopkeepers and provision dealers generally in England find they can make more money handling this class of product, and unless we are able to meet these conditions we shall be forced to depend upon our home trade altogether. Canada, where prices are equally as high, is in the same fix that we are. Hogs and prices generally will have to be on a lower plane of values if we want the English trade. In the meantime the other fellow is awake nights improving his product, establishing strong business relations and in a general way securing a strong foothold in territory which in former years has taken from 5 to 20 per cent of our manufactured hog products."

Colorado Cattle Feeders Do Well.

C. L. Walker of Walker & McCaslin, the well-known feeders of Longmont, Colo., was at Denver on May 19 with 36 beef steers of 1,128 lbs average, which Clay, Robinson & Co. sold at $6.80. This is the clean-up of the feeding operations of this firm this year. They fed some 400 head of cattle, all of which were bought and sold on that market, and Mr. Walker expressed himself as more than pleased with the result and with his treatment. Their cattle made a fine gain, and by selling in Denver Mr. Walker believes he did better than by sending them to other points. He looks after the feeding personally, and is to be congratulated upon the success which attended his efforts. The cattle marketed by this firm were all good ones and all brought a very satisfactory price. Mr. McCaslin, his partner, is cashier of the Farmers' National Bank at Longmont.

Very Successful Nebraska Feeding Firm.

The Elkhorn Land and Irrigation Co., one of the extensive and successful cattle feeding firms in the West, have completed the marketing of nineteen loads, which comprised their winter feeding. All of the shipments were sent in during the past thirty days and they were sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. at very satisfactory prices. The members of the company are Messrs. Widner and Newcomb of Corning, Ia., and F. W. Woods of Spencer, Neb. While the above mentioned cattle were of ordinary breeding, no cattle have reached the Chicago market this year that made more clear money than they did. In addition to feeding cattle, the company have extensive and valuable real estate holdings in Nebraska and five banks in that state and one in Iowa. The members of the firm are conservative, keen, far-seeing men, and their great success is a logical sequence.

Winter-fed cattle have been well marketed from that part of Nebraska. There are not the usual number of cattle on grass, and a short run may be expected from there this summer. Old corn is fairly plentiful at 45c per bushel. Corn planting is well advanced and good rains have been had.

Middle Man Is a Necessity.

Every now and then some hair trigger political economist comes to the front with the proposition that the "middle man" is the real and only cause of the increased cost of living and that the elimination of this individual would spell lower prices for the consumer and greater profits for the producer, says the South Omaha Journal-Stockman. As a matter of fact the reverse would be the case if there were no "middle men." The producer would have to find his own market for his products while the consumer would discover that it was infinitely more difficult and expensive to get the things he needed. Most any one can produce something, but disposing of it satisfactorily is an entirely different matter. It is the "middle man" who brings the producer and consumer together to their mutual profit and satisfaction and the toll he takes for his services is infinitesimal in comparison with the value of the work he performs for the whole community. If these theorists, who know it all, would get to work and produce something instead of forever and eternally criticising those who do the whole business would soon settle itself.

Warning in Beef Shortage.

Decreasing beef cattle supplies on the farms east of the Missouri River is the most vital problem facing the live stock industry today, and one which must be remedied by greater effort toward replenishment if the prosperity of the land owners is to be continued, and, too, if the beef-eating public is to secure its regular quota at prices below prohibitive levels.

The nation has in recent years drawn too heavily upon the source of fat beef output, without due regard to the future of the supply. Farmers of the corn belt have been prone to look to the West and Southwest for their supplies of feeding cattle, not realizing that the increasing population is constantly calling for greater home production of fat beeves.

Time has arrived when the West, a few years back the breeding ground for the corn-belt feeders, is no longer able to supply feeding cattle to the farmers of Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio except at almost fat steer prices. The situation is growing more acute each year. Within the past twelve months the effect of decreasing home production of beef steers in the states of the Middle West has been a relatively shorter supply of beef than consumptive capacity required, and results have been higher average prices for fat steers than realized in thirty years past. But instead of general prosperity, it has been prosperity for the few, because cattle raising and feeding has declined.

There must be a greater effort toward home production of beef steers east of the Missouri River. The West and Southwest can no longer be called upon to furnish the former quota of feeder cattle to be finished by the corn-belt farmers. There is within a radius of 500 miles east, west and south of Chicago an area of equal to 4,000,000 farms of eighty acres each upon which could be produced profitably an average of two or more cows each year at a cost which would be low enough to afford reasonable income on the investment. These few extra cows per farm, together with their offspring, would aggregate an increased yearly production of over 8,000,000 cattle.

Where is the farmer who owns an eighty-acre tract who, by practicing a little economy, could not raise at least two head of beef cattle more each year for practically the same cost of the present output?

One good bovine matron with calf at foot, feeding the latter until the calf stage is passed, when the animal could be fed a grain ration, would within fifteen months produce added wealth of $60@75 and net the farmer a handsome financial return, even upon $150 per acre land.

Two million eighty-acre farms, each producing two or more head of beef cattle, would within four years increase the beef output of the middle western states to normal volume again and care for the needs of the fast growing population.—Farmers and Drovers Journal.

Rigden Colorado Heifers Sell High.

J. R. Rigden of Fort Collins, Colo., who has been feeding cattle this year at Timnath, is considered one of the most successful feeders of the Northern Colorado district. That he well deserves this title was again demonstrated when Mr. Rigden marketed at Denver, through Clay, Robinson & Co. 26 yearling steers of 846-lbs average of his own feeding at $7.25, highest paid there since the drop some weeks ago. These steers were from the Texas ranch of Colonel W. E. Hughes of Denver and were bought as feeders by Mr. Rigden at the Denver Stock show last January. They were turned on beet tops for the first month, but since that time they had been on a ration of pulp and alfalfa. The steers averaged 630 lbs when they went out, and showed daily gain of nearly two pounds per steer. They made a very handsome profit for Mr. Rigden, notwithstanding the market was lower on the day they were marketed.

On a lower market as well as on a higher one Clay, Robinson & Co. sell your cattle, hogs, sheep or lambs for their full market value, and get them across the scales at the most opportune time.

Loss of $1,200 in Five Cars.

At the approach of warm weather heavy losses may be expected by loading hogs too heavily. One day recently, after a moderately warm night, a small train of five cars on a railroad running into Chicago contained 48 dead hogs, and of course they were all big ones. This represented a loss of $1,200 to four owners. It is needless to say that lighter loading is far preferable to taking such chances. The man who loads hogs to the limit—even in moderate weather—is certainly taking a desperate chance of loss with hogs at their present high value.

Sheepmen Save 100 Per Cent of Lambs.

Sheepmen at Twin Bridges, Mont., report that the lambing season is about over and that the increase this year is larger than for a number of years. Most flockmasters have saved fully 100 per cent from their lambing bands and a few report even more. The weather for the past two or three weeks has been most favorable to the sheep interests, there being an almost total lack of cold rains such as usually come during May. Arrangements are now under way for beginning shearing. The number of sheep to be shorn in that vicinity is about 50,000 head. The wool this year is said to be of an exceptional quality. Sheep wintered in excellent condition and there are no breaks in the wool and it is also fairly free from dirt, making it lighter than formerly.

Wool Market Notes.

Advices from Boston tell of a slow trade in wool, with business being done on a small scale.

Western wool growers are so incensed over the action of the buyers, being of the belief that there is a secret understanding among them, that many are consigning their clips.

Wool growers are propounding these two questions: "Why is wool 3c per pound higher than a year ago in London, while bids on the new clip in the United States are 10c lower?" "Is it manipulation or due to natural causes?"

Kentucky's wool clip amounts to around 3,000,000 lbs. It commands the highest price of any unwashed wool in the country. This is due to the light shrinkage, a condition owing to the clean pastures on which the sheep graze. There is food for thought in the above for flockmasters in other states.

Thus far this season the speculative element in wool, both in the East and the West, has been conspicuous by its absence. This has made what can well be termed a "waiting" market. In spite of the fact that some of the best posted dealers in the East are of the opinion that wool is on the bargain counter, the outlet is proving surprisingly narrow.

Included in recent sales of wool at Boston are the following, as quoted by the Wool and Cotton Reporter: 125,000 lbs Ohio ⅜ blood, 29@30c; 160,000 lbs Ohio and Michigan ¼ blood, 28@29c; 30,000 lbs Ohio fine unwashed, 23c; 10,000 lbs Indiana wools, 21@23c; 25,000 lbs Northern California, 16@22c; 20,000 lbs 10 and 12 months Texas, scoured basis, 60c; 150,000 lbs Oregon staple, 18½ @19c; 700,000 lbs territory, 16@23c.

Sheep owners in the western part of South Dakota are being offered 18@22c for their clips at the opening of the present season, but not many are selling. The past winter was severe on many of the herds of Eastern Wyoming and Montana, with some losses in South Dakota, but none so severe as farther west. On account of this loss the wool growers believe that the shortage will be sufficient to give them better prices for their clips.

It is thought that upwards of 300,000,000 lbs of wool which will be shown this year not much more than 25,000,000 or 30,000,000 lbs have been contracted for. Early in the season eastern dealers were advancing 15c on consigned wools. Word comes from Boston, however, that the figure has been considerably reduced. The advances now are said to run down as low as 10c, and it takes a choice lot of wool to demand an advance of a higher figure.

The third series of London sales of Colonial wool for the current year are over. There was a large attendance of buyers and competition was strong. It is estimated that 58,000 bales were export, including 4,000 to the United States. was a strong market for all merino sorts these, when compared with closing rates of last series, appreciated fully 5 per cent. The slight depreciation on crossbreds, noticeable at the opening, was recovered.

Upon the recent visit of the railroad officials to Worland, Wyo., on their tour of inspection they looked over the wool warehouse the Burlington had erected, and found it wholly inadequate for storing the large amount of clips that had been consigned to it, nearly 300,000 lbs, with 200,000 lbs awaiting shelter. They ordered the warehouse to be enlarged 40 feet, thus making it 120 x32. This is the only wool warehouse in Big Horn county and it is proving a great convenience to flockmasters.

"An amateur figurer can readily demonstrate that the wool grower is getting rich quick," said Frank J. Hagenbarth, the extensive flockmaster of Spencer, Idaho, "but closer analysis and personal experience tell a different tale. One material factor generally ignored is the fact that the wool grower must charge off depreciation in his plant to a greater extent than the manufacturer. He buys young ewes at a high price today and six or seven years hence they have passed their period of usefulness and must be sold at prices 50@60 per cent less than first cost, while an annual mortality of 5 per cent meanwhile has materially depleted the original number, so that at the end of six years we may safely say that 75 per cent charged off for depreciation of plant on any given number of ewes is not too large."

As the weeks go by it looks more and more like a consignment year. Although the little speculation started in Ohio when the wools first began to be shown has come to a stop, still in general the wool grower continues to refuse to come down in his ideas of the value of his wools. He cannot understand why he should have received the price he got last year, and then, in the short space of a year, be asked to accept what appears to him ridiculous figures. Moreover, the West is prosperous, and the farmer is apparently wearing as much as he ever has, and this, together with the firm market which is reported from abroad, causes the grower to believe that prices have been unduly depressed. He is, therefore, consigning a lot of his wool to Chicago, and much of it is coming to the eastern markets on consignment. In Utah and Nevada shearing is practically over, but we understand that but little wool has been contracted for outside of that which was agreed upon very early in the season. It now seems entirely probable that the bulk of the wools sheared there will be consigned. In Texas and California there has been practically no contracting done, although there has been some considerable in consignment. In Oregon shearing is going on, and while we hear of some little contracting it does not amount to much.—Wool and Cotton Reporter.

"Manufacturers of woolen and worsted goods throughout the United States are very busy," write the Boynton Wool Scouring Co. "Many of the mills are running night and day and others have orders on hand which will keep them well employed for the balance of the year. This means large quantities of wool are being consumed daily and that the new clip will be in demand when ready for market. All foreign markets have steadily advanced on wool the past year, which means the American dealers in foreign wool at each sale have had to pay more for the wool, so that at present it is hard to import foreign wools in competition with our home market. The manufacturers bought liberally before Jan. 1, which filled their requirements for several months ahead, so that since then the demand for our domestic wool has fallen off to some extent and on some grades of wool prices have been a little lower. This slight reduction in price will soon go back to the former high level, when the manufacturers come into the market again. Wool dealers at this time of the year are glad to see a draggy market, for they are anxious for the price of wool to be low, so that when going into the wool growing sections they can buy wool cheap. We feel confident that, with foreign wools so high and our home manufacturers well filled with orders, as soon as the wool is out of the growers' hands you will see prices jump again. In early fall we believe prices will be as high as last year, or even higher."

*Obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co.

Receipts Thursday of last week 3,106. Best grades sold firm to 10c higher and other kinds slow but about steady. Top $8.50, paid for 56 extra choice offerings of around 1,490 lbs average. Friday supply 1,304. Trading was fairly active at prices strong to 10c higher. The recent uplift was due to the meager runs instead of a broadening of the demand. As compared with the close of last week choice to prime offerings sold 15@25c lower, those of value between $6.75 and $7.65 indicated 35@50c loss, while those going under $6.75 declined 50@75c.

There were only 12,867 cattle at the start of this week. The light run was ascribed to Monday being Memorial day. It was fortunate that the receipts were cut down to small proportions, as the general demand was lacking in expansion. Good to prime offerings sold mostly 10c higher, with instances showing even more advance, while the common and medium lots were slow sale at merely steady prices. Local slaughterers had suspended operations, which, along with the reduced eastern shipping orders, rendered the general market quite slow, and not many sales had been transacted before 10 o'clock. Advices from the East are to the effect that the beef trade there is still in poor shape and local packers claim they have a big stock of beef in their coolers. Had the run been a few thousand more prices would doubtless have taken a sharp downward course. Top beeves for the day went at $8.40, paid for 58 head of Polled Angus from South Dakota of 1,654 and 1,688 lbs average. They were extra choice and had excellent finish. Receipts Tuesday 2,595. Supply seemed equal to all trade requirements and prices were no better than steady. Quality of corn feds was quite plain. Best offerings available were 109 head of 1,269 and 1,288-lb distillery beeves which made $7.75. Steady to strong market Wednesday, with run at 16,000. Top $8.55, obtained by us for 30 head of branded westerns of 1,698 lbs average from Nebraska.

COWS AND HEIFERS.

A little more life was injected into the market Thursday of last week by increased outside demand, although prices were not quotably higher. While the Friday market lacked activity, the meager run was cleared at steady prices. Rates showed 25@50c loss from the close of the previous week.

In spite of the light run at the start of this week, the market was rather uneven, with bulk of trading at prices merely steady to strong. The suspension of killing operations at all of the packing plants and lack of competition from outside buyers proved depressing factors. Grass-fed offerings were sharply discriminated against. The top for a full load of heifers was $7.35, obtained by us for 30 yearlings of 739 lbs average from the E. Flanagan Indiana feed lot, the next highest price being $7.25. The Tuesday market was fairly active at steady prices, and steady to strong rates were obtained Wednesday.

BULLS.

It was a most difficult matter to secure bids Thursday of last week, only about two of the regular buyers being in the market. Rates were lowered 10@15c more. Trade was again in poor shape Friday, although prices were not quotably changed from the previous day. The decline from the close of previous week was 50@75c.

While the good heavy bolognas and fat butchers sold steady at the start of this week, all price changes for other kinds tended towards a lower basis. Light weight bulls were a drug and it was hard to get $4.00 or better for offerings weighing under 1,000 lbs and lacking quality. Where there were any price changes Tuesday they tended downward. Trading on Wednesday was steady.

CALVES.

Good to choice lots met free sale at steady prices Thursday of last week, but the plainer and light weights were dull at rates 10@15c lower. Steady trade in calves Friday. The advance over the close of the previous week was 25@50c, the good to choice grades showing mostly 50c gain.

Declines of 25@50c were forced in the trade at the start of this week, due to the suspension of killing operations. There was excellent demand for good to choice calves Tuesday at prices 25@35c higher than the corresponding day last week, with all of the previous day's break being repaired. Outsiders paid up to $8.50 and packers $8.40. Market Wednesday held steady, hoice, well-bred 1,000 to 1,028-lb steers went back to the country for a short feed at $6.50. They were well worth the money for slaughter and would have gone above $7.00 a few weeks ago. All price changes Friday tended toward a firmer basis. As compared with the close of the previous week rates were mostly 10@15c lower, with instances of the plainer kinds 25c down. Chief call all week was for the good to choice offerings. Packers obtained most of the 900 to 1,000-lb steers.

A small supply and a larger attendance of outside buyers rendered tho trade active at prices 10@15c higher at the start of this week. Most of the support came from Indiana and Ohio feeders. With corn planting finished in most sections it is thought that more interest will be displayed in the trade and still higher prices are not improbable. A strong trade Tuesday, with outlet considerably broader than for some time. There wero relatively few fresh arrivals and yard dealers had very few on hand. Wednesday market held firm tone and showed 15@25c advance over last week's close.

Receipts Thursday of last week 21,942. Sellers checked the decline, but it was hard work. Prices were generally 5c higher than the previous day's average. Top $9.55, made late in the session, and most trading at $9.40@9.50. Friday run 12,599. Market 5@10c higher, speculators and shippers being responsible for the advance. Total Saturday 4,477. Early the market was 5c higher, but the close was tame and unsatisfactory. Best offerings went to a speculator at $9.70, with regulars putting the limit at $9.65. Sales were in main at $9.55@9.65. As compared with the close of the previous week the market was generally steady, although the tops for heavy and light weights showed 5c decline from then, with the top for butchers the same.

Marketing at the start of the week 28,329. The general market was steady to 5c lower. The limit was $9.65 and bulk sales at $9.50@9.60. None of the markets received many offeringgs, owing to it being Memorial day. It was fortunate that the receipts were moderate everywhere. Run Tuesday 10,697. Opening 5@10c higher, trade finished with the bloom all gone. Early a pinnacle of $9.70 was reached, but later on $9.60 was the limit. General bulk of business at $9.55@9.65. Western markets were well supplied, considering the previous day's holiday. Supply Wednesday 23,000. Market steady with previous day's average. Top $9.67½ and bulk $9.60@9.65.

*Obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co.

Supply Thursday of last week 11,033. It was mostly a 25c lower deal in sheep. Good to choice lambs sold steady, but other kinds went 10@15c lower. Some fancy heavy native ewes reached $5.50, but the limit for western wethers was $5.25. We topped the lamb market with Colorados at $8.75. Spring lambs landed up to $9.50. Supply Friday 7,037. Generally a steady trade for sheep, with shorn lambs mostly 10c lower and spring lambs 15@25c off. A few lots of fancy heavy native ewes made $5.25 and a choice class of western wethers had to go at $5.00. Shorn lambs reached $8.60, obtained by us for Colorados. The practicable top for spring lambs was $9.35. As compared with the close of last week sheep and yearlings declined 50@75c, while the best grades of lambs sold 15@25c lower and other kinds indicated 35@50c decline.

At the start of this week marketing was 9,937. There was no quotablo change in the general market. In spite of a suspension of killing operations at all of the packing plants, owing to it being Memorial day, trade had fairly active tone. Some prime heavy native ewes reached $5.25, but a load of 93-lb western wethers was obtained at $5.00. Grass yearling wethers from California sold at $6.00, with an aged lot at $4.75. Top for western yearlings was $6.10, this sale being mado by us. The limit for lambs was $8.60, we landing Colorados at the price. Most of the spring lambs brought $9.00@9.25. Arrivals Tuesday 14,113. Lambs were dull sale at prices 10@15c lower, with other offerings going steady. Most of the aged sheep went at $5.00@5.15, fancy native ewes up to $5.25 and western yearling wethers again being landed at $6.10 by us. Another string of California breeding ewes brought $6.00. A few lots of lambs sold at $8.45@8.50 for Colorados, but the bulk went at $8.00@8.40. Most of the spring lambs sold around $9.00. This price was paid for 1,299 head of 68-lb grassers from California, they being a very choice class. These were the first grass lambs from the western range to arrive here this year. Wednesday trade steady to 15c lower. Run 18,000.

Comet Described in Poem of 1835.

Oliver Wendell Holmes recorded awesome sights, but blamed them on evening meal.

The comet's course to spy;
And singing as he flies;
The whizzing planets shrink before
The specter of the skies;
Ah! well may regal orbs burn blue,
And satellites turn pale,
Ten million cubic miles of head,
Ten billion leagues of tail.

On, on by whistling spheres of light
He flashes and he flames;
He turns not to the left nor right,
He asks them not their names;
One spurn from his demoniac heel—
Away, away, they fly,
Where darkness may be bottled up
And sold for "Tyrian dye."

And what would happen to the land,
And how would look the sea,
If the bearded devil's path
Our earth should chance to be?
Full hot and high the sea would boil,
Full red the forests gleam;
Methought I saw and heard it all
In a dyspeptic dream!

I saw a tutor take his tube
The comet's course to spy;
I heard a scream—the gathered rays
Had stewed the tutor eye;
I saw a fort—the soldiers all
Were armed with goggles green;
Pop cracked the guns! whiz flew the balls!
Bang went the magazine!

I saw a poet dip a scroll
Each moment in a tub,
I read upon the warping back
"The dream of Beelzebub;"
He could not see his verses burn,
Although his brain was fried,
And ever and anon he bent
To wet them as they dried.

I saw the scalding pitch roll down
The crackling, sweating pines,
And streams of smoke, like waterspouts,
Bust through the rumbling mines;
I asked the firemen why they made
Such noise about the town;
They answered not—but all the while
The brakes went up and down.

I saw a roasting pullet sit
Upon a baking egg;
I saw a cripple scorch his hand
Extinguishing his leg;
I saw nine geese upon the wing
Toward the frozen pole,
And every mother's gosling fell
Crisped to a crackling coal.

I saw the ox that browsed the grass
Writhe in the blistering rays,
The herbage in his shrinking jaws
Was all a fiery blaze;
I saw huge fishes boiled to rags,
Bob through the bubbling brine;
And thoughts of supper crossed my soul;
I had been rash at mine.

Strange sights! strange sounds! O fearful dream!
Its memory haunts me still,
The steaming sea, the crimson glare
That wreathed each wooded hill;
Stranger, if through thy reeling brain
Such midnight visions sweep,
Spare, spare, oh, spare, thine evening meal,
And sweet shall be thy sleep.

REPRESENTATIVE CITIZENS OF IOWA.

This photograph is of William Burgoin and his fine family of Silver City, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Burgoin are deservedly proud of their children. Mr. Burgoin is one of Iowa's best and prosperous farmers and feeders. He owns 750 acres of well improved land, worth $125 per acre, and feeds around 300 cattle and upwards of 300 hogs annually. For the past twenty years Mr. Burgoin has farmed and fed cattle, and, as he proudly states, "I have shipped to Clay, Robinson & Co. for fifteen years." He came to Iowa from Devonshire, England, twenty-two years ago. During all the years that he has fed cattle and hogs there was only one that he lost money, and this year's feeding has been the most prosperous of any.

W. E. Phillips, Mahaska county, Ia., was on the market May 25 with 18 beef steers of 1,485 lbs average which we sold at $8.45. These cattle were mostly grade Angus of good quality, but lacking finish. Mr. Phillips is a very good feeder.

J. A. Rourke, Prowers county, Colo., was at South St. Joseph on May 24 with four double decks of shorn lambs, the last of his year's feeding. They sold at $8.25, averaging 67 lbs. This was extreme top, and Mr. Rourke was greatly pleased.

Summit for lambs at Chicago on May 27 was $8.60, this price being obtained by us for 246 head of 85 lbs average from the D. D. Doty feed lot in Larimer county, Colo., and for 250 head, averaging 85 lbs, marketed by the Trimble Bros. of the same county.

F. W. Frost and Charles Ames, well-known farmers and feeders of Dekalb county, Ill., were on the cattle market last week with shipments. Mr. Frost's offerings comprised 17 head of 1,523-lb branded Angus and Herefords at $8.00, but they were not up in quality to the offerings that Mr. Frost usually handles. Mr. Ames' 20 beef steers of 1,379 lbs average at $7.40 were coarse, branded and grade Angus.

It was May 25 that our East St. Louis house [illegible] the hog market with two loads, selling the [illegible] $9.57½. The sales follow: For Hill & Co., Scotland county, Mo., 69 head of 201 lbs average and for J. W. King, Marion county, Mo., 75 head, averaging 214 lbs.

Robert Neilsen, Montraille county N. D., writes our South St. Paul house: "I arrived here with the calves in good order. We have had sufficient rains for the present and grass and grains of all kinds are looking the very pink of condition."

J. B. Russell, Andrew county, Mo., was on the South St. Joseph market last week with four decks of sheep. He is a leading stockman of that country and was formerly in the range sheep business in Wyoming. He has been a patron of ours for many years.

Tuesday last week our South St. Joseph house was favored with consignments of sheep from the following progressive feeders: Evans & Richards, Larimer county, Colo.; L. Rapp, Custer county, Neb.; A. J. Williamson, Harrison county, Mo., and Porter & Wiley, Clinton county, Mo.

Garnass Bros., Eddy county N. D., writes our South St. Paul house: "We received draft from the N. P. Ry. Co. for $64.44 as settlement for claim you filed for us last fall. We thank you for your promptness in this matter and assure you that when on the market with stock we will call on you."

Lee Barry, Taylor county, Ia., writes our South St. Joseph house: "Your account sales of hogs received, and everything is perfectly satisfactory. You must have found the hogs in good condition, and also handled them right, as you only reported 20 lbs shrink from home weights. Thank you for good work.

Wednesday of last week our East St. Louis house sold for George S. Craven, Van Buren county, Ia., 20 steers of 1,203 lbs average, fair to good quality and half fat at $7.00. On the same day they handled for C. W. Miller, Montgomery county, Ill., 20 steers, averaging 836 lbs, fair quality and flesh at $6.35.

P. Breen, a prominent feeder of Columbia county, Wis., was in with a shipment of steers and calves and after seeing the wretched condition of the market said he was well pleased with the prices we obtained. His brother accompanied him to market and they both were interested visitors at the packing plants.

William Burgoin, the extensive and successful farmer and feeder, Mills county, Ia., was on the market recently with five loads of cattle which we sold at $8.30. They were grade Herefords and branded westerns, and were bought on the South Omaha market at $5.00. They were fed around six months and showed an average gain of about 350 lbs.

Not a week passes but that Bell & Lutz, Fremont county, Ia., and Blakely Bros., Mercer county, Ill., favor us with a shipment of either cattle or hogs. They are among the best known shippers to this market and are always in close touch with market conditions. They had a shipment of hogs to us last Friday and were well pleased with results.

Ed Mascher, Bent county, Colo., who has made made several shipments to us this spring, was on the South St. Joseph market last week with two double decks of 66-lb wooled lambs which made $8.60. This was the last of his feeding for the season. He accompanied the shipment and stated that all our sales for him this year have been decidedly satisfactory.

Included in the many prominent feeders and shippers who patronized our cattle selling department last week and for whom we rendered very satisfactory service were: J. P. Laughery and P. Madsen, Guthrie county, Ia.; C. G. Atwood, Winnebago county, Ill.; M. E. Clayton, Sangamon county, Ill.; F. Barthelme, Winneshiek county, Ia.; W. G. Johnston, Warren county, Ill.; A. C. Westrom, Sac county, Ia.; S. L. Knight, Livingston county, Ill.; J. W. Reardon, Champaign county, Ill.; J. R. Scarff, Henry county, Ia.; F. T. Wells, Butler county, Ia.; D. Irvin, Fayette county, Ia.

Kinney & Graves, Colfax county, Neb., one of the largest sheep feeding firms in the Middle West, were represented on the market May 25 with 473 yearlings and wethers mixed, averaging 95 lbs, and we obtained $6.25 for them, pinnacle by a big margin for this class of offerings. They had in 444 head more on the following day which we sold at $6.20, also top that day.

E. P. Harned represented Cooper county, Mo., on the East St. Louis hog market May 26 with a 233-lb load that sold at the extreme top price of $9.57½, while the other load, averaging 189 lbs, made $9.55, pinnacle by 5c per cwt for offerings of that weight. Our house negotiated the above sales for Mr Harned, who is a well-known stockman and one of our valued friends and patrons.

E. C. Giddings, one of the most prominent and successful lamb feeders in the West, writes from Larimer county, Colo.: "Thank you for the efforts used in landing my lambs at the top of the market. I hope you will have equally as good luck with the other two cars. I found my alfalfa hay partly frozen when I arrived home. It is set back two weeks, as well as being cut short. Other crops are looking very good."

Claude Bowen, Newton county, Mo., sold a deck of 57-lb southwestern lambs at $7.30 straight on the East St. Louis market last week. They were of only a fair class. The sheep off this shipment brought the top price of $4.75 and clipped lambs sold at $6.50. On the same day Bert M. Barnett, Davies county, Mo., sold a deck of sheep at $4.75 and a lot of clipped lambs at $7.00, both prices being at the top of the market for the respective classes.

Fred W. Burns, president of the Plymouth Milling Co., well and favorably known for the excellent flour and grain goods turned out in Plymouth county, Ia.: "Account sales and check received and all very satisfactory. They netted me $32 more than the best offer I had here. I bought them of your South Omaha house for $5.00." Mr. Burns' letter is in reference to 16 head of 1,559-lb beef steers which we sold at $8.25 on May 25. These cattle were branded westerns and rather coarse, but fat.

Our East St. Louis house last week rendered very satisfactory service for the following progressive hog dealers: Presley Robinson, Baker & Gardner and J. J. Smith, Linn county, Mo.; Franken & Belt, Carroll county, Mo.; Henry Dunn, Randolph county, Ill.; C. A. Chittenden, Adams county, Ill.; Simonson & Wright, Shelby county, Mo.; Sims & Smith and C. C. Jones, Cooper county, Mo.; Charles Brockaway and R. H. Garrett, Henry county, Mo.; Thomas Dodds, Schuyler county, Ill.; George S. Cravens, Van Buren county, Ia.; J. L. McClure, Appanoose county, Ia.; H. E. Schmidt, Massac county, Ill.; J. B. Griffith, Webster county, Mo.; J. W. Auldridge, Daviess county, Mo.; Daniel Rawley, Okmulgee county, Okla.; J. M. Mayfield, Cooper county, Mo.; A. M. Wilkins, Adair county, Mo.

It was our good fortune to receive shipments of hogs from the following parties, who stand high either in farming, feeding or shipping circles in their respective localities: W. F. Widick and J. Bonnell, Webster county, Ia.; A. Berg, Dekalb county, Ill.; R. F. Constance, Sangamon county, Ill.; S. L. Knight and E. J. Gable, Livingston county, Ill.; C. Y. Miller, Macon county, Ill.; N. D. Beall, Monona county, Ia.; H. Jackson, Clay county, Ia.; Wm. McKeever, Ford county, Ill.; F. C. Christien, Greene county, Ia.; Farmers Elevator Co., Plymouth county, Ia.; Clinton Grain Co., Hancock county, Ia.; F. T. Wells and F. H. Voss, Butler county, Ia.; Curry & M., Schuyler county, Ill.; Tow & Holden, Tama county, Ia.; D. Irvin, Fayette county, Ia.; W. H. Rowe, LaSalle county, Ill.; J. H. Riesen and J. Rath, Crawford county, Ia.; F. C. Luttman, Plymouth county, Ia.; F. Frankenrider, Henry county, Ill.; Farmers Elevator Co., Lyon county, Ia.; F. Belz, Butler county, Ia.; A. C. McCauley, Linn county, Ia.; McManaman & Co., Edwards county, Ill.

We record the following persons, prominent either in feeding or shipping circles, who favored our Kansas City house with consignments last week: J. F. Wimberly, Polk county, Ark.; L. Schultz, Hughes county, Okla.; W. H. Staunton, Pittsburg county, Okla; John H. Riley, Otero county, Colo.; W. Leneman, Harlan county, Neb.; Hans Skovgaard and J. C. Nelson, Washington county, Kan.; H. R. Adams, Johnson county, Neb.; A. D. Mathias and Robb & Bro., Rio Grand county, Colo.; Graham and B., Tom Green county, Tex.; G. F. Brenner, E. Merryfield J. W. King, Ottawa county, Kan.; C. F. Kunz, Redwillow county, Neb.; O. R. Patterson, Linn county, Kan.; H. C. Talbott, Barton county, Kan.; Wallace & Harvey, Anderson county, Kan.; E. J. Lunger and J. G. Parrott, Jackson county, Kan.; Goodell & Johnson, Montgomery county, Kan.; William Shields, Pottawatomie county, Kan.; J. Musselman, Daviess county, Mo.; Chris Horn, Richardson county, Neb.; Jones & Bouvier, Maricopa county, Ariz.; William Luthi, Geary county, Kan.; Peter Durlan, Chautauqua county, Kan.

TRIMBLE BROS. OF FORT COLLINS, COLO.

There are no better or more favorably known lamb feeders in Colorado than Charley and Ed. Trimble, who comprise the extensive buying and feeding firm of Trimble Bros. Besides they are prominent in real estate circles at Fort Collins. These gentlemen are energetic, progressive and princes of good fellows. Last season they bought 50,000 New Mexico and northern lambs for distribution among the Colorado feeders, the total in moneys aggregating $165,000. The lambs were considered excellent in quality and weight and met with high favor from slaughterers when placed on the market. The Trimble Bros. feed from 4,000 to 10,000 lambs annually and their offerings generally sell right near or at the extreme top of the market. Charley Trimble has shipped exclusively to Clay, Robinson & Co. since 1895, either at the River markets or Chicago, which is proof conclusive that he receives the service that satisfies. Ed. Trimble has also been an exclusive patron of Clay, Robinson & Co. during the past five years, or since he has been feeding.

"It can now be stated with certainty that the run of Colorado-fed lambs is practically over for this season," remarked Charley Trimble. "It has been a good year for those who struck the early market. But not so for those who fed for the late market. Why, if we had let our lambs come about six weeks ago, or before the big break, they would have made us more money as feeders. Better prices must be paid or Coloradoans will not do any more late feeding. All of the late-fed lambs came high in cost, while feed and labor never before cost so much.

"It is too early to say what Northern Colorado feeders will do next season. I will say this much, however, they will stock up at lower prices than in 1909 or many feed lots will be empty. The outlook for alfalfa in our country is very poor and there is no need to anticipate low-priced corn. This is miserable corn weather and besides there is much complaint about the seed failing to germinate.

"Regarding the lamb crop: New Mexico is having a splendid lambing, Arizona had a very poor crop, due to a drouth, and there is a shortage in the Wyoming crop, owing to a very severe winter."

J. R. Jones, Richland county, N. D., consigned a car of cattle and hogs to us at South St. Paul.

M. McLean of Nelson county, N. D., favorably known in shipping circles, was among our hog patrons at South St. Paul.

G. T. Stevens, Walworth county, S. D., was represented on the South St. Paul market with a mixed load of cattle and hogs.

R. A. Switzer of Rembina county, N. D., one of our valued South St. Paul patrons, had a mixed consignment at that point Memorial day.

W. E. Hilll, a prominent cattleman of Sheridan county, Neb., had two cars of cattle on the South Omaha market at the start of this week.

W. I. Bell, a representative farmer, feeder and shipper of Fremont county, Ia., had in 17 head of 1,457-lb beef steers Monday and we sold them at $8.00.

Keokuk county, Ia., was represented on the market at the start of this week with a shipment of cattle and hogs from W. O. Relf, who is prominent in Iowa live stock circles.

Our Sioux City house topped the hog market 7½c per cwt May 30 with 73 head, averaging 231 lbs, at $9.40. They were marketed by John Scott, Charles Mix county, S. D.

D. D. Doty, one of the best feeders in Northern Colorado, on May 30 had in from his Larimer county feed lot 246 lambs of 86-lbs average which we landed at the top price of $8.60.

It was on May 30 that our South St. Joseph house sold 48 hogs of 361-lbs average at $9.55, the top of the market. They were consigned by Charles Gurney, Webster county, Neb.

E. Dalziel, Kossuth county, Ia., was on the market Monday with a load each of cattle and hogs and he returned home very well pleased with the way he was treated and prices obtained for his stock.

J. Y. Ferry, Boxelder county, Utah: "Thank you for your prompt daily letters advising me of the markets. I hope to do some business with you in the future. I also want to thank you for the Live Stock Report."

Richards & Evans, Larimer county, Colo., had three double decks of lambs on the South Omaha market May 30 which averaged 70 lbs and our house sold them at $8.40, being 15c per cwt higher than any other sale.

G. C. Holden, Tama county, Ia.: "Thank you for the prompt returns and light shrink that you got on hogs. We had only 80 lbs shrink and our local shipper says he never got less than 300 lbs and up to 600 lbs."

H. R. Thompson, Polk county, Ia., H. S. Prouty, Boyd county, Neb., and V. Burg, Turner county, S. D., each had a shipment of steers on the Monday market for which they obtained very satisfactory prices through us.

Kent & Burke, who have two shipments of cattle on the market every week at this time of the year from their extensive Nebraska feed lots, favored us with a big shipment Monday and we again rendered them sales that suit.

Theodore Rosenbaugh, Adair county, Ia.: "I consign you a car of butcher stock that I think was bought very high. If you can give them as good selling in proportion to the others I will be satisfied. The other sale was very satisfactory."

Ben Archer, Pocahontas county, Ia.; William Tate, Harrison county, Ia.; Flynn Farm Co., Polk county, Ia.; Green & Beatty, McHenry county, Ill.; Brundage & Cobb, Ogle county, Ill.; James Hall and John Eagan, Adair county, Ia.; L. P. Godown, Dallas county, Ia.; A. Johnson, Story county, Ia.; Peter Bocck, Crawford county, Ia., were included in the well pleased parties who had butcher stock on the Monday market.

H. C. Edmunds, the well-known breeder of Hereford cattle and Percheron horses at Wessington Spring, S. D., was among our callers last week. Mr. Edmunds is quite well and favorably known among stockmen and breeders of South Dakota and the West. He has for sale a carload of registered Hereford bulls, one and one-half to two and one-half years old, bred under range conditions and suited for range service. For further particulars address him at above point.

D. E. Crook, Grundy county, Ill.: "A few days since I received your letter containing 36c in stamps as a rebate on my freight bill. This makes in two allowances on that freight bill $4.32. I thank you for what you have done for me and hope to do business with you again next fall."

W. W. Marvel, owner of 500 acres of land in Burleigh county, N. D., in conjunction with J. A. Betz and Edward Kleeman, both of the above county, favored us with a load of hogs at South St. Paul. Mr. Marvel mentioned that they were badly in need of rain in his section and that stock was scarce.

L. A. Eads, a very prominent and successful farmer and feeder of Bonhomme county, S. D., was on the market at the start of this week with both cattle and hogs which we sold at very pleasing prices. His 57 head of stags averaged 1,147 and 1,385 lbs and brought $6.15, while his 80 hogs, averaging 227 lbs, landed at $9.65, the extreme top of the trade.

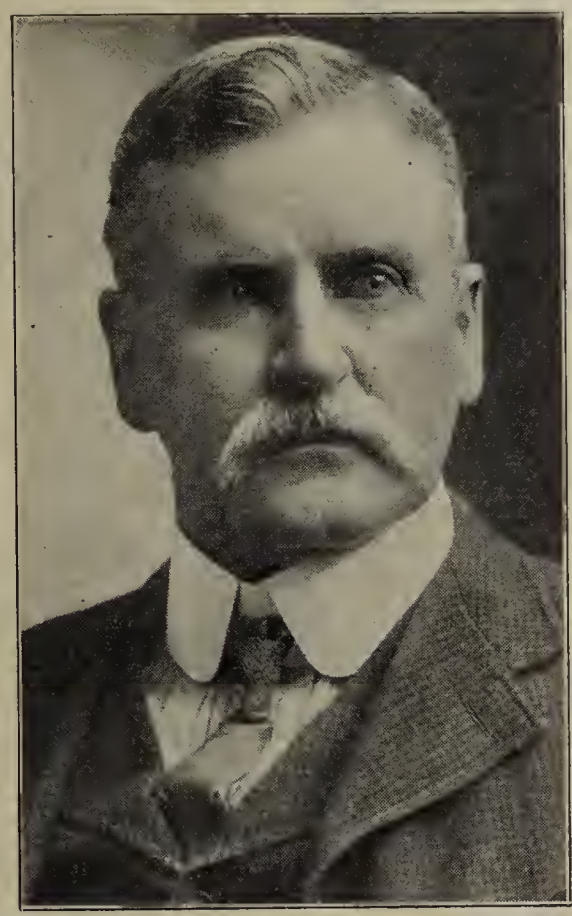
C. R. Evans, the extensive cattle and lamb feeder of Larimer county, Colorado, had a bunch of good cows on the Denver market from his feed lot and we sold them at $5.85, averaging 877 lbs. Mr. Evans fed a large number of cattle this season, but is about cleaned up now. His stuff has been good all the way through and met with high favor at the hands of the buyers. Mr. Evans is well pleased with his winter's feeding operations.

At the start of this week our East St. Louis house sold for J. W. Fowlkes, Dyer county, Tenn., 259 lambs, averaging 60 lbs, at $9.25. They were a little light in weight and the price was a very good one and within 10c of the top. On the same day they also sold for J. W. McGreevy, Pike county, Ill., a deck of mixed sheep and lambs. Although this stock was held up by the Government as having scab, the lambs made $8.50 and the good sheep $4.75.

The following progressive stock dealers sold hogs through our house at the start of this week and it is needless to add that as usual they were well pleased with the prices realized for their stock: C. P. Downing, Monona county, Ia.; G. N. Peterson, Kossuth county, Ia.; P. E. Witham, Adair county, Ia.; J. C. Caldwell, Cedar county, Ia.; F. R. Hesley, Pottawattamie county, Ia.; J. Crowley, Watonwan county, Minn.; A. Johnson, Story county, Ia.; J. Banwell, Webster county, Ia.; B. F. Dragoo, Woodbury county, Ia.; N. D. Beall, Monona county, Ia.; F. H. Voss, Butler county, Ia.; A. T. Jones, Clay county, Ia.; C. Lewison, Mower county, Minn.

Montana Cattle Deals of Former Years.

In the matter of big cattle deals, Montana has witnessed many transactions in which the purchase money represented a comfortable fortune. Deals involving $100,000 have been numerous, and quite a number of instances have been on record where the half-a-million dollar mark has been approached. Among the notable cattle deals of the early '80's was the purchase of the Judge Davis interest in 12,000 head by Con Kohrs. It cost the purchaser nearly $270,000, and is said to have been a part of a deal by which the whole outfit changed hands at a valuation approximating $400,000. The Montana Cattle Co., organized by Russell B. Harrison in 1880, made extensive purchases from various parties, one of its acquisitions being the Downs & Allen herd of some 7,000 head, for which it paid about $235,000. Another purchase by the same company was upon the basis of $35 per head—one of the highest-priced deals on record. The company had a brief and meteoric career. It is said to have borrowed about $600,000 from an eastern trust company, and also become heavily indebted to Montana parties, and when these latter foreclosed a mortgage in 1888 the eastern creditors found there were no available assets upon which they could realize a cent. In the spring of 1898 the Murphy Cattle Co. made some big cattle deals in Eastern Montana, securing the Ryan herd of about 3,000 head at an average price of about $30. It also purchased the Stoddard & Howard Cattle Co.'s herds, numbering nearly 25,000 head, on private terms, and some 4,000 Nevada cattle at $28.50 per head, the total of these several deals amounting to about $1,400,000. The largest Montana cattle deal on record was the purchase of the N—N outfit by McNamara & Marlow in the spring of 1897. There were between 17,000 and 18,000 head in the outfit, and the purchase price was $25 per head. The same firm bought the Martin, Auchard and Nicholas herds in the spring of 1897, making a grand total of 22,000 head that cost in the neighborhood of $550,000. Within sixty days of the date of these purchases cattle prices took a jump of about $5.00 per head. The sale of the Matt Murphy cattle interests to C. J. Hysham a few years ago is another Montana transaction that ran into big figures. This deal is said to have been another instance in which the purchase price exceeded half a million dollars.—Fort Benton River Press.



A. L. DUNCAN OF SEATON, ILL.

The above party was on the Chicago market Wednesday with 19 head of 1,346-lb beef steers which Clay, Robinson & Co. sold at $7.90, and also a load of hogs at $9.65. These steers were the last of the seven carloads which Mr. Duncan fed during the past winter, all of which were handled by us. Mr. Duncan is one of the most prominent farmers and feeders of Illinois and he is a staunch friend of our firm. He has 113 head of cattle which he is feeding on grass. Mr. Duncan says that there are fewer cattle on feed in his part of the state for this time of the year than in forty years.

Graduates Will Go Back to Farms.

Out of the thirty-eight men who will graduate from the Animal Husbandry course at the Iowa Agricultural College this spring only two are to accept salaried positions. The other thirty-six are going back to the farm to engage in actual agriculture. Many of these men will go to work on their fathers' farms. Others will rent farms or take up farm management positions on a share basis. The Animal Husbandry department has been besieged with letters asking for men to take up salaried positions. The salaries offered range from $1,000 to $2,000. Even such salaries as these are not enough to take the men from the farm, however, and the department has had to turn away dozens of offers because it did not have the men.

Big Ranch Being Cut Into Farms.

The large sheep ranch owned by Lewis Penwell of Helena, Mont., has been divided into 160 acre tracts and placed on the market by him. It is all bench land and said by agricultural authorities like Professor Shaw, the great Northern expert, to be the best winter land in the West and also excellent for other crops. It is being offered at from $25.00@35.00 per acre, which is a very low price, considering that it is only [illegible] miles from Helena and one to four miles from the main line of the Northern Pacific. A steam plow is being used to break the ground, thus making a very low cost for preparing it.

Warren Company Buy Much Land.

A deal has been closed between Ora Haley of Laramie, Wyo., and the Warren Live Stock Co. of Cheyenne, Wyo., whereby they purchased 20,000 acres of land adjoining their ranch lands near Granite Canon. The price is said to be around $75,000. The above firm, of which Senator Warren is a leading member, is one of the largest and most successful handlers of live stock in the West, and are liberal patrons of Clay, Robinson & Co. They are evidently preparing for the future, as extensive handling of either cattle or sheep is out of the question unless the range is under direct control of the operators. Dry farming has been surprisingly successful in the semi-arid country during the past few years and the settlers are showing an increasing hunger for the land.

Reliable Medium Priced Automobiles.

We invite special attention of any of our readers contemplating purchasing an automobile to the full page advertisement of the E. R. Thomas Motor Co. on back cover. They are advertising used cars, many of which are less than a year old and all have been thoroughly overhauled and refinished in their own shops, at prices well within the reach of any prospective purchaser. There is no question that a rebuilt car of standard make and proven reliability is a better investment than a cheap new car, and we strongly advise any of our readers interested in this subject to write the E. R. Thomas Motor Co., 1200 Niagara St., Buffalo, N. Y., for additional particulars and prices on their rebuilt cars, mentioning their advertisement in this paper.

Windmills in Semi-Arid West.

The rainfall in the semi-arid West being always light, settlement in that section is to a certain extent hazardous, but the millions of acres now barren, which would prove rich and fertile if irrigated, are now attracting eastern farmers who are prone to risk failure in view of the possibilities in years of favorable precipitation. Some of this land will be reclaimed through irrigation and the growing of drought-resistant crops and the adoption of improved methods of culture will do much to make the farming of these lands less hazardous. But there have been many deplorable failures which could have been averted, had the settlers fortified themselves against periods of drought by irrigating small parts of their holdings.

It is with a view of helping such that the feasibility of pumping water for the irrigation of small areas in connection with dry-land farming of more extensive areas was investigated by the Irrigation Office of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Large wind movement provides a cheap source of power for lifting underground water, and the results of these investigations are embodied in a Farmers' Bulletin (No. 394) entitled "The Use of Windmills In Irrigation In the Semi-arid West," just issued by the Department. The possibility of this is set out in a simple comprehensive way, and practical suggestions are made to those who are now using or are contemplating the use of windmills for pumping water for irrigation. The data given for plants on the Great Plains show, however, that the windmill is not a cheap source of power, that to accomplish this result requires capital, and that if the conditions require too great outlay, it precludes the possibility of such a procedure.

The bulletin treats on the sources of water supply, the quantity of water available, well casing, sinking wells, capacity of mills, choice of tower, erection of mills, pumps, reservoirs, maintenance of mills, crops under windmill irrigation, and closes with a description of methods and mills now in use in Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and California.

Copies of the bulletin can be secured free, by applying to the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D C., to any senator, representative or delegate in Congress, or, for 5c per copy from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.

The Calf and the Silo.

A big Wisconsin calf shipper to Clay, Robinson & Co. says that the supply of calves will decrease from now on. He says the dairy business in Wisconsin has been expanding rapidly, which logically means a larger crop of calves, but some changes, brought about by the silo, will tend to reduce supplies from now on. It has been customary with dairymen to have their cows freshen mainly in the spring, consequently most of the calves were available at that time. Now, with the silo and succulent feed on hand about all year, dairymen are having calves come at all times of the year, which means that there will be fewer in the spring and more in the other seasons. This is a much better arrangement, for it make the runs more equable and consequently a better average price range. For the past two months receipts of calves have been very large, with new records being established, and buyers have been able to do great damage to the market.

Dan Flowerree Sells Montana Ranch.

Daniel Flowerree, pioneer cattleman of Montana and one of the best-known in the country, has sold his Rock Creek ranch, forty miles north of Helena, to J. B. Burke of Hogan and C. B. Power of Helena. The consideration was $90,000. The ranch has been used for winter feeding. It contains 13,000 acres of land. Everything but the live stock was included in the deal.

Be Kind to Auld Grannie.

(Words by Archibald Mackay.)

Be kind to auld grannie, for noo she is frail,
As a time-shatter'd tree bending low in the gale,
When yo were wee bairnies tott, totting about,
She watched ye when in, and she watch'd ye when out,
And aye when ye chane'd in your daffin and fun,
To dunt your wee heads on the cauld staney grund',
She lifted ye up and she kiss'd ye fu' fain
Till a' your bit cares were forgotten again,
Then be kind to auld grannie, for noo she is frall,
As a time-shatter'd tree bending low in the gale.

When first in your breasts rose that feeling divine,
That's wak'd by the tales and the sangs o' langsyne,
Wi' auld-world cracks she would pleasure inspire,
In the lang winter nights as she sat by the fire;
Or melt your young hearts wi' some sweet Scottish lay,
Like the "Flow'rs o' the Forest" or "Auld Robin Gray,"
Though eerie the win' blew around our bit cot
Grim winter and a' its wild blasts were forgot,
Then be kind to auld grannie, for noo she is frail,
As a time-shatter'd tree bending low in the gale.

And mind though the blythe day o' youth noo is yours,
Time will wither its joys, as wild winter the flow'rs;
And your step that's noo licht as the bound o' the roe,
Wi' cheerless auld age may be feeble and slow;
And the frien's o' your youth to the grave may be gane,
And ye on the brink may be tott'ring alane;
Oh, think how consoling some frien's would be then,
When the gloaming o' life comes like mist o'er the glen;
Then be kind to auld grannie, for noo she is frail,
As a time-shatter'd tree bending low in the gale

Measurement of Land.

The dimensions of land, or of any surface of considerable extent, are taken by means of Gunther's chain, which is four poles or twenty-two yards in length, and is divided into 100 equal parts called links. If the field be a square or a parallelogram, multiply the length in rods by the width in rods and divide by 160, the number of square rods in an acre. If the field is triangular, multiply the length of the longest side in rods by the greatest width in rods, and divide half the product by 160. If the field be of irregular shape divide it into triangles, and find the acreage of each triangle as above. All straight sided fields can be thus measured. Where the sides are crooked and irregular, take the length in rods in a number of places at equal distances apart, add them, and divide by the number of measurements, which will give the mean length; proceed similarly with the width, multiply the mean length by the mean width, and divide by 160. Where the field is in a circle, find the diameter in rods, multiply the square of the diameter by .7854, and divide by 160.

Iowa Drainage Report.

The report of the 1910 annual meeting of the Iowa State Drainage Association has been issued by Prof. W. H. Stevenson of Ames, secretary of the association. The report is an exceedingly valuable pamphlet of more than one hundred pages, and will be sent to any address for 25c. This report contains many papers and addresses of importance to every one interested in the drainage of farm lands. Every land owner and engineer should read Professor Marston's address on "Tile Drainage Engineering." Hundreds of farmers will also be interested in the following addresses and discussions: "Uniformity of Contracts and Specifications for Drainage Work;" "Data to be Contained in a Preliminary Drainage Report;" "Surface Water Inlets into Ditches;" "Public Drainage in Iowa; Its Hindrances and Needs," and many others.

Will Hire to Farmer.

I want to work on a farm where they have hogs. I have made a specialty of every phase of the hog question.

Have investigated the methods and practices of hog men who have made a striking success of any feature in the hog business.

By this means I have become possessed of a knowledge of producing pork by the most progressive, up-to-date methods. I have accumulated information that has cost those who tested it hundreds of dollars in time and money to secure; I am therefore prepared with this hog information that they have dug out by hard work and years of weary toil.

I feel that I am qualified as an expert to direct, show and teach this valuable knowledge to others and thereby save them from squandering money by adopting it at once without cost to them.

I will enter into a contract with anyone wishing my services for two years (I used to say four, but I was giving them so much they could not believe it real) I will charge 4c a month or $1.00 for the two years, payable in advance, and I guarantee to give you the best information and the last word on the progressive lines of hog raising, which includes feeding, handling and all things connected with the business. In addition I give you besides the two years the following premiums:

A copy of the Pig Feeders' Manual, worth a dollar to anyone.

A copy of the Progressive Scientific Feeding Formula, would be worth many dollars to any hog man fattening hogs.

A copy of the Hand Book on Hog Hygiene, containing a number of recipes that have sold heretofore for $10.00 and $20.00 for farm rights.

These are in addition to my services in the monthly work in which I visit each farmer. Send $1.00, it will be the full payment for the two years' subscription and these premiums.

Seed Bed for Milo.

The preparation of the seed bed for milo should be as well and as carefully done as for the corn crop. On old land the land should be plowed from five to eight inches deep, preferably several weeks before planting. The plowing of each half day should be disked and harrowed in order to compact the soil and prevent evaporation by the production of a soil mulch at the surface. It is a good practice to disk the land early in the spring to serve the tilth and soil moisture. If such treatment is given the soil can be plowed much more leisurely and still retain good tilth. Just before planting the land should be harrowed in order to to leave it smooth and well-fined for a seed bed.—Alvin Keyser, Colorado Agricultural College.

Chicago Printing Best in World.

During "Chicago Week," when products of local manufacture are to be exploited under the auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce, says the Commercial Union of this city, following facts will be shown: Chicago is the largest center of book manufacture in the world. Chicago has the largest high-grade printing plant in existence. Chicago has the job printing plants of the greatest capacity anywhere. One Chigago house just received the biggest contracts for printed matter ever sold in the world's history, and the job came from London, England. The telephone directory of New York City is printed in Chicago by a Chicago publishing house.

Clay, Robinson & Company's LIVE STOCK REPORT

Vol. 20 | Chicago, Friday, June 10, 1910 | No. 23

First Grass Range Cattle Arrivals of Season.

The initial shipment of western range grass cattle of the season showed up at Chicago on Monday of this week. They were from Great Falls, Mont., and included 35 steers of 1,061 lbs average at $5.50 and 50 steers of 747 lbs average at $4.90. The former offerings went on slop feeding account and the latter sold on country account. They were very thin in flesh and were picked too early. The cattle should have been held on the range several weeks longer. Last year the first rangers of the season showed up during the week of July 17. They were from Wyoming and included 1,016 to 1,084-lb steers at $5.00@5.40. They also lacked desirable flesh condition. A few shipments are expected from the western range between now and the first of August, but it is not thought that the movement will be on in earnest until that month.

Oklahoma Cattle Top Fort Worth Market.

J. E. Harrington, a popular and prominent stockman of Grandfield, Okla., had a string of yearling steers on the Fort Worth market June 6 and Clay, Robinson & Co. sold them at $6.75, the top of the market that day. There were 54 head in the lot and they averaged 906 lbs. They were corn and meal fed cattle.

Let Fat Light Cattle Come to Market.

We are advising the marketing of light weight cattle that are ready to come. It is about this time of the year that such offerings are relatively good sale. It does not pay to hold them back longer than June, as they have to compete with Texas grassers for the buyers' favor. The fat heavy beeves should also be marketed as soon as possible, as hot weather will hurt their sale.

Initial Sale of Breeding Ewes for Season.

First trades in breeding ewes for this season were in choice California yearlings at $6.00 per cwt. in Chicago and $5.75 in Kansas City. Best brought $6.00 in June of last year. These prices are not high enough to encourage many shipments of thrifty young ewes from the western range. It is said that those who are willing to sell good breeding ewes in the West can readily secure $6.00 per head. A sale has been made up to $7.00 per head in Montana and a party who was offered $8.00 for a certain cut from one band refused it. Good ewes will not go begging for bids at any of the markets. There should be a good demand from the East, South and Middle West, as prices paid for fat sheep and lambs all winter and most of the spring were highly encouraging.

Patrick Cudahy is a Bull on Hog Market.

"Every week seems to bring less hogs, and I believe we will run short all summer," says Patrick Cudahy, the packer. "Pork meat is not dear compared with other meat. Bologna bull beef costs 9c a pound to make sausage with. Pork is the poor man's butter as well as his meat. It looks to me as if the cellars everywhere will be swept clean this fall. We are on the eve of four or five of the greatest consuming months, and the lightest packing months of the year. Our Government report issued in April made the number of brood sows 8 per cent short of April, 1909. The shortage in our hog supply now and for months past can only be charged to the shortage of brood sows twelve months previous for we figure that twelve months from the time the sow is bred is when we get her pigs as hogs. Now, if we are 8 per cent short of sows this year compared with last, where is our increased hog supply to come from? The logical conclusion to be drawn from the Government report is a still greater shortage in our hog supply next year, and who knows but what such will be the case, for ever since hogs reached 8c the farmer, fearing that high prices would not last, has been selling off everything as fast as he could get it ready, even his brood sows."

THAYER CHILDREN AND THEIR PET PONY.

The above is a snap shot of the three daughters and two sons of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Thayer of Woodhull, Ill. Mr. Thayer is a prominent Illinois farmer and feeder and has shipped to Clay, Robinson & Co. for eleven years. He feeds around 200 cattle and about the same number of hogs annually and farms 280 acres of land that is worth $200@250 per acre. Mr. Thayer says he could not make a success of farming if he did not feed live stock.

The Grant Steers Top Denver Market.

On June 6 our Denver house handled for L. C. Grant of Pueblo county, Colo., 25 steers, averaging 1,271 lbs, which sold at $7.15. This price was the extreme top of the market for that day. This makes the third shipment which we have handled for Mr. Grant and in each instance his steers have proved to be market toppers.

Corn is Backward in Most Sections.

Examination of the corn crop by the amateur crop experts that visited the fields confirmed the reports that came in previously from dealers and others. The crop is backward on account of the cold weather, and there has been much replanting. Nevertheless, the crop experts noted that while the new crop was not coming along rapidly the old crop back was ample. Full corn cribs were found in all of the best corn districts of this and neighboring states, with a marked scarcity of stock of feeding age. A favorable change in the weather in the near future would make a very important change in the corn crop outlook.

Kansas Beeves Top Kansas City Market at $8.10.

Pool Bros., the well-known and extensive feeders of Ogden, Kan., were represented on the Kansas City cattle market June 6 with 33 head of 1,328-lb beef steers which Clay, Robinson & Co. landed at $8.10. This was the extreme top there that day. Pat Pool, a member of the firm, was in charge of the shipment and was highly pleased with the results.

Chicago Calf Receipts a Record.

Arrivals of calves at Chicago for May broke all previous records. Receipts were 72,398, against 62,759, which has stood as the previous month's supply since May, 1905. The big crop of vealers this season is due in large measure to the expansion of the dairy business in the territory tributary to Chicago. To save the milk for market the ambition of the average dairyman has been to sacrifice the calf as quickly as possible. For that reason there has been a closer marketing of the little bawlers and the majority were sent in as soon as they were able to pass government inspection. Prices for calves, notwithstanding the liberal receipts, were exceptionally high and most of the time averaged nearly a dollar higher than a year ago. This is accounted for on the ground that all meat products were high and that veal was about the cheapest commodity on the list.

Steers and Stags Mixed Top Sioux City Market.

Thomas Flaherty of Brule county, S. D., was on the Sioux City market May 31 with 32 steers and stags mixed, averaging 1,454 lbs, which Clay Robinson & Co. sold at $7.75, the extreme top of the trade. Included in these offerings were ten stags. The cattle were in good flesh and took on an extra fine fill, they weighing 700 lbs more than at home. Mr. Flaherty was highly pleased with our good combination—securing the top price and getting the best of fills.

Kansas Cattle Top South St. Joseph Market.

W. C. Mueller of Hanover, Kan., well and favorably known in cattle feeding circles, was on the South St. Joseph market June 7 with a load of 1,365-lb beef steers for which Clay, Robinson & Co. secured $8.00. This price was the extreme top there that day

Colorado Cattle Top Denver Market at $7.20.

It was June 2 that Clay, Robinson & Co. sold 36 steers for Henry Albert & Son, prominent and successful feeders of Loveland, Colo., averaging 1,131 lbs, at $7.20, the extreme top for the week. These cattle were bought through Clay, Robinson & Co. on the Denver market March 14, averaging 942 lbs, thus making an average gain of a little over 2½ lbs per head. This was a bunch of mixed Galloways and Shorthorns. Mr. Albert expressed himself as very much pleased with the sale of his cattle, getting 10@20c per cwt more than they expected. These cattle were fed on pulp and finished off on corn chop and alfalfa. G. M. Albert, who accompanied the shipment, is an equal partner with his father in the feeding business. Last year they produced the season's market toppers at Denver. Clay, Robinson & Co. sold them there about twelve months ago at $6.75, when the Chicago top was $7.25.

Beef Raising Discouraged by Federal Land Laws.

At the annual meeting of the Laramie County Cattle and Horse Growers' Association at Wheatland, Wyo., President George Mitchell of Uva delivered an address in which he strongly urged the sale or leasing of the grazing areas of public domain to live stock owners, and in the resolutions subsequently adopted by the association, a recommendation to this effect was embodied. President Mitchell said in part:

"We have in this country, according to the figures on file in the county clerk's office on the 1910 tax lists, 119,092 cattle, 14,036 horses and 250,000 sheep. These have a total valuation of $2,214,539.

"The stock growers represent the ownership of the majority of the patented land in the county today. Within the past four years a total of 167,000 acres of patented land has been added to the tax lists of this country, 100,000 of this has been added in 1909, while this year only 24,000 acres will be added. At this time there is about 1,450,000 acres under filings that has not gone to patent, which area is now subject to grazing conditions. At the present time there is only a little over 2,000,000 acres of Government land open to selection in the county. Probably this entire amount represents rough sections at this time, out of the 209 townships comprising the county of Laramie 123 have been set aside as dry farming lands and open to the 320 acre homestead filings.

"Unless something is done to sell or lease these rough areas to our stockmen in order that they may have some stability the herds in this county will gradually dwindle away. Until the time that the masses realize that the stockman is entitled to the same stability in his business as the laboring classes and allowed to acquire by some legitimate means the rough lands adjoining his productive lands will there ever be anything but decline to the industry."

Top of Kansas City Cattle Market 50c Per Cwt.

To top the cattle market 50c per cwt is a feat seldom performed. Yet that is what Clay, Robinson & Co. did at Kansas City on June 2. A. F. McReynolds of Elk Creek, Neb., sent in 32 steers of 1,402 lbs average on the above day and our house landed them at $8.25. This figure was 50c per cwt higher than any other cattle brought that day. This high sale was made in spite of the fact that the cattle lacked finish and proved as high as the best cattle made at Chicago on the same day.

Decision Important to Western Cattlemen.

A decision of some interest to western cattle growers has recently been rendered by the Treasury Department at Washington. The Matador Land and Cattle Co. began sending cattle of American origin into Canada in 1905, and in the autumn of 1907 and again in 1908 was permitted under a ruling made by the Department, while the Dingley law was in operation, to bring the cattle back to this country without payment of duty. Last year the company found a better market for the cattle in Canada than existed on this side of the line, so that the question of free return did not arise. Prior to the passage of the existing law the company sent something like 5,000 steers into Canada for grazing, and the question comes up as to whether or not these cattle, having been sent across under the old ruling, would now be allowed to enter free of duty under the operation of the Payne law, which went into effect on August 5, 1909. The decision just rendered is to the effect that the limit of free return now being six months from the date of exportation these cattle are not entitled to exemption. The practical result will doubtless be that Manager Murdo Mackenzie will export the steers direct to England, rather than pay the 27½ per cent duty to which they would be subjected for reentry into the United States.—Breeder's Gazette.

Highest Hog Sale by 10c Per Cwt.

As a further illustration in refutation of the report given credence by some that Clay, Robinson & Co. cater to the large shippers and are indifferent to the patronage of the small stockmen and occasional shippers, we take pleasure in citing an incident which occurred at South St. Paul on June 1. On that date our house there was favored with a consignment of seven hogs from A. J. Harpster of Hager City, Wis., and three cattle and two calves from M. Zienhelt of Ellsworth, Wis. The stock was transported from point of origin to market via the Mississippi River on the steamer "Red Wing." Mr. Harpster's hogs averaged 252 lbs and we succeeded in disposing of them at $9.50, which was 10c per cwt above any other sale on that day, while the prices obtained for Mr. Zienhelt's stock were equally satisfactory. This is one of very few instances that stock has been received at the South St. Paul Yards by steamboat.

U. D. B. Co. Buy the McPherrin & Son Cattle.

J. Q. McPherrin & Son, extensive feeders of Pottawattamie county, Ia., had 100 branded western beef steers of 1,418-lbs average on the Monday market of this week which we sold to the United Dressed Beef Co. at $8.37½. These cattle were bought on the South Omaha market by Clay, Robinson & Co. at $4.70, averaging 750 lbs. During the grass season of last year they were held on grass and then given rough feed until January. After this they were put in a dry feed lot and given a regular corn and hay ration, with cottonseed meal added the last two months. The cattle made an average gain of 900 lbs. Mr. McPherrin has fed cattle for 28 years and has been very successful. He has shipped to Clay, Robinson & Co. for a great many years. During the past six years the United Dressed Beef Co. have bought all of Mr. McPherrin's fat cattle, which is proof positive that his cattle are of the right kind, as the above company caters to a fine beef trade in the East.

THE NEBRASKA BEEVES WITH WHICH CLAY, ROBINSON & CO. TOPPED CHICAGO MARKET.

On Wednesday, June 1, Anthony Wilkinson of Grand Island, Neb., marketed 30 beeves of 1,698 lbs average at Chicago and Clay, Robinson & Co. sold them at $8.55, the top price that day, as well as for that week. They netted the excellent figure of about $145 per head and grossed $4,356.22. These cattle were mostly grade Herefords, heavily branded westerns and rather coarse. Their weight was against their sale and had they tipped the beam around 1,600 lbs they would have brought more money. Mr. Wilkinson is one of the most prominent feeders and ranchmen in the West, he having his feed lots in Nebraska and his ranch in Wyoming.

Good Trade in Texas Cattle on Northwest Account.

Hall & Harding, the extensive cattle dealers of Amarillo, Tex., write our Kansas City house: "While there seems to be considerable activity in the trade from the Northwest on young cattle, we do not think it has reached the extent of that of former years. However, there have been more trades, but as a rule cattle have sold one to three times. There has been more or less speculation this year. There are quite a few good quality and extra good quality twos left here. They range in price from $28@32.50 and as a rule the cattle are in good condition. South of here in and around Hereford and on the south to the T. & P. Railroad it is extremely dry. In fact, it is said that within a radius of 100 miles of Roswell is the dryest spot in the United States. West of us is a little dry, but north and east the range conditions are very favorable. Crops are most promising and we expect a good feeder and stocker market this fall."

British Consumers of Meats Facing Higher Prices.

According to advices from London, the British National Federation of Meat Traders' Association has announced throughout England that owing to the decreased supply both of home-grown and imported meats, the butchers and retailers of meats in England will be compelled to advance prices. The statement is added that there is no indication that meat will be any cheaper here in the near future. President Lindsey of the organization says the trade generally is of opinion that England's meat supply will be considerably relieved if Canadian cattle would be allowed to come into the country. There is, however, apparently no chance of the removal of the embargo against such meat. It would require an act of Parliament to admit it, and this is scarcely likely.

Imports Relatively Larger Than Exports.

There is an object lesson to be gained from a study of the import and export table found below. It will readily be seen that while the imports for April and the ten months ending that month of 1910 indicate a marked increase over the corresponding periods of 1909, our exports show but a slight increase. This would reflect extravagance on the part of the people in the United States and conservatism on the part of our foreign neighbors. Prosperous times have been in our midst for the past year, and what were luxuries a few years ago are common commodities with us now. Were it not for the generally favorable industrial conditions in the United States our imports would likely fall considerably under our exports, relatively speaking. Our imports and exports for stated periods follow:

Secure Rate Reduction in New York.

The Traffic Department of The East Buffalo Live Stock Association has succeeded in securing a reduction in rates from local points in New York State to Buffalo on sheep and calves of practically 20 per cent, which amounts to from 2@4c per cwt from the various points, according to distance. This reduction was obtained through the Trunk Line Association of New York and becomes effective shortly. The roads interested include the New York Central, the Lake Shore, the Erie, the Lackawanna, the Lehigh and others.

Never Had Cattle Fill so Well.

W. W. Morse, a well-known farmer, feeder and breeder of Hereford and Aberdeen-Angus cattle, was in from Boone county, Neb., Wednesday of last week with a string of yearling cattle, most of which were of his own raising. The shipment included 18 steers of 990 lbs average at $7.50 and 22 heifers and steers mixed, averaging 792 lbs, at $7.00. Mr. Morse stated he never had cattle put on such fills as these did and and further remarked that the prices Clay, Robinson & Co. obtained were fully as good as he anticipated. He was accompanied by his son, I. L. Morse. Mr. Morse has shipped to Clay, Robinson & Co. for 20 years at Chicago and the River markets. He lived in Chicago at the time of the great fire, which started the night of Oct. 9, 1871. On that day he was at the Stock Yards and bought some dressed beef. On account of failing health, Mr. Morse left Chicago about thirty years ago for Nebraska. He owns and farms 800 acres of land, with alfalfa and corn his main crops. He feeds from 100 to 150 cattle and 100 to 300 hogs annually. "Prospects are good for alfalfa in my part of the state," said Mr. Morse. "Corn planting has been pretty well finished, although there is some replanting being done. There is lots of old corn in our country and it is selling around 42c per bushel."

What Feeding of Cattle Will Do.

It is sometimes a matter of wonder that farmers fall in a proper appreciation of the possibilities of some departments of ther business. An instance of what was done in one case ca[illegible] under the observation of the writer last w[illegible] says the Iowa Homestead.

Less than a decade ago a farmer and his sons, who were actively engaged in the breeding of pure-bred cattle, became involved to such an extent that they were forced into bankruptcy. At the time they owned something over a section of good land. This, with all their cattle, was, of course, absorbed in the final settlement of the bankruptcy proceedings, and they found themselves facing a condition common to the ordinary tenant farmer whose possessions are usually larger in pluck and energy than in worldly goods.

They did have, in addition, a perfect knowledge of and confidence in cattle. After the settlement, having the confidence of the banking interests of the community, they bargained for a portion of their old farm. They buckled down to earnest work in raising big crops of corn and feeding it to good cattle. They made good and bargained for more of the old farm; then raised more corn and fed it to more cattle. They did better. Today they own all of the original farm and, according to a statement of their banker, have cattle enough on hand to clean it all up.

This is a remarkable achievement. It is such a one as is not frequently made in a lifetime of endeavor. It was made possible only because of the knowledge of what could be done with cattle and a determination to do it.

THE IOWA-FED BEEVES WHICH CLAY, ROBINSON & CO. SOLD AT $151 PER HEAD.

The above cattle were fed and marketed by T. S. Cartwright of Marshalltown, Ia. They numbered 48 head, averaged 1,530 lbs and sold at Chicago on June 6 by Clay, Robinson & Co. at $8.70. This price was the extreme top of the day for the number of offerings, and they made the remarkably high figure of $151 per head. These cattle were bought about one year ago at $4.15, averaging 830 lbs. Thus it will be seen that they sold $4.55 above their first cost and made an average gain of 700 lbs. They were given a small feed of corn on grass until Oct. 18, when they were put on a full feed of corn on grass and kept there until Dec. 1. After this they were put in a dry feed lot and fed a rather light ration of corn, with cottonseed and linseed meal being added. Mr. Cartwright accompanied the shipment and stated that he was delighted with the price his cattle brought. The parties is the photo are, reading from the right: Second party, James Hogan, the well known sheep feeder of Clinton, Mich.; third, Mr. Cartwright, the feeder of these cattle; fourth, J. Q. McPherrin, the veteran cattle feeder of Oakland, Ia.; fifth, J. J. Sutter, extensive feeder of Sturgis, S. D.; our Mr. Chas. O. Robinson is seen on the horse, and C. E. Procter, the prominent feeder of Alexander, S. D., is at the extreme left in the picture.

Hogs are Carrying Big Weight.

Hog receipts at Chicago in May were only 462,332, the lightest May run since 1887, when 436,000 arrived. Compared with May, 1909, the deficiency was 107,239. But if numbers were lacking weight was present, the official average for the month being 239 lbs. The average weight of May, 1909 was only 211 lbs. The 1910 May average was the heaviest for the month since 1896, when it was 243 lbs, and the heaviest for any month since September, 1907, when the record was 253 lbs.

NATIVE BEEF STEERS.

Range of prices and bulk sales of native beef steers his week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & CO.'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Range.		Bulk.
This week.....	$5.75@$8.75		$7.00@$8.30

Marketing Thursday of last week 4,728. The light run and a good demand afforded ready outlet for the offerings at prices generally 10c higher, with some of the plainer kinds going at 15c advance. The top was $8.25, paid for 89 corn-fed 1,406-lb natives and 58 distillers of 1,385 lbs average. Twenty-one loads of meal-fed Texas steers arrived and tops made $7.15, with the bulk at $6.65@6.90, prices that showed 10@15c advance over the start of the week. Friday run 1,725. Market held a firm tone, with both local dressed beef men and eastern shippers in the trade from the outset. Best offerings at hand were 22 head of 1,385-lb distillers at $8.25. The week closed with prices generally 25c higher than the finish of the previous week. Practically all the advance was made after Wednesday. Thus the buyers gathered in the great bulk of the week's arrivals at steady rates.

An excellent trade in cattle on Monday of this week. A supply of 18,804 was a few thousand below expectations. Prices were generally 10c higher than Friday of last week and 25@35c above Monday of the previous week. Local dressed beef buyers and eastern shippers were lively bidders from the outset and a brisk market ensued. It was a good indication of a broader outlet for beef. Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska contributed a goodly quota of the choice offerings, which went right up to the best time of the year. The proportion of arrivals to go above $8.00 was the largest in many weeks. Forty head of prime 1,535-lb Herefords reached $8.75, within 10c per cwt of the high point of the year and the highest since March, when a like price was recorded. Our sale of the T. S. Cartwright 48 head of 1,530-lb offerings from Iowa at $8.70 was top for their number. They netted $151 per head. Supply Tuesday 4,154. There was sufficient demand to clear offerings at fairly steady prices. Quality was rather plain, best offerings available, numbering 17 head and averaging 1,285 lbs, going at $7.65. There were 59 loads of Texas cattle included in the total run, of which 28 loads were on sale. A string of cake-fed dehorned Herefords of 1,170 to 1,204 lbs average sold at $7.25@7.35, with horned cake feds going at $6.60@6.90, while horned grassers of 1,084 to 1,100 lbs average made $6.25@6.30. A run of 16,000 Wednesday was about in line with expectations. Both local dressed beef buyers and eastern shippers were good bidders and the market had fairly active tone at prices strong to 10c higher. Top beeves made $8.70.

Greater Efficiency Brings Success

Competition is keen in all lines of business. The most capable operator in any field of human endeavor usually lists the larger number of clients. In business where the charge for service rendered is a fixed one, he who has the larger list of clients must give the best service, get the best results, give greatest satisfaction to the customer. For selling live stock on commission there is a fixed charge. Compensation is the same per carload, no matter who renders the service. This being true, he who builds up the larger business must inevitably be he who gives the best service. It must be he who renders the best account to his employer—the shipper—who gives greatest satisfaction. Clay, Robinson & Co. have been successful in building up a live stock commission business. We could not have been so suceessful if we did not give the shipper satisfaction. Our service has pleased others. It will please you. Let that billing read:

COWS AND HEIFERS.

A steady to strong trade in cows and heifers Thursday of last week. Packers took most of the arrivals, although there was some outside demand. There was no quotable change in prices Friday. As compared with the close of the previous week prices were 15@25c higher. This advance was due solely to the big reduction in supplies and not to a broadening of the demand. Packers fought hard to prevent any price advance and discriminated against anything that showed the effects of green feed.

On Monday of this week trade was active and prices generally 10c higher. The supply was moderate and demand good on both local and outside account. Buyers were partial to the better grades, as against the medium and grassy lots. The Tuesday market lacked the strong tone which characterized the Monday trade and where prices were changed a weaker basis was noted. General trade is quite uneven these days and satisfactory and unsatisfactory selling depends upon the urgency of the orders held by buyers in one division as against those in another. Brisk trade on Wednesday at prices 10@15c higher.

CALVES.

On Thursday of last week prices were generally steady. Prime vealers, averaging 113 to 126 lbs, brought $8.50. All price changes Friday tended toward a better basis. Tops made $8.65 for 127 to 148 lbs average, the highest of the week. The advance over the close of the previous week was 25@35c. Grassy and light grades were sharply discriminated against.

Quality considered, it was a steady deal on Monday of this week, although the common and medium grades were slow sale. Under keen demand from packers, good to choice offerings showed 35@50c advance over Tuesday of last week. The run was moderate and quality very good. Tops landed at $8.90. Year ago	5.50	4.50 5.25	3.85 4.50

There was an advance of mostly 10c on Thursday of last week. Desirable offerings were scarce and a great many orders had to go unfilled. Friday market was firm with the previous day and generally 25c higher than the close of the previous week. All week long there was a scarcity of steers of good quality and strong weights, and buyers had to compete with killers for the few such offerings of this class that were available. The general demand was considerably broader, due no doubt to the improved tone of the fat cattle trade and to the fact that corn planting is well out of the way.

The market on Monday of this week was brisk at strong prices. Best call was from Yard dealers, whose pens were well cleared last week. Killers bought away from the feeder buyers most of the good quality steers with flesh, paying a premium for such offerings. Steady prices were readily paid Tuesday. Nothing choice could be had. Few of the kind which class as good were at hand. The Wednesday market was again active, and prices held fully steady.

Receipts Thursday of last week 18,587. A sharp slump in provisions put packers in a very bearish mood. Supply everywhere was light, but this condition was overshadowed by a bearish statement of stocks of provisions. Scattering sales were made early to speculators and shippers at 5@10c decline, but when packers got into the trade it was a 15@20c lower deal. Early top was $9.65, but $9.45 was the limit to the regulars. After the market was established the general bulk sold at $9.35@9.45. A 5@10c lower market Friday, mostly the latter. Run 20,842. Droves cost around $9.30, and more sold at that price than any other. Early it was a common quotation on mixed. Later better hogs had to accept the price and the close was on the bottom. Fancy light reached $9.40 early, but it was a $9.35 market for shipping offerings and $9.30 for packing grades. Saturday supply 7,417. Prices fell 5@10c. The close was mean. Although fancy butchers reached $9.40 at the start, choice offerings had to sell at $9.25 late. In the main it was a $9.25@9.30 market, which price range showed 25@30c decline from Saturday of the previous week.

On Monday of this week arrivals totaled 29,526, being more than expected after last week's decline in prices. Opening 5@10c lower, the market later on came back steady to strong with Saturday's closing rates. Bulk early sales were largely around $9.20, but later on most of the big droves cost close to $9.25. Top $9.35 for fancy light. Marketing Tuesday 8,308. Opening 10@15c higher, market closed easy, owing to most of the big local packers being indisposed to follow the advance. Supply was light and outside demand better than recently. A $9.45 top was made and $9.35@9.40 took a good slice of the crop. Marketing Wednesday 16,000. Opening 15@20c higher, general market ruled 15c up, although later on it was hard to obtain much advance over the Tuesday average. Top $9.65, with sales in main at $9.50@9.60.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of hogs:

*Obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co.

Marketing Thursday of last week 12,409. Better demand rendered trade in sheep and yearlings active at prices firm to 10c higher. On the other hand it was a very uneven deal in lambs, with shorn offerings going generally 10c lower and the springers steady. A load of fancy 115-lb western wethers went on export account at $5.40, but the top to the packers was $5.25, paid for 105-lb western wethers and 101 to 124-lb native ewes. A string of 88-lb yearling wethers made $6.10. Shorn lambs sold largely at $7.50@8.25, with one string of fancy Colorados up to $8.30. Spring lambs in main at $8.50@9.00, the latter price being the top. Receipts Friday 7,797. Sheep and yearlings were in urgent demand at prices 20@25c higher than the previous day and 40@50c above the close of the previous week. While shorn lambs sold steady, springers went 15@25c higher. The summit for sheep was $5.50, this price being secured by us for both ewes and wethers. As compared with the close of the previous week shorn lambs were 25@50c lower, medium kinds showing most loss, while rates for springers showed no quotable change. The limit for shorn lambs was $8.25, obtained by us for Colorados. Springers reached $9.25 for 48 head. The top for a full load was $9.10, this sale being negotiated by us.

Marketing on Monday of this week 13,079. It was generally a 25c higher deal in both sheep and lambs. The light run, more eastern orders and better interest on the part of local slaughterers enabled the selling interests to control the whip hand from the outset. Result was a brisk market and an early clearance. The summit for shorn lambs was $8.60, we landing three different strings of Colorados at the price. Best spring lambs at hand brought $9.25, although a fancy class would have found outlet as high as $9.50. Western yearlings and wethers mixed, averaging 91 lbs, sold at $6.15, with top sheep at $5.75, western wethers of 111 lbs average making the figure. A string of grass sheep from Washington arrived, the first of the season from there. Sales included nearly 900 yearling wethers of 88 lbs average at $6.65 and nearly 300 ewes and wethers mixed of around 111 lbs average at $5.25. Supply Tuesday 12,302. Another 15@25c advance was scored. Packers took hold readily. Fancy 67 to 70-lb spring lambs made $9.60, and we landed shorn Colorado lambs at $8.85, the top by 5c per cwt. A string of 89-lb grass Washington yearling wethers sold at $6.75, with ewes and wethers mixed from the same state at $5 35. A fancy lot of 113-lb western wethers brought $6.00 and bulk of native ewes sold at $5.35@5.75. Marketing Wednesday 18,000. While sheep sold steady, lambs went 15@25c higher. Top spring lambs $9.75 and top shorn lambs $9.00, both prices being obtained by us. The limit for sheep was $6.00,

South Omaha, East St. Louis and South St. Joseph count calves as cattle.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

P. P. Klick of Todd county, Minn., sold a consignment of hogs and cattle at South St. Paul.

P. L. Engles, a progressive farmer of Pierce county, Wis., had a consignment of hogs to South St. Paul.

Our South St. Paul house sold a mixed car of stock for L. Sauffer of Rice county, Minn., a progressive farmer in that vicinity.

Roediger & McHodgkins of Morgan county, Colo., marketed through our Denver house two cars of steers at satisfactory prices.

It was our pleasure to handle a shipment of calves for Stuebe Bros., the popular and extensive shipping firm of Brown county, Minn.

J. A. Polke of Keokuk county, Ia., had both cattle and hogs on the market and the same were handled by us to his entire satisfaction.

James W. Gillespie of Lawrence county, Ill.: "There are no cattle on feed in my section and very few hogs of any kind are here."

J. P. Brindle of Hardin county, Ia., brought in a big string of cattle and a shipment of hogs and we rendered him the service that suits.

E. J. Wagner, the extensive sheep feeder of Prowers county, Colo., was at Denver with a car of ewes which were sold by us at satisfactory prices.

A. E. Kelly of Cedar county, Ia.: "We are having pretty poor corn weather out here. Corn is of poor stand and not growing, with lots of replanting."

J. D. Funk, one of the members of the famous farming and feeding family of Funks, represented McLean county, Ill., on the market last week with a shipment of sheep and hogs.

D. L. Williams of Loup county, Neb., was represented on the South Omaha cattle market June 1 with two cars of yearlings, we landing one car of the best at $7.50, averaging 744 lbs.

J. A. Pitts of Maricopa county, Ariz., for whom we have handled several shipments of sheep this spring, sent our South St. Joseph house three double decks of Arizona ewes and spring lambs.

O. W. Shivvers & Son of Marion county, Ia., shipped us 20 stags of 1,250 lbs average at the start of this month and we sold them at $6.40, which was a high price, considering the class of cattle.

On June 1 our East St. Louis house topped both the sheep and lamb market by selling for Files & Johnson of Pettis county, Mo., a lot of 115-lb sheep at $4.75 and a deck of good 65-lb lambs at $9.15.

William Brookhauser of Knox county, Neb., was enabled to top the Sioux City hog market 2½c per cwt May 31 by consigning 71 head of 221 lbs average to our house there, they obtaining $9.40 for them.

The Elkport Co-operative Co. of Clayton county, Ia., and the Paullina Live Stock Co. of O'Brien county, Ia., representative and extensive shipping firms, sold hogs at a satisfactory price through us.

On May 28 our Denver house sold for the Colorado Stock Feeding Co. of Boulder county, Colo., three cars of steers, averaging 1,050 lbs, at $7.00, and also on May 30 a string of 131 head of steers, averaging 1,098 lbs, at $6.80.

C. L. Walker of Weld county, Colo., was on the South St. Joseph market with four double decks of 71-lb Mexican lambs which we sold at $8.25. Mr. Walker accompanied the shipment and was well pleased with the sale.

Evans & Cash on June 3 had on the Chicago market 545 lambs of 74 lbs average and Trimble Bros. on the same day marketed 446 head, averaging 85 lbs. The limit for shorn lambs that day was $8.25 and we landed both of the above mentioned strings at that figure. Both of the above firms are among the most extensive and successful feeders in Larimer county, Colo.

H. M. Thayer of Henry county, Ill.: "Received check for $2.16. The promptness of your firm in securing this reduction in freight goes to show that you are always looking after the interests of your customers. I thank you very much."

Ed. Biggins, who is one of the most successful and extensive shippers of Illinois, had in from Peoria county last week a big string of steers and heifers and he was delighted with the way we handled his offerings and the prices we secured for them.

Chas. Fitz of Webster county, Neb., visited our South St. Joseph house with a shipment of cattle and expressed himself as very well pleased with our services. Mr. Fitz stated that the prospects for crops were very good in his locality for this season of the year.

Our South St. Joseph house was favored with a shipment of cattle from G. D. Mattewson of Fillmore county, Neb., who accompanied the shipment and expressed himself as very well satisfied with the sale. He states that they are having to replant considerable corn in his locality.

F. J. SCHROEDER OF FORT COLLINS, COLO.

We are proud to record the fact that Mr. Schroeder is one of Clay, Robinson & Co.'s truest friends. He fed 6,600 lambs this season and marketed every one through Clay, Robinson & Co., and while here expressed his entire satisfaction with the way the lambs were handled and the prices obtained. No small share of the offerings sold at the top of the market on the days that they were disposed of. Mr. Schroeder is a pastmaster in the art of preparing lambs for the shambles and feeds from 5,000 to 10,000 lambs annually and is also an expert buyer. He is associated in the buying business with Bert McMurray of Fort Collins. They bought 61,000 lambs on the range last year for distribution to the feeders in Northern Colorado. This transaction involved around $185,000. Three years ago they purchased 103,000 range lambs, being the largest year on record for them. Mr. Schroeder is also prominent in real estate circles in his locality. He migrated from Ohio to Fort Collins in 1883. He has fed sheep for 15 years and until two years ago also handled cattle. During all of those years he marketed his stock through Clay, Robinson & Co. either at the River markets or Chicago. Mr. Schroeder, in conjunction with Mr. McMurray, has established a sheep ranch in the foothills ranging well up into the mountains, twenty miles from Fort Collins. They are running around 7,000 ewes. Their ranch is ideal for sheep. The altitude is high, with an abundance of shade and running water. They hold their sheep on the range the year around, the country being broken. The wind drives the snow from the ridges and thus good winter feed is afforded. However, they protect themselves from all unforseen danger from inclement weather by keeping a good store of corn on hand. These gentlemen evidently see the hand writing on the wall—high prices for feeding lambs in the future. Their purpose is two-fold, to breed a better feeding lamb than is possible for them to buy and to procure for themselves the breeder's as well as the feeder's profit. Both Mr. Schroeder and Mr. McMurray are men of much experience with sheep and we bespeak for their new venture a bright future.

G. L. O. Binder of Pierce county, Wis., together with Ferd Eckstein, Chas. Hartman and Martin Hambrecht, who reside in the same county, had a load of cattle and hogs at South St. Paul. Mr. Binder remarked that small grain was doing well in his section, but hay and pasturage was in a critical condition owing to the lack of rain.

The only lambs to sell above the $8.00 mark at South Omaha on May 31 were those handled by our house. The sales follow: For Putney & Warnock of Larimer county, Colo., two doubles of 74 lbs average at $8.25; W. F. Edmondson of Larimer county, Colo., two doubles averaging 73 lbs at the same price; W. L. McCaslin of Boulder county, Colo., two doubles of 81 lbs average at $8.15.

R. I. Bilby of Nodaway county, Mo., one of the most extensive farmers and feeders in the Middle West, had a car of 846-lb beef steers on the East St. Louis market Tuesday of last week and we sold them at $6.00. They were of common quality, branded and half-fat. On the same day we also sold for Mr. Bilby two cars of Texas bred, fair quality, half-fat, 640-lb steers at $5.50.

H. L. Wubbena of Osceola county, Ia., writes our Sioux City house: "My friends returned from Chicago with rather unsatisfactory results. They received 60@65c less than I did in Sioux City on May 24. They, however, experienced a train wreck which probably affected their cattle. I am greatly pleased with my sale and shall boost for Clay, Robinson & Co. in this 'neck of the woods.'"

Paul E. Remus, prominent farmer, feeder and breeder of Shorthorn cattle and Poland-China hogs, was in from Columbia county, Wis., Thursday of last week with 14 head of 1,246-lb steers which we sold at $7.55. They were grade Herefords and Shorthorns and some were of his own raising. Mr. Remus stated that he had counted on only $7.25 for the cattle, considering that that price would have been a very good one.

Friday of last week we handled a mixed car for Fred Schulte of Pierce county, Wis., at South St. Paul, and the following parties had stock in the car and were all rendered separate account sales and checks: John Wagner, Ross Bartlett, P. L. Place, John Janish, Aug. Folkoski, G. A. Olson, Ed Booth, H. Peterson, F. Janish, M. Burns, L. Bartlett, John McLavia, Art Wiser, Frank Thurber, Jake Huth, John Boney, Otto Samuels, Theo. Swenson, Hy. Hauschildt, Richard Cooney, Gus Groose and L. Rogers.

Last week we had the pleasure of rendering the service that satisfies to the following progressive feeders or shippers who had in hogs: C. P. Downing of Monona county, Ia.; P. Graham of Cedar county, Ia.; H. M. Thayer of Henry county, Ill.; H. E. Burnison of Adams county, Ia.; F. R. Hesley of Pottawattamie county, Ia.; O. Weber of Sioux county, Ia.; J. J. Hornbeck of Cass county, Ind.; W. Maride of Stephenson county, Ill.; J. L. Comins of Bremer county, Ia.; J. H. Reissen of Crawford county, Ia.; William Trevoar of Linn county, Ia.; L. C. Hessman of Mercer county, Ill.; R. H. Allerton of Piatt county, Ill.; William Cook of Dane county, Wis.; F. L. Guynup of Rock county, Wis.; W. A. Nichols of Knox county, Mo.; M. A. & J. A. Dewey of Vermillion county, Ill.; E. C. Lewis of Whiteside county, Ill.; Whitehill Bros. of Iowa county, Ia.; A. J. Penxe of Howard county, Ind.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

Thompson & Son of Todd county, Minn., helped swell the South St. Paul receipts with a load of cattle, hogs and sheep mixed.

John C. Calhoun of Lenawee county, Mich., writes our East Buffalo house: "I wish to thank you for the way you handled my lambs."

J. R. Kingston, a prosperous farmer and feeder of Stanton county, Neb., was on the South Omaha market with a couple of cars of cattle.

R. M. Hewsen, the popular manager of the Lexington (Nebraska) Shipping Association, had three cars of hogs on the South Omaha market.

Don Easley represented Sangamon county, Ill., on the East St. Louis sheep market May 31 with a lot of 121 lbs average which we landed at the top price of $5.00.

C. R. Evans, the extensive feeder of Larimer county, Colo., sold through our Denver house a string of cows and calves. They were handled to his entire satisfaction.

Banvier & Jones of Maricopa county, Ariz,, were on the Denver market May 24 with three cars of Arizona yearling cattle which our house disposed of at $23 per head.

At the start of this month the top price for yearling heifers and steers mixed at Chicago was $7.50. obtained by us for 25 head of 789 lbs average from an Illinois feed lot.

Jarnett & Alsup of Rutherford county, Tenn., had 233 spring lambs of 60 lbs average at East St. Louis on June 2 and our house landed them at the extreme top figure of $9.25.

D. D. Doty of Larimer county, Colo., had in the shorn lambs with which we topped the Chicago market at $8.30 June 2. The shipment comprised 206 head and averaged 83 lbs.

Ballantine & Beggs on May 30 marketed through our Denver house a carload of hogs, shipped from Otero county, Colo. They averaged 271 lbs and sold at $9.42½, the extreme top.

At the start of this month we had the pleasure of handling a car of mixed stock at South St. Paul for W. E. Stevens of Douglas county, Minn., one of our best and most valued patrons.

W. F. Edmondson of Larimer county, Colo., was on the South Omaha market June 1 with a double deck of lambs that averaged 73 lbs and brought $8.25 through our house, the top price for the day.

E. J. & Geo. Kent of Republic county, Kan,, write our Kansas City house: "Accept thanks for the amount of damage you secured from the railroad on our January shipment. We can recommend your firm for good work along that line as well as in selling."

The pinnacle for a load of spring lambs on the Chicago market June 3 was $9.10. This price was obtained by us for 100 head of 65 lbs average, marketed by Miller Bros. of Henry county, Ia., one of the most extensive feeding and shipping firms in the Middle West.

Summit for sheep on the Chicago market June 3, as well as for that week, was $5.50. This price was obtained by us on that day for 44 wethers of 115 lbs average and 93 ewes of 103 lbs average. These offerings were sent in by T. H. & J. W. Willis of Sullivan county, Ind. This firm is one of the most extensive and successful feeders of sheep in the Hoosier state.

Recently our Denver house sold hogs for the following well-known feeders: B. C. Tennant, Weld county, Colo.; H. D. Lute, Keith county, Neb.; J. R. Porter & Son, Dundy county, Neb.; Harshman & Axelson, Morgan county, Colo.; A. J. Shelton, Chase county, Neb.: Dean & Brown and Tom Calhoun, both of Chaffee county, Colo.; Hey-Patterson Meat Co., Las Animas county, Colo.

J. A. Brady of Nodaway county, Mo., had a load of 1,153-lb steers on the South St. Joseph market May 31 and we sold them at $7.00. Mr. Brady was very well pleased with the sale. He says they are getting too much rain in his part of the country and need some warmer weather for the good of the corn.

Irvine & Duncan, who are rated among the largest live stock dealers in Missouri, had on the Chicago market last week a shipment of beef steers from Pike county which brought very pleasing prices. This firm is also a liberal patron of our house at East St. Louis and we are proud to have their names on our books.

The limit for hogs, barring light weights, at Chicago on June 2 was $9.55. This price was obtained by us for three different lots, the sales following: For N. D. Beal of Monona county, Ia., 69 head of 247 lbs average: A. L. McElwain of Ford county, Ill., 54 head, 255 lbs: R. H. Allerton of Piatt county, Ill., 70 head, 249 lbs.

PAUL E. REMUS OF COLUMBUS, WIS.

He is one of Wisconsin's prominent and successful farmers and feeders, as well as a breeder of Shorthorn cattle and Poland-China hogs. He farms 320 acres of land. Mr. Remus says he has shipped to Clay, Robinson & Co. for several years and refutes the charges sometimes made that the smaller feeder or shipper does not get a square deal by shipping to us. He says that he is a small feeder, and not once has he had reason to complain of the service rendered him by Clay, Robinson & Co.

Geo. Stitt of Page county, Ia., and C. E. Noland of Holt county, Mo., both extensive shippers of cattle and hogs and good customers of our South St. Joseph house, were on that market with consignments and their visit as well as the business was highly appreciated.

Randolph county, Mo., was represented on the East St. Louis market Tuesday of last week with a load of fair to good fat 1,389-lb beef steers for which we obtained the very satisfactory price of $8.00. Wilcox & Littrell, the prominent and successful dealers, were the consignors.

Included in the prominent dealers who had butcher stock to us were: G. L. Martin of Hancock county, Ill.: G. W. Pentz and George Murray of Ogle county, Ill.; Butler & Downey of Monona county, Ia.: S. O. Welch of Hardin county, Ia., George Putn[illegible] Bureau county, Ill.

C. A. Holmquist of Knox county, Neb., had a load of cattle to our Sioux City house and said: "These cattle brought just what I expected, so I am well pleased." Mr. Holmquist is one of the Clay, Robinson & Co. boosters.

Wm. Smith of Ida county, Ia., writes our Sioux City house: "You made a very good sale of my hogs, considering the market and the time they arrived. This is the first car of hogs I ever shipped, but the returns show you handled them all right."

Hanson county, S. D., was represented on the cattle market at the start of this week by C. E. Procter with two loads of steers and a load of butcher stuff of his own feeding. He remarked that the prices we obtained for his offerings were far better than he had expected.

Fred Bruschwein, who farms 400 acres in Lamoure county, N. D., had a car of steers at South St. Paul. He expressed himself as well pleased with the sale and stated that crop conditions were not too favorable in his section, owing to extremely cool and dry weather, and that stock was scarce.

Our Sioux City house handled two loads of cattle for Lee Miller of Cedar county, Neb., and he said he was well satisfied with prices and that he had a very light shrink. "The sale of my last load of hogs was very good as I got more than I expected," he further stated. Mr. Miller is one of the biggest feeders in his section.

Pinnacle for shorn lambs at Chicago on June 6 was $8.60. We sold three different strings at this price, the sales following: For C. W. Jones of Powers county, Colo., 232 head of 85 lbs average: F. P. Breniman of Weld county, Colo., 480 head, averaging 79 lbs: Trimble Bros., Larimer county, Colo., 499 head of 83 lbs average.

W. H. Burney of Cedar county, Neb., one of the biggest feeders in that section, had seven loads of cattle at Sioux City on May 31 which we sold at very satisfactory prices. He was accompanied by his son. Mr. Burney says the pig crop was not quite so good as usual this year. He feeds top hogs, his last four loads having been top notchers.

M. B. Christ of Marion county, Kan.: "I have neglected to thank you for your advice which you so kindly gave from time to time on the market conditions. I sold the cattle in Kansas City for $8.25, the top that day by 25c per cwt, and they averaged 1,570 lbs. Corn is looking fine out here, but wheat is a total failure in this county."

C. W. Jones of Prowers county, Colo., fed four double decks of lambs last season and wound up his shipments this week. All of his shipments were handled by Clay, Robinson & Co. and we sold one double at $8.30, one at $8.40, one at $8.60 and one at $8.85. All of his offerings sold at the extreme top of the market with the exception of those at $8.30.

H. Stewart of Shiawassee county, Mich., writes our East Buffalo house: "Thanks for good work in handling double deck of lambs. We were more than pleased with $9.00 for these tailends. You certainly had them well filled, as they weighed more than at home. Hurrah for Clay, Robinson & Co.! This cleans us up this season. Thank you for market reports."

Included in the many prominent feeders or shippers for whom we had the honor of handling their cattle shipments last week were: H. F. Scarborough, Adams county, Ill.; McPherrin Bros., Pottawattamie county, Ia.; John W. Irvine, Pike county, Mo.: James Gorman, Muscatine county, Ia.; L. C. Hessman, Mercer county, Ill.; A. J. Holt, Nodaway county, Mo.; A. & L. Smith, Casper county, Ia.: G. B. McIntosh, Cerro Gordo county, Ia.; W. H. Reynolds, Knox county, Ill.; O. M. Gillett, Warren county, Ill.: G. P. Nieman, Butler county, Kan.: T. E. Mackin, Rock county, Wis.: G. F. Snow, Kankakee county, Ill.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

P. Seiler of Campbell county, S. D., favored our South St. Paul house with a shipment of cattle.

Steffan Jorgenson of Turner county, S. D., had a load of cattle at Sioux City. He is a very good friend of ours.

Karl Krugman of Knox county, Neb., expressed himself well pleased with our sale of his cattle at Sioux City.

C. P. Larson of Knox county, Neb., marketed a load of cattle at Sioux City and was well satisfied with the sale.

Fred Frevert of Knox county, Neb., a big feeder and a good customer of ours, marketed a load of hogs at Sioux City.

E. Johnson of Cedar county, Neb., had two loads of cattle at Sioux City which we handled to his entire satisfaction.

E. Chidester was in from Wapello county, Ia., with butcher stock and hogs and he was delighted with our work for him.

Wolf Bros. of Fayette county, Ill., and Mrs. Jennie Conrad of Newton county, Ind., each marketed steers at satisfactory prices.

We disposed of a mixed shipment of hogs and calves at South St. Paul for Merricks Bros. of Watonwan county, Minn.

M. Johnson of Dixon county, Neb., marketed a load of hogs at Sioux City and stated that he was well pleased with the sale.

Our Sioux City house handled a load of cattle for A. L. Zweibel of Dixon county, Neb., and he was well satisfied with his sale.

Green & Beatty, the frequent shippers from McHenry county, Ill., sold butcher stock at satisfactory prices through our house.

Damberger & Berndt of Campbell county, S. D., one of our valued South St. Paul patrons, were on that market with a car of hogs.

F. W. McDougall, prominent in business and shipping circles in Nelson county, N. D., was represented at South St. Paul with a mixed load.

J. A. Lutz of Wood county, Wis., and F. Lamon, Pierce county, Wis., each sold a shipment of steers, butcher stock and calves at pleasing prices.

Detlef Martens of Lyon county, Ia., had a load of cattle at Sioux City and he was very well pleased with the sale. He is a regular customer of ours.

A. J. Pence of Howard county, Ind.: "Received bill and check and everything is satisfactory. They made me money. I will come to Chicago again."

We handled a load of light steers and heifers at Sioux City for Henry Kreiner of Brule county, S. D., and he was well satisfied with the sale and weights.

B. J. Tighe of Moody county, S. D., had two loads of hogs at Sioux City. He is one of South Dakota's biggest shippers and is a very good friend of Clay, Robinson & Co.

J. A. Sharp, a progressive farmer of Pembina county, N. D., in conjunction with R. A. Switzer of the same county, sold a car of sheep and hogs at South St. Paul.

O. Pearson of Washabaugh county, S. D., had a load of hogs on the Sioux City market June 2. While he hit a lower market, he said that he was well pleased with the sale.

B. D. Lemert of Doniphan county, Kan., writes our South St. Joseph house: "Account sales for 24 hogs received. I am well pleased with the sale and thank you for your promptness."

On Tuesday of this week we handled hogs for A. F. Bright of Wabasha county, Minn.; G. French of Will county, Ill.; Petro & Kleen of Lake county, Ind.; R. W. Hudson of Day county, S. D.; W. H. Patton of Grant county, Wis. We are safe in stating that all of these parties were pleased with the way their hogs were handled and the prices they made.

G. W. Williamson of Charles Mix county, S. D., was on the Sioux City market June 2 with a load of cattle for which we obtained $7.85. He is an extensive feeder and a good friend of ours.

We sold a load of hogs at Sioux City for Jas. M. Youel of Moody county, S. D. He was very well pleased as he had home weights. Mr. Youel stated that corn is of rather slow growth in his territory.

Kent & Burke of Nance county, Neb., marketed a string of cattle through our house. This firm needs no introduction, as they are one of the most prominent and largest cattle feeding firms in the Middle West.

C. Lewison, the popular, extensive and successful shipper of Mower county, Minn., was one of the many parties whom we sent home pleased with prices obtained for their stock this week. Mr. Lewison had in steers, cows and calves.

D. D. DOTY OF FORT COLLINS, COLO.

Our staff photographer took a snap shot of Mr. Doty while he was in Chicago recently selling a big string of lambs through Clay, Robinson & Co. Mr. Doty is one of the most noted and successful farmers and feeders in Northern Colorado. He owns two fine farms and feeds from 3,000 to 5,000 lambs annually, and is one of Clay, Robinson & Co.'s most valued patrons. He is a well and favorably known westerner. At one time he had charge of the shipping operations of the Swan Land and Cattle Co. Later on he was prominently connected with the cattle interests of George Adams, Nelson Morris and John Cudahy in Wyoming. Still later he was in the cattle and horse ranching business with his brother, John Doty. Latterly he moved to Colorado and commenced farming, feeding lambs and raising fine draft horses.

J. J. Sutter of Meade county, S. D., had in steers, butcher stock and calves this week, while E. Degen of Faribault county, Minn., and H. K. Sherlock of Lee county, Ill., each had in steers, and we sold their offerings to their entire satisfaction.

A. Rider of Union county, Ohio, was on the East Buffalo market June 2 with 284 lambs of 75 lbs average which our house sold at $8.80. This price was the extreme top there that day and 30c per cwt higher than any other good lambs sold for.

J. W. Steadman was in from Union county, S. D., on Monday with 63 heifers and steers mixed of 755 and 973 lbs average which we sold at $7.00 and $7.40 respectively. The latter price was the top for heifers and steers mixed of that weight. Mr. Steadman is prominent in South Dakota live stock circles and we are proud to say that he is a customer of our firm.

Paine & McDonald, a representative shipping firm of Kossuth county, Ia., had in two loads of hogs. E. E. Paine in addition had in a load of his own feeding and stated that all three loads made very satisfactory prices. He also remarked that the summer run of hogs from that part of Iowa would be 25 to 35 per cent short of last year, and that there was a fair crop of healthy pigs.

We had the honor of handling hog shipments on Monday for the following progressive dealers: L. W. Ollin of Dallas county, Ia.; Kubla Bros. of Marion county, Ia.; Ben DeJarger of Blackhawk county, Ia.; Farmers' Mutual Elevator Co. of Lyon county, Ia.; J. Banwell of Webster county, Ia.; C. M. Rigg of Adair county, Ia.; C. Travelute of Fremont county, Ia.; R. Clayton of Buchanan county, Ia.; J. M. Kendrick of Floyd county, Ia.; A. T. Jones of Clay county, Ia.; Devlin & R. of Kossuth county, Ia.; J. L. Vanatta of Fremont county, Ia.; N. D. Beall of Monona county, Ia.; E. E. Hiatt of Miami county, Ind.

Short Cut to Good Beef Cattle.

A short cut, seldom followed, to the production of market-topping cattle offers great possibilities for profit to those who are bold enough to try it. Every stockman is anxious to take advantage of short cuts in order to secure high prices while they last; but those in position to cover the greatest distance in the race for improvement by one stroke of shrewd management are least likely to do so. They are the men who own herds of scrub cows that have not yielded a profit sufficient to form the basis for any expansion of operations, says the Breeder's Gazette.

A steer does not need to be of show quality to top the market, but he must have general characteristics approaching that type. If he is naturally plain no amount or kind of feed will make him a prime steer. Quality must be bred into a steer, and that can be quickly done. A pure-bred beef bull of outstanding type and quality will ordinarily sire calves of market-topping character even out of scrub cows. The calves will not be as good as their sire, but they will be far superior to their dams.

Last January the Gazette gave a detailed account of the operations of a northern Illinois farmer who had been topping the market repeatedly with the calves from a high-class richly bred and registered beef bull mated with common cows. The reason for the excellent results from such breeding lies in the dominating character of a bull so bred. Owing to his long line of ancestors of a high character and like himself, his inherited tendencies are practically all of one stamp. The cows, representing a heterogeneous mixture of unselected ancestors, have no definitely established type to transmit. The result is that the bull in such case is prepotent over the cows; the calves resemble him more nearly than their dams.

There is vast opportunity for farmers to profit by securing the immense improvement in their calves that certainly follows this line of breeding. With good stock steers as scarce as they are now, one could breed calves from common cows and a pure-bred bull and finish them as yearlings or later with a probability of satisfactory returns. The cornbelt can profitably breed cattle when prices for stockers, feeders and fat steers hover about their present levels. With the present marketing of calves, light steers, cows and heifers for killing purposes, the impending scarcity and the high prices are not likely to abate during the next few years. Especially is it true that the best classes of cattle are and will be hard to find either for feeding or killing purposes. The short cut to their production from herds of cows of whatever quality, headed by distinctly high-class bulls, is an inviting one.

Very Dry Around Sweetwater, Tex.

Our Fort Worth house writes under date of June 3: "The rains in Northern and Central Texas came late. The country from Sweetwater west on the T. & P. railroad is as dry as a powder house and the sandhills south of Odessa and around Monahans will furnish the early cattle from that country."

Wool Market Notes.

In Coleman county, Texas, shearing has commenced, and the wool is extra bright this year, owing to early grass and no dust to speak of this spring.

Last year new wools began at 25c. shot up rapdly to 30c and finally reached as high as 32c for fleece wools. This year, in Ohio for instance, wools started at 22@23c for medium fleeces, and the farmers are now reported to be holding off for 21@22c.

Included in the recent sales of wool at Boston were: 15,000 lbs fine washed delaines, 35c; 25,000 lbs unwashed delaines, 26@27c; 27,000 lbs Ohio ⅜ blood, 28c; 255,000 lbs Michigan and Indiana ⅜ blood, 28c; 15,000 lbs Northern California, 19@24c; 25,000 lbs Texas 10-12 months, scoured basis, 58@60c; 350,000 lbs Oregon staple, 18½c; 950,000 lbs territory, 17@22c.

Despite the fact that the shearing season has begun at Douglas, Wyo., there appears to still be apathy on the part of buyers, and so far only one or two representatives of the big wool concerns have been in that vicinity. Reports from Montana, also from Oregon and Idaho, are of a similar nature. It is believed by western growers that this indifference is assumed merely for the purpose of endeavoring to secure the clips at figures more favorable to the purchasers than prevailed last season, and it is further the opinion of flockmasters that this cannot be done.

Out of a total of 57,216,000 sheep in the United States over 35,000,000 head are in the far western states, and shearing on the ranches is now at its height. With the exception of Washington, every state west of the Mississippi Valley has more than 1,000,000 sheep. Wyoming leads with about 7,500,000, the next two states being Montana with 6,000,000 and New Mexico with 5,000,000. The quantity of wool turned out from the flocks of the country this year will be about 328,000,000 lbs. The average weight of fleece last year was 6.8 lbs, and the number of sheep of shearing age was more than 42,000,000 head. A sack of wool sells for $60, or somewhat less than a bale of cotton.

"This year the washing of wool could have been abandoned very easily," says a wool expert. "Farmers want to quit washing their wool. Buyers and dealers have had much to say in favor of discontinuing the practice, and some have even declared that no more washed wool would be bought. But when it comes to the scratch buyers do not allow their money to talk for unwashed wools. They may say what they please in favor of the reform, but with their money shouting against it their words amount to nothing. Washing exists not because producers are ignorant or 'set in their ways,' but because buyers refuse to make proper discrimination in purchasing wool. They and they alone are responsible for its perpetuation just as they were for the evil of sisal twine in other years."

About 300,000 lbs of wool have been shipped from the wool warehouse at Casper, Wyo., to eastern dealers, mostly on consignment. The only wool finally disposed of was that sold on the sheeps' back last winter. There are no offers for wool, and the dealers are advancing only from 12@15c per pound on consignment. The disposition among the growers is to hold for offers, for all realize that the supply of wool and sheep is not keeping up with the demand and that sooner or later the manufacturers must come into the market for wool, or let their big mill plants lie idle. It appears to be a waiting game, and as the sheepmen are in fairly good circumstances and have their own big national warehouse at Chicago, they are not worrying over the outcome. The lamb crop, considering the severe weather during the bucking season and throughout the entire winter, is much larger than was anticipated.

Up to the present time there has existed a deadlock between the western sheepmen and the eastern middleman on the matter of price for the new clip, the growers of the different far western sections asking from 20@25c per pound for the better wools, while the merchant is positively committed against paying within several cents of the figures wanted. As a result millions of pounds of new shorn wool in Utah, Wyoming and other states are being consigned to eastern dealers or warehouses, the flockmaster apparently preferring to wait for higher prices, which he believes firmly will be obtainable later when manufacturing conditions become better. However, it is contended that unless prices on goods for the light weight season of 1911, opening this month and July, a low enough to attract the clothiers a repetition of the unsatisfactory conditions experienced by the majority of mills during the heavy weight season now drawing to a close will continue to keep the wool industry in a state of uncertainty and unrest.

From Worland, Wyo., comes the following. "Wool buyers representing Boston houses principally are scurrying over the Basin country nowadays in a hustling endeavor to secure consignments of wool to their respective houses, and in a few cases they have been successful. The Boston gentlemen are discreetly disciplined to attempt any purchases at the present prevailing prices and they make no secret of the fact that a decided rise in them can be expected at any early date. The supply of wool produced in this country they say will fall far short of meeting the demands of many eastern woolen manufactories of limited capital, owing to the hard winter which prevailed all over the country. Several of the largest and wealthiest manufacturers have signified their intention to import large quantities of wool from Australia, despite the high protective tariff, but their action will have but little effect upon the profitable prices our flockmasters are certain to obtain later on."

"Some of those experts who are profoundly deciding in the gloom of dusty libraries that increased production of gold is sorely responsible for a general and uniform rise in prices would do well to rub their eyes, open the windows and look out upon the world," comments the Commercial Bulletin. "All prices are not advancing nor where prices have advanced is the advance uniform. It is pretty generally admitted also that wool has been given the stiffest kind of protection, a higher rate than most of us think it needs. Yet in spite of all the stories of the theorists the price of wool, one of the great staples in universal use, far from advancing, has declined. High prices for cloths in 1909 caused high prices for clothing, diminishing the demand. By the operation of this perfectly natural law the orders for cloths in January fell below the usual level. That meant a lessened demand for wool and prices went to pieces in consequence. It's funny that none of the wise men who have been meditating so profoundly over the cause of an advance in prices have noticed that right under their noses there has taken place one of the most spectacular decreas s in price the market has ever seen."

"We are inclined a little to the bullish side of the wool market," says the Wool and Cotton Reporter, "for we cannot believe that values can sink a great ways further. The present level of prices certainly is low, lower, in fact, than has been witnessed in the wool trade for several years. The shearing season is now reaching a close in practically all of the sheep-growing sections, yet there has been practically no buying done as yet. All of the wool houses have buyers representing them in the West, but, nevertheless, the report is that the wool growers still fail to realize the extent of the depression in the textile industry here in the East, with the result that they have as yet shown little or no inclination to come down in their values. In Idaho, Utah, New Mexico and Wyoming a lot of consigning is going on, and many of the farmers are storing their wools in their stables and barns in the hope that later on they will be able to dispose of them to a better advantage to themselves. In California a lot of consignment is reported to have been done to some of the eastern houses, but here, too, the farmers are storing their new clip in their barns and storehouses. As a matter of fact, the statement is probably true that there is more wool being stored in the West than has been the case for a number of years."

Increased Cost of Ranging Sheep.

The average cost of running sheep on ranges in 1890 was shown by data prepared by several large sheep owners to be between 60@70c per head a year. There was little money invested in the outfit or in land. Estimates from the books of eleven big sheep outfits in 1908 showed that the cost of running sheep a year under present methods is $1.40. The bulk of the increased cost is covered by investments in lands and improved ranches rendered necessary by the changed range conditions. It was also found that machine shearing of public plants costs 14c a sheep, hand shearing costs 9c. In the olden time average pay for hand shearing was about 4c for ordinary sheep.

Corn Crop of the United States.

Cotton no longer reigns as king of agricultural crops. It has been deposed by corn, which reached a value in 1909 of $1,720,000,000, more than double the aggregate appraisal of cotton and wheat, or cotton and hay. Corn is now recognized as the most economical feed that can be produced for all classes of farm animals. It is the principal feed relied upon to produce beef, mutton, pork and is practically the foundation of the meat production.

Good seed is important to insure the greatest possible yield. Poor seed not only produces feeble stalks and imperfect ears of the golden grain, but also makes a ragged, uneven stand. The best soil and improved cultivation will not compensate for poor seed. The importance of an average yield justifies the time necessary to specially select the seed in the fall, and not depend on taking the seed from the crib, which is usually of low vitality and is sure to deteriorate the normal yield of the crop.

The greatest yields of corn cannot be achieved by a succession of crops, but rather by a system of methodical crop rotation of oats, clover and corn, combined with barnyard manure and an application of rock phosphate to the land. The average yield at the Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station of twenty-nine years' successive crops of corn was twenty-seven bushels, corn and oats forty-six bushels, and corn, oats and clover fifty-eight bushels per acre. The yield, with treatment of lime, phosphorus, potassium and manure, reached an average of ninety-six bushels per acre.

Attention, Prospective Buyers of Feeding Cattle

This class of cattle can be bought to good advantage during July, August and September at South Omaha, Kansas City, South St. Joseph, East St. Louis, Sioux City, South St. Paul and Chicago. They include desirable half-fat natives, westerns from the pastures of Oklahoma and Kansas, from the Sand Hills in Nebraska and from the ranges of Wyoming, Montana and the Dakotas. We believe that this will prove a profitable investment where feeding for the above mentioned length of time. We advise buying steers of 1,150 to 1,250 lbs average. The heavier they are the quicker they can be returned to market, and at the same time when finished sell 30 to 40c per cwt higher than if they had weighed around 950 lbs at the start. : : : : : : : : :

Parties wanting such cattle to feed should place their order with Clay, Robinson & Co. at any of the above markets. Give us as much time as possible in which to make a purchase. If this is done we are not compelled to buy the stock the day we receive the order, but can wait and buy them when there is a big run and a lower market. Thus we can save the purchaser anywhere from 10 to 25c per cwt. : : : : : : : : : :

Also along in October and November well-bred thin cattle, averaging 700 to 900 lbs, can be bought to good advantage at the above mentioned markets. Late in the season they are well shrunken out and if carried along on fall pasture and stock fields, and given a little grain during January and February to keep them going ahead, they can be fed out for the May, June and July markets to good advantage. Or if this is not favorable, the cattle can be fed corn on grass for the August and September markets. : : : : :

Remember that it is not necessary for you to come to market. Send us your order, tell us the class of cattle you want, etc., and we will do the rest.

South Omaha, East St. Louis and South St. Joseph count calves as cattle.

Several Top Sales at South Omaha.

On June 7 our South Omaha house made several tops in the sheep department. They sold for Charles Hillgren of Fillmore county, Neb., shorn lambs at $8.35 and ewes $7.75, and landed spring lambs at $9.00 for T. J. Minier of Burt county, Neb. These prices were the tops for the respective classes of offerings.

Tuberculin Test Depresses Cattle Prices.

The milker market at East St. Louis is unsettled at the present time, owing to the ruling of a tuberculin test governing the importation of dairy or breeding cattle by the Missouri authorites. Owing to the fact that the animals have to be placed under a 36-hour test to determine any infection, prices have dropped on this particular class $10@12.50 per head and it is probable that a greater depreciation may develop. At the present time best milkers are quoted at $45@50 per head.

Oklahoma's Corn Crop Coming Along Nicely.

Secretary Charles F. Barrett of the State Board of Agriculture of Oklahoma says the present growing condition of corn is 93.3 per cent, against 91.2 per cent May 1 and 83.9 per cent a year ago. The report recites conditions above the average, considering the lateness of the season. The plant is healthy. The biggest corn counties of the state show conditions between 95 and 100 per cent. Grant and Kay counties are the only ones reporting any insect damage to the corn crop, chinch bugs doing some damage in that locality. Nine per cent of the corn crop has been replanted on account of exc[illegible] rains, hail and a poor stand.

Notice to Iowa Stock Shippers.

The Iowa Railroad Commissioners decided at a recent meeting to reinforce the rule permitting shippers to order 21 foot cars for light loads of stock. In case you order a short car and large car is furnished at the company's convenience, be sure to have your agen make notation to protect short car order.

Big Increase in Australian Sheep Flocks.

Advices from Australia describe the season as a record one, and that the lambing which is now in full swing will result in another big increase in the number of sheep already de-pastured in the Commonwealth. It is thought that when the sheep census is taken Dec 3 it will be found that Australia once again possesses more than 100,000,000 sheep. Experienced flockmasters there are of opinion that Australia is now dangerously overstocked and that when the next drought comes there will be heavy losses of stock.

WHAT THREE BIG MEN SAY

ABOUT THE KIND OF FARMER WHO READS "THE LIVE STOCK REPORT."

J. OGDEN ARMOUR

"The more I see of the men who raise the Live Stock of the country the stronger is the impression which the stockman makes upon me. He seems to me the big, strong representative figure developed by our agriculture. As a rule he is the leader in his community. He is progressive."

JAS. J. HILL, "the Empire Builder of the Northwest"

"The farmer and his land cannot prosper until stock-raising has become an indispensable feature of agriculture. The natural increase of animals, the stock sent to market, adds materially to the income of the farm."

HON. F. D. COBURN,
Secretary The Kansas State Board of Agriculture.

"Those who farm to any considerable extent are almost of necessity compelled to be live stock men, as it is only by the growing and fattening of live stock that they can obtain the most satisfactory profits from their land."

Feeding Experiment in Cattle.

The data of an experiment in beef production conducted at the Ontario Agricultural College is as follows: The roughage used generally consisted of clover hay, silage, roots and straw. Nine steers, averaging 1,145 lbs, fed a grain ration of bran, gluten and oil meal for 100 days made an average daily gain of 2.77 lbs per head at a cost of 5.61c per pound. The net profit per steer was $13.67. Four yearlings, averaging 472.5 lbs, fed for 190 days on the same ration minus the oil meal made an average daily gain of 2.17 lbs per head at a cost of 5.73c per pound. The net profit per steer was $4.43.

In the baby beef experiment five steers, averaging 504 lbs, on a limited growing ration, of which the grain consisted of bran, gluten, oil meal and corn for 393 days, made an average daily gain of 1.23 lbs per head at a cost of 5.5c per pound, but there was a loss of $2.04 per head. Six steers, averaging 593.3 lbs, on a full fattening ration for 290 days made an average daily gain of 1.61 lbs per head at a cost of 6.02c per pound. The average profit per head was $5.19.

Three steers, averaging 923 lbs, on a grain ration of bran and ground corn for seventy days, made an average daily gain per head of two pounds at a cost of 8.15c per pound. The net profit per steer was $1.47. Three steers, averaging 735 lbs, on a grain ration of bran and oil meal for seventy days, made an average daily gain of 2.1 lbs per head at a cost of 7.19c per pound and gave a profit per head of $1.26. Three steers, averaging 837 lbs, on a grain ration of bran, gluten and oil meal for seventy days, made an average daily gain of 1.53 lbs per head at a cost of 9.9c per pound. There was a net loss of 12c per steer.

Sheep are Good Fertilizers.

No class of live stock on the farm are as good to enrich the ground as sheep. They scatter the manure evenly over the pasture and results are more satisfactory than when other live stock are pastured. Of course the manure spreader does the trick with stable manure, but unquestionably sheep are the best natural spreaders in existence.

It is admitted all the world over that live stock on the farm means an addition to its fertility and the speedy improvement of land impoverished by long continued cropping. But stock on the farm is also a conserver of fertility, and the running of cows, hogs or sheep in the stubble is good business from any of the view points of the sound farmer. Stable manure is the finest of all fertilizers, but the difficulty is, in the first place, to get enough of it, and, in the second, to distribute it in such a way as to give the soil a fair service, and not a patchy feeding in spots; and, more than this, it is the rule where the manure from the stable is used at all on the farm, to cart it out and let it get bone dry before it is turned under, in which case it has about the fertilizing value of so much sawdust.

The sheep is the fertilizing friend of the farmer. It returns to the soil 80 per cent of what it consumes in the way of fertility; it will eat what other animals will refuse to touch; it is a browser and bites close; it will chew weeds and waste right down to the roots; and in new country will eat off young scrub as fast as it makes its appearance. All the while it is engaged in this good work of fertilizing the land and putting it into condition to yield its increase, the sheep is piling on wool and making mutton out of the weeds and rubbish, and thereby returning to the farmer a little in each hand.

ADVERTISE IN THE LIVE STOCK REPORT.

Reasons for Increased Living Expenses.

That the farms of the United States are not producing half what they should because of a lack of practical education among the agriculturists was the explanation of the high cost of living problem offered by Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson in an address before the Farmers' Union at St. Louis.

"I believe the solution of the cost of living problem lies in good hands," said Mr. Wilson. "The farmers are awake and no country is in danger when this is the case. I have investigated charges that the farmers have combined to put up prices and rob the community and have found that they are not true.

"Manufacturing will not succeed without an abundance of food at reasonable prices and now that the farms in the East have fallen away below the standard of productiveness the manufacturers are waking up to the danger of underproduction.

"A new day has come. Our population is increasing a couple of million or so a year and our production is not keeping pace with this growth. Prices have gone up. Something must be done.

"Of the fourteen states of the Mississippi Valley not one is producing half the crops it should because the farmers have not been taught scientific farming. We can and will ultimately double every crop we are growing and at the same time care for a population of 200,000,000. When we have done that the agriculturists of that day will show how to double the crops again.

"The Government is straining every effort to improve the soil and is accomplishing wonderful things, but there remain other things to be done.

"We are forgetting the old home economies. We buy too much in paper bags, forgetting the sacks and barrels. One of the best things I could recommend to you would be the appointment of a committee to study the economies of the home. Rice, sold at wholesale in Louisiana at 2c a pound, cost 8c a pound in the North in a paper bag."

A Correction.

Through a typographical error the price of Miller Purvis' new book entitled "Poultry Breeding" was stated in one of our recent issues as $1.60, whereas it should have read $1.50. Mr. Purvis is poultry editor of the Breeder's Gazette and his book is one of the best upon this subject we have ever seen. Anyone interested in poultry, and that includes nearly everybody, will find this book not only interesting but useful. It can be ordered from the Breeder's Gazette, 358 Dearborn St., Chicago, at $1.50 postpaid.

On page 14 is an advertisement of the Berkshire Hotel, Atlantic City, New Jersey. Our special representative in New York and Philadelphia speaks very highly of the Berkshire and its proprietors, the Messrs. Dickinson, whom they say use every endeavor to make their guests feel at home, and, considering the central location of the Berkshire and its fine service, they charge but a moderate price for entertainment.

A JUNK PILE MOUNTAIN OF VERY EXPENSIVE
CREAM SEPARATOR EXPERIENCE

(A sample pile of scrapped competitive separator bowls—the frames being broken up in the field to save freight on same).

During the year 1909 more than 10,000 enlightened and disgusted American users of poor or wornout competitive makes of separators threw them aside and replaced them with the new on top of 8,500 having done so in 1908, 7,000 in 1907 and 5,000 a year for several years before, or at least 50,000 within ten years.

If it were possible to put these 50,000 machines into one huge "junk pile," as they have in fact gone into a thousand "junk piles," it would make a veritable mountain of cream separator experience, as impressive as Pikes Peak and representative of as much costly acquired separator experience as though it were a great mine of gold or silver.

These 50,000 "near" and "just as good" cream separators cast aside to be replaced with De Laval machines within ten years, and so many of them within a couple of years, cost their users at least three and one-half millions of dollars in the first place and probably wasted three times that much in quantity and quality of product, excessive repairs and excessive time required to put the milk through them while they were used, or a total of at least fifteen millions of dollars, and more likely twenty-five millions.

What has happened in America in this way has in the same been doubled throughout the rest of the world, so that the total aggregates twice as much, or perhaps fifty millions of dollars. And worse still, this accounts only for those users who have recognized the facts and remedied them. There are thousands more users of inferior separators who have yet to do so, and unfortunately some yet embarking anew on this expensive separator experience of their own.

The facts are all capable of proof to the man who cares to have them proved and who doesn't want to contribute at his own expense to this enormous and ever-increasing "junk pile" mountain of cream separator experience, or, better still, to the man who has been doing so and thinks it about time to stop.

To such owners we would say that the De Laval Company will this year continue its "trade allowances" for old machines, because of the opportunity such exchanges afford in an educational way for the most practical illustration possible of the difference between good and poor separators, and thus putting a stop to the sale of others like them in the same neighborhood.

Any desired "trade allowance" information may always be had of the nearest De Laval local agent or of the Company directly.

Vol. 20 | Chicago, Friday, June 17, 1910 | No. 24

Much to Encourage Producers of Stock.

The commercial atmosphere is again clarified, so far as surface indications afford ground for conclusion. Clouds which appeared on the horizon week before last disappeared, following announcement that promised strife between Federal authorities and the railroads had been compromised. Two weeks ago the outlook in industrial circles was dubious. Grain prices suffered serious relapse, cotton shrunk in value to an extent sufficient to greatly discourage the grower, the crop prospective generally indicated poor health and gold exports increased with a corresponding rise in money rates. A top of these hindrances to trade, rail lines were enjoined from making effective a proposed increase in freight rates. Immediately they in turn rescinded orders for rolling stock, locomotives, steel rails and reconstruction material, such orders having been placed in anticipation of no hindrance in a general movement to increase gross earnings by higher tariffs. Instantly, as it were, the pulse of commercial activity hesitated and displayed irregularity. Happily, at this juncture a big railroad bond issue was disposed of in France by New York underwriters and the Bank of England announced a lower rate for money. Shortly thereafter the powers at Washington took railroad chiefs into camp and the announcement of a cessation of hostilities was the signal for a great wave of relief in all lines of industrial activity. Rail lines re-ordered supplies of every sort and the whole business world sensed the improvement that radiated therefrom. Weather conditions generally unseasonable, restricting trade in all staples and hindering growing crops, changed for the better and, with the return of sunshine and seasonable warmth, the whole commercial world was rejuvenated into old-time health and, vigorous as the youth who knows not his strength, is now forging ahead with increased ardor. Duly mindful that all commodities now command abnormally high rates and further considerate of the axiom that in days of prosperity we should prepare for adversity, we can see little in the present industrial outlook to discourage the breeder, the feeder or the shipper. Instead, much to encourage. Producers cannot hope always to have the good fortune to command prevailing prices, but remunerative rates seem reasonably assured for the future.

A SCENE NEAR SHERIDAN, WYOMING.

Wyoming Sheep Being Cleaned Up.

Reports from the State Board of Sheep Commissioners of Wyoming are to the effect that although considerable lip and leg ulceration still exists in certain portions of Wyoming, the general outlook is much brighter than heretofore. The work of inspecting is being pushed by the inspectors of the Bureau of Animal Industry and practically finished in Albany, Carbon and Sweetwater counties. But a few very mild cases were found and these were immediately placed in quarantine and the usual treatment carried on. Of the northern and central counties, with the reports now in, Fremont county shows the least infection, only two counties showing any infection, and this the mildest form of the disease. This showing is thought to be the result of the thorough dipping that was carried on in Fremont county last fall.

To Western Range Sheepmen.

Are you carefully considering the claims of Clay, Robinson & Co. for your patronage? Doubtless this will be read by many who are already our customers. To such we need only to say that the high standard of selling service rendered our western trade in past seasons will be fully maintained. There are no important changes in our selling staff for western range sheep at any market. At Chicago Mr. C. A. Kleman will personally sell and supervise in the western division, assisted by other salesmen of long experience. We might go on and give a list of salesmen in our employ at our ten houses, many of whose names would be familiar to western shippers. Suffice is to say, however, that they are the salesmen whose work for our clients in past years has built up our large business from the range country.

If you have never done business with us, we invite your correspondence and consignments. You can make no mistake by trusting your business to Clay, Robinson & Co. Whether you ship one car of stock or five hundred cars a year, your interests will be guarded at every point. Top market prices, quick returns, absolute safety and every service that a commission firm can render its patrons will be yours.

We intend during the shipping season keeping our customers well posted by means of the LIVE STOCK REPORT, our market letters, special correspondence, etc. If you should not hear from us with market information as often as you would like, drop us a line stating what you expect to ship, about when, and to what market, and we will see that your are kept in close touch with trade conditions. Please call upon us freely at any of our houses for any service in our power to render.

Highest of Year for Colorado Cattle.

The highest price realized at Kansas City thus far this year for Colorado cattle is $8.20, obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co. on June 13 for 26 head of 1,216 lbs average sent to them by Gebhard & Son, the extensive and successful feeders of Swink, Colo. These cattle were bought at the Denver Show last winter. Paul Gebhard was in charge of the consignment and expressed himself as well pleased with the result of this and the many former shipments that Gebhard & Son have sold through Clay, Robinson & Co.

Graham Cattle Top South Omaha Market at $8.10.

E. T. Graham, the veteran, extensive and successful cattle feeder of Creston, Neb., on June 13 had three loads of steers on the South Omaha market of 1,534 lbs average for which our house obtained $8.10. This price was the extreme top there that day. These cattle did not show the usual finish Mr. Graham puts on his cattle before sending them to the shambles.

Highest Sale of Oklahoma Cattle of Year.

J. E. Rose, prominent feeder of Marietta, Okla., was on the Chicago market June 13 with 32 horned steers of 1,414 lbs average which Clay, Robinson & Co. sold at $7.45. These cattle were corn and meal fed. They were in the quarantine division and the price was the highest of the year in that division for horned offerings.

NEBRASKA-FED BRANDED WESTERN HEREFORD BEEVES WHICH TOPPED THE CHICAGO MARKET AT $8.15 THIS WEEK AND WHICH SOLD THE HIGHEST SINCE MARCH.

The above cattle were handled by Clay, Robinson & Co. on Monday, June 13, and were fed and marketed by W. F. & L. P. Wheeler of Giltner, Neb. There were 45 head in the lot and they averaged 1,498 lbs. Some of these cattle were of their own raising. On the same day we also sold for them a second cut of these cattle, numbering 56 head and averaging 1,375 lbs, at $8.65. This price was the top on that day by 20c per cwt for offerings of that weight. All of the cattle were on feed about eight months, with corn and alfalfa the chief rations. They were given snapped corn at the first and later on shelled corn. The whole drove made an average gain of 476 lbs. The Messrs. Wheelers have a fine ranch in Rock and Brown counties, Neb., where they raise around 500 high-grade Hereford cattle annually for market purposes, and feed about 300 cattle and 500 hogs annually at Giltner, Neb. They are among the most noted raisers and feeders of cattle in the West. They have been steady shippers to Clay, Robinson & Co. during the past five years and during that time have topped the Chicago cattle market every time they have had in offerings. W. F. Wheeler, who also has an extensive real estate business, was in with the above shipment of cattle and expressed his entire satisfaction with the way they were handled and the prices they brought. His brother, L. P. Wheeler, attends to the ranching and feeding end of the business and that he knows the same throughly is attested by their great success.

It was June 10 that our Kansas City house realized $8.50 for lambs belonging to Marlman & Kline of Bent county, Colo., being 25c per cwt higher than any other shorn lambs have sold at since May 20, when we landed a car at the same figure.

INDIANA SPRING LAMBS REACH $9.75.

The extreme top of the spring lamb market by 10c per cwt at Chicago on June 10 was $9.75. Our house obtained this figure for 56 head of 66 lbs average, they being marketed by C. D. Maxwell of Clinton county, Ind. The price was also the pinnacle last week.

WE SECURED TOP FOR BOTH SHEEP AND LAMBS.

C. H. Poland of Fillmore, Ill., was on the East St. Louis market June 14 with a deck of mixed lambs and sheep which sold through Clay, Robinson & Co. The lambs went at $9.00, which price was 25c per cwt higher than any other natives brought, and the sheep also went at the top price of $5.60.

WISCONSIN WETHERS TOP WEEK'S MARKET AT CHICAGO.

W. C. Wilson, the well-known and successful feeder of Racine county, Wis., was on the Chicago market June 14 with 426 head of fed-western wethers, averaging 115 lbs, and Clay, Robinson & Co. sold them at $6.25. This price was the top that day, as well as for the week, and stood highest since May.

SEVERAL TOP SALES AT SOUTH OMAHA.

On June 7 our South Omaha house made several tops in the sheep department. They sold for Charles Hillgren of Fillmore county, Neb., shorn lambs at $8.35 and ewes at $7.75, and landed spring lambs at $9.00 for T. J. Minier of Burt county, Neb. These prices were the tops for the respective classes of offerings.

LAND SEVERAL LOTS OF NATIVE EWES AT SUMMIT.

Last week the limit for ewes at Chicago was $6.00. On June 9 we landed four different lots at the price, the owners being J. O. Weger of Crawford county, Ill.; W. J. Way of Marion county, Ia.; J. S. Bell of Lee county, Ia., and Russell Fitton of Champaign county, Ill.

HIGHEST LAMB SALE BY 25c PER CWT.

I. N. Shantz of Laclede county, Mo., was on the East St. Louis market June 8 with sheep and lambs. Our house handled the shipment and sold the 124 lambs of 62 lbs average at $9.15, being 25c per cwt higher than any other southwestern lambs made that day. They sold Mr. Shantz's sheep at $5.35 for the tops and $5.00 for the seconds.

BEST PRICE FOR NATIVE LAMBS.

Vincil Keith of Shelby county, Mo., on June 7 marketed at East St. Louis 124 good spring lambs of 65 lbs average. Our house obtained $9.10 for them, which was 10c per cwt higher than any other natives made that day. On the same day they sold a deck of 62-lb springers at $9.15 for Murphy & Bradberry of Weakley county, Tenn.

BOTH LAMBS AND SHEEP TOP WEEK'S MARKET.

On June 9 Wilcox & Tuttle of Redwillow county, Neb., had a double deck of lambs and wethers on the South Omaha market. Our house sold the 399 lambs, averaging 64 lbs, at $8.65, the highest price paid there that week for shorn stock, and the wethers at $6.25, averaging 84 lbs, also extreme top for that week.

HIGHEST SALE OF SHEEP BY 25c PER CWT.

J. D. Robinson of Turner, Kan., was on the East St. Louis market June 10 with 241 Mexican wethers of 100 lbs average which our house sold at $6.00. This price was 25c per cwt higher than any other sheep brought there that day and it was the first time in many weeks that sheep have sold as high as this figure there. These wethers were fed for five weeks at the Independent Yards and made the phenominal gain of 20 to 25 lbs per head in that time.

TOP FOR BOTH TENNESSEE AND NATIVE LAMBS.

Tillman & Mason of Bedford county, Tenn., were represented on the East St. Lous market June 13 with a double deck of 65-lb spring lambs which our house sold at the top price of $9.40. On the same day we sold for C. V. Bobo of the same county a double deck of 63 lbs average at $9.25. This sale was considered a very high one, as the lambs were sorted considerably lighter than most of the offerings on the market that day. Our house also sold on the same day for Vencil Keith of Shelby county, Mo., three loads of 67-lb native spring lambs at $9.10, this figure being the extreme top for natives.

Tells of Sheep Conditions on Western Ranges

R. F. Bicknell, of the well-known and extensive sheep firm of Bicknell & Gemmell of Pocatello, Ida., was at our Chicago office Wednesday consulting with our sheep department. Mr. Bicknell has been over the big sheep districts of Idaho, Oregon, Montana and Wyoming and has the following to say regarding conditions in those states:

"The loss of sheep from the severe weather last winter was the heaviest in Idaho, Oregon, Montana and Wyoming during the ten years I have been in the West. The deaths were not confined to the winter ranges, but even where preparations had been made to feed corn and hay. Never before have there been so many dry ewes in the West. The lamb crop in these four states is 10 to 15 per cent short of last year. The decrease was just as pronounced among the big ranchmen as the small ones: For example: In Central and Northeastern Wyoming out of one band of 2,000 ewes only 600 lambs were realized and only 4,000 lambs from a band of 10,000 ewes. The wool crop is also greatly reduced, it being estimated that the clip is 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 lbs under last year, taking the United States as a whole. In the four states I visited sheep did not shear within one to two pounds per head of a year ago. The range wool is much cleaner than usual and the average shrinkage will be 7 to 10 per cent under last year.

"Total shipments from the western range this year will not be as large as last. The movement of lambs will show fully 15 per cent decrease. Not only this, but the proportion of fat lambs will show an even greater falling off. This will be due to the range being so very dry. The shipments of yearlings will also be under those of last year. However, the total number of ewes and wethers to come forward will be fully as large as then, as there are so many dry ewes on hand and a great many wethers were held over from last season. Most rangemen will hold their young, thrifty breeding ewes. Because of the big loss of last winter, there is a pronounced shortage throughout the West. Demand on the ranges is in excess of the supply and young, thrifty ewes are being eagerly sought for at $5.00 to $6.00 per head.

"The movement marketward of yearling wethers will be of fair volume from now on. While there will be scattering consignments of lambs and aged sheep, the shipments will not be heavy until around the first of August.

"Wool buyers and sellers are far apart in their views of prices throughout the West. An unusually small number of deals have been consummated thus far, while the proportion of storing and consigning is remarkably large. The flockmaster is of the opinion that there is a secret understanding among the wool manufacturers and that there has been a manipulation of the money market. Many of the well-informed growers believe that this combination has been the chief cause of the dull and lower wool market. And it certainly looks as though such is the case, in view of the fact that wool prices at London are 2@3c per pound higher than a year ago, while they are 5@6c per pound lower in the United States. Among the few representative sales thus far this season are: At Mountain Home, Idaho, 15⅝c per lb for same wool, although cleaner, that made 22⅝c a year ago; at Heppner, Ore., 12 to 16c, against 15 to 23½ last year; at Pendleton, Ore., 12½ to 17⅝c, against 16 to 24c last year; at Vale, Ore., two crops at around 15c, against 21½c last year."

Bicknell & Gemmell are among the largest sheep operators in the West. They buy and ship from 200,000 to 500,000 sheep and lambs annually and their operations have been attended with great success. They have three ranges—one at Huntington, Ore., one at Bancroft, Idaho, and one at Pocatello, Idaho. They are now marketing a string of 28 cars of Oregon yearlings and wethers through our South Omaha and South St. Joseph houses.

First Range Sheep Sales of Season.

Initial sales of western range grass sheep and lambs at Chicago for this season are highly encouraging. They should bring good cheer to the western flockmaster. Spring lambs from California made $9.00, a record price for grass rangers by 10c per cwt. Yearling wethers from Washington brought $7.00, an exceptionally high figure for this time of the year. Wethers from Washington landed at $5.85, within 15c per cwt of the record price paid for range grass sheep in June, 1909. Ewes and wethers from the same state reached $5.60, a very high figure.

If you have sheep or lambs that are in good, sound, fat condition they should be gotten on the market as fast as practicable. There is an excellent demand on slaughtering account, prices are very high and there is nothing pressing on the market from any source at this time.

Following shows the sales of western range grass sheep, yearlings and lambs on the Chicago market thus far this season:

Promise of Broad Demand for Feeder Lambs.

There is excellent promise of a broad demand for range feeding lambs this season. Only a complete reversal of affairs will upset this conclusion. The country is clothed with a luxuriant growth of grass and an enormous acreage of corn was planted. Prosperity reigned in the camps of the lamb feeders during the past winter and spring. A good, strong market is practically assured the lamb grower for his offerings. Some orders are already on file for lambs to take out for grazing purposes. Nothing has been available thus far this season, but it would be safe to say that a desirable class of feeders would sell fully as high as the initial sale last year which was $6.40 in July. There will be no bargains in feeder lambs at any time this season.

Oregon Yearlings Bring $6.85 at Omaha.

Van Sicklin & Mitchell of Weiser, Idaho had an eight-car consignment of grass yearlings on the South Omaha market June 8, 9 and 10. These yearlings were practically the first grassers to arrive there this season and were in very good shape, considering so early in the season. The entire shipment was sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. at $6.85, averaging 90 lbs. Mr. Mitchell, who accompanied the shipment, expressed himself as being very well pleased with the condition of the trade at this time.

Reports of sheep losses the past winter throughout the West have been more or less garbled, but after all is said and done, many of the "scare" dispatches possibly came nearer to the truth than most of the fraternity imagined.

Mr. Mitchell asserted that sheepmen who wintered their stocks on the desert are feeling pretty glum. "One man that I know of who turned 4,500 head on the plains of Southern Idaho lost his entire flock," he said to the Journal-Stockman, "but the average loss hardly exceeds 25 per cent. Growers in Eastern Oregon also suffered severely, but on the home ranges, where plenty of hay was available, flocks emerged from the winter in very good shape.

"Grass is from four to six weeks earlier in Oregon this year and shipments will start in earnest toward the latter part of this month. Quality will be excellent, as growers are taking plenty of time to fatten their stuff. The lamb crop was fully normal and the market receipts will probably figure up to a very impressive total. Most of the crop will be marketed at River points, as coast prices are too low to suit sheepmen in that part of the country."

Estimate Sheep Loss at 27 Per 1,000.

The Government estimates the loss of sheep, including spring lambs, at 27 per 1,000, the same percentage as last year. The losses from exposure were heavier than usual and estimated at 46 per 1,000, as compared with 28 the preceding year and 32 for ten years' average. Considering the fact that the majority of sheep are ranged in the far west, the American flock masters' annual loss is comparatively light; in fact, remarkably small compared with some other growing countries.

Sensational Decline in Sheep Prices.

The decline for sheep and lambs this week bordered on the sensational. A total run of around 104,000, which showed about 32,000 increase over the previous week, tells the story. The great bulk of arrivals were native lambs and springers, while there was a goodly proportion of native ewes and fed-western wethers from Ohio, Packers received thousands of Tennesse spring lambs direct from Louisville. The decline for sheep and yearlings was 50c @1.00 from last week's close, while fed lambs lost $1.00@1.25 and spring lambs $1.50@2.00. Supplies were greatly congested, which, along with the narrow outlet through eastern shipping channels, enabled local packers to have complete control of the situation. And that they took advantage of the same is indicated by the remarkable break in prices. As compared with a year ago sheep are selling on about the same price basis, as are also fed lambs, but spring lambs are around 50@75c lower. Unless there is a sharp let-up in the liberal runs, prices will doubtless work still lower. The consumptive demand is not as broad as usual, owing to the high retail prices. Also the packers are endeavoring to get prices down before the western range season gains a good start.

Are Wool Buyers in Combination?

Wool buyers are working their combination overtime. They have put up the sign that prices must go lower, and lower they are. Lots of wool of last year's production is piled up in the big wool warehouses, and, of course, the big eastern buyers know where every pound of it is. They are banking on the holdover supply to help them out and up to date it is doing it. Some of the best posted wool growers say that the depression has been too much and too sudden to last, and they look for some reaction. Others are pessimistic and can see nothing but a toboggan slide. In the recent fall in fleeces some of the middlemen have been badly stung. Several big Chicago dealers are said to be loaded up with wool that cost them 25@27½c, and now they could not sell it at 20c.

Range Conditions Spotted in Montana.

Thomas A. Cummings, secretary and treasurer of the North Montana Roundup Association, with headquarters at Fort Benton, Mont., writes: "It is unusually dry in this vicinity. The adjacent country is comparatively well supplied and cared for in the way of moisture. This is somewhat extraordinary. Nevertheless the country up and down the Missouri River, say from the Great Falls of the Missouri to the mouth of the Judith and extending back from the river for a distance of about eight or nine miles each side, has a comparatively dry streak. This also applies to the country that is known as the Sweet Grass hills country. From all reports Montana generally will be found at the end of the season well in front."

Authentic Reports from Western Range Flockmasters

We have received hundreds of special reports from the western range relative to the condition of the sheep and range. These came from Texas, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Wyoming, Montana, South Dakota and Oregon. Our investigations were made in order to get authorative information regarding the winter losses of sheep, the outcome of the spring lamb crop and as to the movement of sheep and lambs marketward this season. These advices are from the small as well as the large flockmasters and we print the reports as they came to us. Summing them up as to states, they follow:

TEXAS—Winter loss from practically nothing to the worst in years, with 1 to 6 per cent predominating. Condition of the flocks extra good to good. Lamb crop varies all the way from a light percentage to 95 per cent, with a great many around 75 per cent. In some sections the shipments will be less than last year, others the same and still others larger. Wool crop from an average to better than average. Range fair to good, but needing rain in most parts.

ARIZONA—Winter loss from 9 to 25 per cent. Condition of flocks fair to good. Lamb crop 40 to 80 per cent. Shipments will be smaller from some sections and heavier from others. Wool crop from not an average to larger than average. Range fair to good, but needing rain.

NEW MEXICO—Winter losses very light to 7 per cent. Flocks good in some sections and bad in others. Lamb crop 75 to 85 per cent. Shipments will be less from some parts and larger from others. Wool crop an average. Range bad in some parts and dry all over.

COLORADO—Winter loss from nothing to 30 per cent. Flocks in fair to extra good condition. Lamb crop from 70 per cent to better than an average. Shipments from smaller to larger than last year. Wool crop not an average to very good. Some parts the range was never better, others not so good and still others very dry.

UTAH—Winter loss from 1 to 10 per cent. Condition of flocks not very good in some parts and splendid in others. Lamb crop 80 to 102 per cent. Shipments will be less from some sections and larger from others. Wool crop from not as good to an average. Rain is needed in most sections, some reporting range conditions never better.

IDAHO—Winter losses light in some places and 4 to 10 per cent in others. Condition of flocks good to fine. Lamb crop 80 to 109 per cent. Shipments will be light from some sections to heavier than usual from others. Wool crop from below an average to good. Range generally reported good, but needing rain.

WYOMING—Winter losses from 3 to 60 per cent. Flocks in poor condition in some places and fine in others. Lamb crop 25 to 95 per cent. Shipments will be lighter to heavier than usual. Wool crop from 2 lbs per head less to larger than usual. Range poor in some places, splendid in others and generally dry.

MONTANA—Winter loss from nothing to 10 per cent. Flocks generally in good condition. Many dry ewes reported and the lamb crop 45 to 75 per cent. Shipments will be less from some parts and heavier from others. Wool crop from not an average to extra good. Range good in some places, short in others and generally dry.

SOUTH DAKOTA—Winter losses 10 to 40c per cent. Condition of flocks good to fine. Lamb crop 20 to 90 per cent. Shipments will be less from some sections to heavier from others. Wool crop from not an average to an average. Range conditions fair to good, with rain needed in many parts.

TEXAS.

Coleman county—Winter loss 6 per cent. Condition of flocks good. Lamb crop 92 per cent. Shipments will be about the same. Wool crop ten per cent better than average. Condition of range good at present but getting dry.

Brewster county—Winter loss greater than for several years. Condition of flocks fairly good. Lamb crop very light. Shipments will be less. Wool crop not up to average. Range fairly good.

San Saba county—Winter loss about 5 per cent due to wild animals. Flocks wintered fine and are in good condition. Lamb crop 75 per cent. Wool crop better than average.

Concho county—Winter loss very light. Condition of grass good. Range in fair shape.

Sterling county—Winter loss 1 per cent. Flocks in very good condition. Lamb crop 90 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop better than average. Range in fairly good condition.

Kimble county—Winter loss not to exceed 5 per cent. Flocks in extra good condition. Lamb crop 90 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop a good average. Condition of range very good.

Schleicher county—Winter loss 4 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 90 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop up to average. Condition of range good.

Valverde county—Winter loss practically nothing. Condition of flocks good. Lamb crop 40 per cent. Shipments will be larger. Wool crop up to average. Range good in some parts and dry in others.

Tom Green county—Winter loss 1½ per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 80 per cent. Shipments will be 10 to 50 per cent heavier. Wool crop about an average. Conditions of range fair, but rain is needed in some parts of the country. The sheep industry is one of the best in this part of the state.

Coleman county—Winter loss 3 to 7 per cent. Flocks in good condition with the exception of one or two in the county. Lamb crop about 95 per cent. Wool crop better than for the last six or eight years. Range in good condition now, but will need rain soon.

Kerr county—Winter loss 3 per ctnt. Flocks in excellent condition. Lamb crop 60 per cent. Shipments will be about the same. Wool crop up to average. Condition of range A. No. 1 at present.

Tom Green county—Winter loss 5 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 75 per cent. Shipments will be larger. Wool crop up to average and with less shrinkage. Range conditions are spotted. If we get rains within the next few weeks our ranges will be better than the average.

Glasscock county—Winter loss not over 2 per cent. Condition of flocks fairly good. Lamb crop 94 per cent. Shipments about same. Wool crop about an average. It is hot and dry and we have had no rains for eight weeks.

Zavalia county—Winter loss 5 per cent. Condition of flocks good. Lamb crop 75 per cent. Shipments will be heavier. Wool crop not up to average. Condition of range good.

ARIZONA.

Yavakai county—Winter loss larger than usual. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop about 40 per cent in the Phoenix country. Shipments will not be as heavy. Wool crop up to average. Range good for this time of the season.

Coconino county—Winter loss 10 per cent. Flocks in fair to good condition. Lamb crop 70 per cent. Shipments will be smaller. Wool crop up to average. Present condition of range good, but rain is needed. If we get rains the fat lambs will be of good quality, but less quantity than last year.

Coconino county—Winter loss 10 per cent. Flocks in fair condition. Lamb crop 60 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop up to average. Range is dry.

Coconino county—Winter loss 9 per cent. Flocks in average condition. Lamb crop 80 per cent. Shipments will be heavier. Wool crop up to average. Range in mountains good.

Coconino county—Winter loss 15 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 80 per cent. Wool crop up to average. Range in good condition.

Coconino county—Winter loss 25 per cent. Flocks in fair shape. Lamb crop 50 per cent. Shipments will be fewer. Wool crop up to average. Range not as good as usual. No rains on the winter range and summer range needing rain.

Yavakai county—Winter loss 10 per cent. Flocks in fair condition. Lamb crop 70 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop not up to average. age. Condition of range good. We had the hardest winter in years.

Coconino county—Winter loss 10 per cent. Flocks in fair condition. Lamb crop 60 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop not up to average. Range in fair shape.

NEW MEXICO.

Rio Arriba—Winter loss 7 per cent. Flocks in first-class condition now. Lamb crop percentage 85. Wool crop up to average. Movement of stock more than last year. Range is dry.

Tonance county—Very light loss last winter. Flocks getting in bad shape owing to no water and grass. Lamb crop 75 per cent. Wool crop about average. Shipment of sheep and lambs will be less than last year. Range is in bad condition, and unless rain is had the loss will be heavy.

Eddy county—Winter loss 1½ per cent. Flocks in average flesh. Lamb crop 80 per cent. Shipments will be heavier. Wool crop up to average. There is plenty of grass but it is getting dry.

Chaves county—Very light loss last winter. Flocks in poor condition. Poor lamb crop. Wool crop an average. Range very dry and no feed. New Mexico is going through a period of drought for the past three years that is astonishing the natives.

Eddy county—Winter loss 4 per cent. Flocks in fair shape. Sixty per cent lamb crop. Average wool crop. More aged wethers will be shipped out than last year, but probably no lambs. Range fairly good east of the Pecos, but very bad west of the river. Wool is being held, buyers being indifferent.

Chaves county—Winter loss 10 per cent. Flocks in fair condition. Forty per cent lamb crop. Average crop of wool. Fewer shipments of stock. Range in bad condition because of drought.

COLORADO.

Archolelo county—Almost no loss. Last winter flocks in fair condition. Lamb crop 90 to 100 per cent. Shipments about the same. Wool crop an average. Range never better.

Montezuma county—Ten per cent loss last winter. Flocks not in very good shape. Ninety per cent lamb crop. Shipments larger. Wool crop not an average. Range is good, but short of water. Range is getting shorter each year, and the rancher has the Indian sign on the stockman.

Prowers county—Winter loss two per cent. Condition of flocks good. Lamb crop 80 to 90 per cent. About usual shipments will be made. Wool crop up to average. Condition of range extra good.

Prowers county—Winter loss heavier than usual. About 12 per cent of range stock all over and some places up to 30 per cent. Flocks in better condition than for years. My lamb crop was 95 per cent, but owing to so many dry ewes the range crop was 70 per cent in most places. Shipments will be reduced. Wool crop generally very good. Range in fine shape.

Bent county—I think placing the loss at 3 per cent for all classes conservative. Condition of flocks is good. Lamb crop 85 per cent. Under normal conditions shipments will be as heavy as last year. Wool crop better than average of last five years, there being little dust. Condition of range good but dry. Land farmers are crowding the range in places.

Rio Grande county—Condition of flocks reported very good. Lamb crop throughout the state will be better than average. Condition of range in sections very dry.

UTAH.

Wasatch county—Winter loss in Utah about 7 per cent. Flocks in good condition generally. Lamb crop estimated at 90 per cent. Usual shipments will be made. Wool crop if anything better in quality. It is very dry on all altitudes below 7,000 feet, while above that the season is advanced. Unless we get some rain soon this will also commence to show the effect of the dry weather that is prevailing the last three months. A very marked shortage of range will take place during the summer.

CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT

Utah county—Winter loss around 5 per cent. Flocks are in splendid condition. Lamb crop 80 per cent. Shipments will be about the same. Wool up to average and very clean. Range good at present but very dry, we having had no rain for eighty days.

Wasatch county—The winter loss is about 10 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 90 per cent. Shipments will be about same. Wool crop about an average. Condition of range good.

Wasatch county—Winter loss 3 per cent. Flocks in good condition. I docked 130 per cent of lambs Shipments will be less. Wool crop up to average. Range is dry. Fruit is getting ripe and if we don't have rain soon it will dry up.

Garfield county—Winter loss 8 per cent. Condition of grass fair to good. Lamb crop generally 80 per cent. Shipments will be larger. Wool crop up to average. Range drying up fast.

Carbon county—Winter loss about 10 per cent. Grass in good condition. Lamb crop 90 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop up to average. Range very dry. We have had no rain for about three months.

Utah county—Winter loss about 2 per cent. Condition of flocks good. Lamb crop 85 to 95 per cent. Shipments of lambs and old ewes will be more and of wethers less. Wool crop up to average. Early range is good. Later the range will be dry unless we have more rains.

Navajo county—Winter loss 10 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 85 to 90 per cent. Shipments will be larger. Wool crop up to average. Range in fair to good condition.

Salt Lake county—Winter loss 10 per cent. Condition of flocks good. Lamb crop extra good. Shipments will be about the same. Wool crop better than the average. Range is good but dry.

Utah county—Winter loss is light. Flocks not in favorable condition on account of dry weather. Lamb crop 90 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop not so good. Range is very dry.

Salt Lake county—Winter loss 5 per cent. Condition of flocks very good. Lamb crop 95 per cent. Shipments will be about same. Wool crop not up to average. Range very dry.

Wasatch county—Winter loss 5 to 10 per cent. Flocks were never in better condition at this time of the year. Lamb crop 102 per cent. Shipments will be larger. Wool crop below the average. Range conditions are a month earlier than last year and unless we have some storms, lambs will be shipped younger than last year.

Salt Lake county—Winter loss 5 to 8 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop about 80 per cent. Shipments will be about the same. Wool crop not up to average. Range in good shape.

Juab county—Winter loss 1 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 80 per cent. Shipments will be larger. Wool crop about an average. Range is good now but will be dry soon as there is a drought here.

Wasatch county—Winter loss 2 to 5 per cent. being not more than normal. Conditions of flocks very good. Young lambs have been docked 100 per cent. Shipments will be larger. Wool crop up to average but staple is lighter. Range conditions were never better since I have been handling sheep.

Salt Lake county—Winter loss about 7 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 100 per cent. Shipments will be 25 per cent larger. Wool crop up to average. Range is in good condition at present but if it does not storm within the next two or three weeks there is danger of a drought.

Wasatch county—Flocks are in good condition. Lamb crop 90 per cent of what have been docked. Shipments will be heavier. Lamb crop up to average. Range in good condition.

IDAHO.

Washington county—Loss light in Idaho last winter, though expensive for shipment on account of high cost of feed and long winter. Wool generally good but lighter than usual. Percentage of lambs about average because of exceptionally favorable spring. Sheep now in good condition. Shipments for year will be about same as usual.

Fremont county—Winter loss 10 per cent. Flocks now in first-class condition. Range is in good shape, but needs rain. Lamb crop about 80 per cent, owing to severe weather during breeding. Wool clip below average, but cleaner than usual. Shipments of sheep from this section will be light and movement of lambs below average.

Fremont county—Winter loss about 4 per cent. Condition of flocks good now. Lamb percentage 96. Wool crop about an average. Lamb shipments about same as last year. No rain has fallen for two months and it is getting dry.

Fremont county—Winter light loss. Flocks in good shape. Ninety per cent lamb crop. Wool crop up to average. Shipments of sheep and lambs will be heavier than last year. Range in good condition now.

Elmore county—Five per cent loss last winter. Flocks in fine condition. Eighty-five per cent of lamb crop. Wool crop up to average. Movement of sheep and lambs about same as last year. Range in excellent shape.

Blaine county—Winter loss was a normal one. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 95 per cent. Shipments will be heavier. Wool crop up to average. Range in good condition now, but if we don't have rain soon this will dry up.

Blaine county—There was about 5 per cent loss. Winter was very severe, but hay was plentiful, though higher in price than ever before known here. Flocks in splendid condition. Expect to ship fat stock right after July 1. Lamb crop percentage 109. Wool crop better in both quantity and quality than last year and better than for average years. Shipments of stock about same as last year. Range very dry, having had no storms of consequence since middle of March. Unless we have plenty of rains soon we will not have any fat lambs.

Lincoln county—Range conditions fair. Sheep in first-class condition. Lamb crop 15 per cent short. About the same number of sheep will be shipped as last year, but lambs will be around 25 per cent short. More ewe lambs than usual may be held back. Fifty per cent of Idaho wool crop has gone to the warehouses and balance is moving slowly.

WYOMING.

Carbon county—Winter loss about 25 per cent. Flocks in extra good condition. Lamb crop about 60 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop short but clean. Range in good condition now but getting very dry.

Big Horn county—Winter loss about 15 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 95 per cent. Shipments will be larger. Wool crop good. Range in splendid condition.

Sheridan county—Winter loss 15 to 25 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 80 per cent. Shipments will be larger. Wool crop up to average. Range is very dry and continued drought is causing alarm.

Park county—Winter loss about 5 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop estimated at 75 per cent. Wool crop lighter by about 2 lbs per head. Range in good condition.

Uinta county—Winter loss 12 per cent. Flocks in poor condition. Lamb crop 60 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop not up to average. Range in poor condition and very dry.

Uinta county—Winter loss 3 per cent. Flocks in fine condition. Lamb crop 105 per cent. Shipments will be larger. Wool crop over average. Range in good condition.

Natrona county—Condition of flocks splendid. Lamb crop about 65 per cent. Shipments will be less. In some places wool crop is not up to average. Range is good but getting dry.

Natrona county—Winter loss about 30 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop about 50 per cent. Wool crop up to average. Range very dry.

Weston county—Winter loss 25 per cent. Condition of flocks good. Lamb crop 50 per cent. Shipments will be larger. Good wool crop. Range is being taken up by formers.

Uinta county—Winter loss 15 per cent. Flocks in average flesh. Lamb crop 85 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop up to average. Range feed is good, but rain is needed.

Converse county—Winter loss 25 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 40 per cent. Shipments will be larger. Wool crop less than average. Condition of range not very good. Everything in stock line looks good, but grass is short.

Natrona county—The winter loss in my outfit was 4 per cent, but the average was 12 per cent. Flocks were never in better condition. Lamb crop best ever. We have 8,000 lambs from 10,000, averaging 80 per cent counting all dry ewes. More lambs will be shipped. Wool crop lighter and less shringage, but splendid quality. Range never in better condition for this time of the year.

Carbon county—Winter loss 12 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 60 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop up to average. Range in good condition, but little dry.

Laramie county—Winter loss 10 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 60 per cent. Usual shipments will be made. Wool crop 90 per cent. Range in good shape.

Converse county—Reports of winter losses vary. some telling of less than 10 per cent and others 60 per cent. I think the average will be 25 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 25 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop not up to average. Condition of range good, but a little dry.

Crook county—Winter loss 6 to 7 per cent. Flocks in fine condition. Lamb crop 50 to 65 per cent. Shipments will be heavier. Wool crop up to average. Range in good condition.

MONTANA.

Sweet Grass county—Winter loss not above the usual. Flocks are in good condition. Lamb crop 75 to 80 per cent. Shipments will be heavier for the reason that sheepmen will have to reduce their flocks owing to farmers taking up the range. Wool crop hardly up to average. Range in good condition.

Chouteau county—Winter loss about 2 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 75 per cent of entire bands and 90 per cent of all lambs dropped. Shipments will be heavier. Wool crop fully up to average. Range is short but good so far.

Ravalli county—No winter losses. Flocks in first-class condition. Lamb crop 85 per cent. About the usual shipments will be made. Wool crop up to average. Range rather dry.

Sweet Grass county—Five per cent will cover the winter loss. Flocks in good condition owing to an early spring and everyone having plenty of feed and hay. Lamb crop 75 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop is up to average and extra good and clean. Range is in good condition now, although it is getting quite dry and grass will mature earlier if we do not have rain pretty soon, and cause a shortage of feed later on.

Rose Bud county—Winter loss not over 3 per cent. Condition of flocks good. Lamb crop not over 60 per cent. Many dry ewes. Shipments will be less. Wool crop up to average. Range in good condition.

Yellowstone county—Winter loss 10 per cent. Flocks are doing well. Lamb crop 45 per cent. Shipments will be about the same. Wool crop up to average. Range in very good condition. It looks as though stock would move early if the markets are in good condition.

Cascade county—Loss 2½ to 3 per cent. Condition of flocks good. Lamb crop 75 per cent due to unusual number of dry ewes. Shipments will be considerably larger. Wool crop up to average in quality, but lighter in weight than usual. Range very dry but there is a good deal of feed.

Lewis & Clark counties—Stock wintered better than usual and winter loss only 3 to 4 per cent. Condition of flocks very good. Lamb crop probably 75 per cent or better. Shipments will be about the same. Wool crop up to average. Range in very good condition.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Harding county—Winter loss about 15 per cent. Flocks doing fine now. Eighty-five per cent lamb crop. Shipments about same as last year. Range is getting dry.

Harding county—Twenty-five per cent loss last winter. Condition of flocks now fine. Ninety per cent lamb crop. Wool crop not up to average. Shipments of sheep and lambs heavier than last year. Range in fair condition. Fine rains have broken upwards of a month dry spell.

Harding county—Winter loss 40 per cent. Flocks in good shape now. Lamb crop percentage 90. Wool crop not up to average. Land being homesteaded and range shheep will soon be a thing of the past.

Butte county—Winter loss about 25 per cent. Condition of flocks good. Lamb crop 90 per cent. Shipments will be heavier. Wool crop up to average. The range is dry but in good condition for sheep.

Pennington county—Winter loss 10 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 75 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop up to average. Range in good condition but getting a little dry.

Butte county—Winter loss 15 per cent. Condition of flocks good. Lamb crop 65 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop up to average. Condition of range fair. The rains we have been needing so much are beginning to fall.

Fall River county—Winter loss about 20 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop varies all the way from 20 to 90 per cent. Shipments will be less. Wool crop up to average. The range needs rain. It is the dryest I ever saw it in the Black Hills for this time of the year and I have been in this country 25 years.

Late Notes on the Wool Market

At a scheduled sale in Mountain Home, Idaho, 352,000 lbs of wool sold at 15⅝c per pound, while medium brought 15½ to 16⅝c. Most of the offerings were mixed grades.

The value of the current Australia wool clip is estimated at about $160,000,000 and her largest customers are France and Germany, followed by Belgium, England, America and Japan in regular order.

F. Beck of Coleman, Tex., writes us: "There are some 150,000 lbs. of wool stored here and about 175,000 to 200,000 lbs. at Talpa. I do not look for any sales to be made on account of the depressed condition of the wool market."

The wool growers around Bowman, S. D., are being offered 18@22c per pound for their clips. Many contracted with Eastern markets for a higher price than this last fall and the general belief there is that the market will be higher.

Word comes from Miles City, Mont., that a number of wool buyers have arrived there lately. No deals have been reported. The prices they are offering are not at all satisfactory to the owners. It is thought a great deal of the wool will be consigned to Chicago and eastern points.

Included in the representative wool sales at Boston recently were: 350,000 lbs. Michigan ⅜ blood, 27 at 28c; 10,000 lbs. northern California, 19 at 24c; 15,000 lbs. 12 mos. Texas, scoured basis, 60c; 45,000 lbs. Oregon staple, 18 at 20c; 750,000 lbs. territory wools, 17 at 22c.

A special western range correspondent of the American Sheep Breeder is responsible for the following: "At the present time the price of wool is about 15c per lb. It is hoped by the storage plan to bring about an increase of from 5@7c per pound. Many of the Idaho and Montana wool growers have signified their desire to include their clips with that from Utah, and Nevada wool growers will also join with the sheepmen of that state."

Advices from Heppner, Ore., are to the effect that the most successful wool sale yet held in Eastern Oregon this season took place in that city. Though the prices were not as high as the growers had hoped for, only eight or ten bids were refused and exactly 590,000 lbs of wool changed hands. The highest price paid was 15⅞c, that being the bid on the 20,000-lb. clip of Michael McKinney. The lowest bid was 11½c. This was received by Charles Bartholomew for his 9,000 lbs.

Wool has commenced arriving to Belle Fourche, S. D., and before many days there will be a large showing in each of the warehouses. The sheepmen say that there will be about the same amount of wool delivered here this season as there was last year. As to quality there seems to be some difference of opinion, but a well informed sheepman says there will be some wool as good as in former years, but that in few instances there will be some that will not be very desirable. No buyers are there at present, although several are known to be operating in this state. It is probable some buyers will come here from western Wyoming when the season closes there. As to prices, the grower expects about as good a price as he received last year, and the buyers seem to be determined not to pay the price that took the clips a year ago.

It is probably true that more wool is being stored this year in the West than has been the case for some years. In recent years the ranges have been getting smaller and the farmer has had to pay more for his sheep's keep, and the past winter has been a severe one for the wool grower. The latter, therefore, can hardly afford to let his wool go at a sacrifice, and he is storing and consigning in the hope that next fall he will be able to dispose of his clip to better advantage than he can do at the present time. Whether he can or cannot, of course, time will tell. The manufacturer is coming to the dealer and stating that he will not give better than such and such a price during the next season. For instance, they state that they do not see how they will be able to give better than 33@34c for Ohio washed delaine and 24@25c for unwashed. The wool dealer uses this argument in showing that it is impossible for him to meet present asking prices of the buyer.—Wool and Cotton Reporter.

Free wool is one of the hobbies of New England but the wool grower knows that the sentiment is largely the outgrowth of manufacturing conditions in the East. He knows that cloth is raw material to the clothing maker; that wool is raw material to the woolen manufacturer, and grass and other natural soil products are raw materials to the farmer; but that the farmer has to hire help in this country and compete with labor in the old world, and, therefore, every product which the farmer has to sell is as much a subject for a protective tariff, if necessary and asked for, as any of the other so-called raw materials, such as iron ore on the dump, coal on the dump, lumber at the mills, lead ore at the mines, wool in the sack, hides ready for sale, etc. The fight against wool in earlier years was as severe as that waged against hides in 1909, but it quieted down at the time of the McKinley bill, although there is a good sized wing of woolen manufacturers who are constantly pursuing the wool grower. As long as protection obtains as a national policy just that long will the sheep and wool growing states demand some kind of a differential against the flocks and fleeces of Australia and the Argentine Republic. —Cheyenne Tribune.

"Very few sales of wool have been consummated either in the eastern or western states," said the senior member of the firm of S. Silberman & Sons, the well-known wool buyers of Chicago to a representative of the Live Stock Report. "Buyers claim they cannot afford to pay the prices the growers are demanding and the owners will not accept prevailing bids. So there is practically a dead-lock. A great deal of wool is being consigned. During the past two weeks we have received 2,000,000 lbs on consignment, advancing 10@15c per pound. In spite of discouraging surface conditions, we are optimistic regarding the future of the wool trade. We believe prices are dragging on the bottom. Any marked changes from now on will be for the better. This upshoot will occur just as soon as the readjustment of prices has been made. Just now some of the largest woolen factories in the country are working only four days a week, as against every day and night two months ago. The foundation of the trouble was the stirring up of the tariff question. Politics have for the time being ruined the wool business. The manufacturer and the merchant are both operating on a very small scale. Just as soon as Congress adjourns and with fine weather for crops, the wheels of commerce will start anew and then will better times come. This will insure broad demand for wool and consequently bring about higher prices, which are far too low at this time. Another encouraging feature is the fact that United States buyers bought considerably less wool abroad this year, owing to the high prices, and imports of wool this year give promise of being smaller than in late years."

It's everybody's wool market. It's "in the air." Nobody knows when it's coming down, not even the wool astronomers. One fellow says it's the insurgents and tariff reform talk, another declares President Taft could settle the wool market and other unsettled business interest if he would only state publicly that his veto would follow any new tariff tinkering; another wise one says it's "high cost of living." Another insists that wool has been too high, anyway. Another assures you the manufacturers are trying to "bear" the market and get lower wool: another believes the lack of "heavy weight orders" responsible; another informs you that the manufacturers got overloaded with foreign wool at too high prices and can't see their way out; another says not over half of the mills are running; another assures you clothing is too high, anyway, and wool must come down; a wool buyer says he can't take chances and rather advance 12 to 18c and take it on consignment; another wool handler says it's 10c off; another 6c and another 5c; one of the largest wool houses say it will be better in the fall; another gives you the tip, "You better sell right away, outlook bad;" one of the oldest houses says, "Burch, you know as much as I do." Well the buyer and grower are far apart and the wool isn't selling—that we all know—and with a strong market abroad, why our market is so "incomprehensible," the good Lord only knows. We are not going to give any advice, for we don't know any more than the reader. We hope and pray for a change before long. We can't see any logical reason for lower wool.—American Sheep Breeder.

Wool Varies in Strength and Thickness of Staple.

Professor Craig, in his work on judging live stock, says that density is not only of value to secure a heavy fleece, but from a breeder's point of view its chief importance lies in the fact that it is more protection to the sheep than a fleece that is open. Not only is a sheep with a loose, open fleece more liable to contract a cold from exposure to rain or wind, but it is also more apt to yield a dirty fleece, as the loose fleece catches the dirt and dust and pieces of hay and straw. From the shepherd's point of view the density of the fleece is its leading feature, for it will be found that those animals with dense fleeces are less subject to such diseases as catarrh, running at the nose or scouring. When a sheep experiences a chill it at once affects the circulation and sends the blood to the internal organs, and inflammation or scouring results. This is why sheep that have open fleeces are more subject to such diseases than those that have dense fleece.

Wool is one of the best non-conductors of heat that we have, and when it is on a sheep in the form of a dense fleece it gives them the greatest possible protection from exposure. Furthermore, if the fleece is not dense it is almost impossible for the fiber to be sound, that is free from weak spots. When a sheep has been badly chilled or has become sick in any way so as to cause the pores of the skin to contract, a break or shrinkage occurs in the fiber at that point. The wool on a sheep grows from a small sac in the skin and it passes away from the skin through a small opening which may be easily contracted or expanded according to different influences. The influences are various and for that reason it is important that the sheep be covered with a fleece that is so dense as not to be affected by much external conditions.

The length of the staple is a very important feature, both from the commercial point of view and from the shepherd's standpoint. In the process of manufacturing the best wool goods, a long, even yarn, is indispensible, hence it is easy to see that length and strength of fiber includes its most valuable characteristics.

Proportion of Lambs Coming to Market is Large.

It is estimated that around 75 per cent or more of arrivals in the sheep department at Chicago are lambs. This goes to confirm the statement that the mutton production in this country has become a lamb proposition. At from 12 to 14 months of age lambs pass into the yearling and ewe classes. But it is the degree of maturity the young animal has attained rather than a set, definite age, which determines whether or not it belongs to the lambs class. Native lambs usually reach maturity at an earlier age than western lambs, because they receive a greater abundance of feed and they are generally free from merino blood. On the other hand it is not difficult to see that the slower approach to maturity, which holds an animal in the lamb class for a longer time, may prove a decided advantage. For example, a feeder may buy light western lambs in October or November and feed them until the following May, at which time they will still be classed as lambs, while native lambs of the same age and similarly treated would be regarded as sheep. Because the term lamb applies to a comparatively long period in the life of the animal there comes a time in the year when for several weeks it is necessary to make two separate quotations on lambs, one of which is designated as spring lambs, to distinguish those that are born in the year the quotations are made from those that were born in the year previous. These separate quotations first appear in May and continue until July 1. After the latter date all offerings born in the spring of the previous year are known as yearlings.

As to Future Supplies of Cattle.

There can be absolutely no question that the long period of remarkably high prices for practically every grade and class of cattle has done much toward depleting future supplies. We say future because present supplies are running very close to those of a year ago, taking the principal markets as a whole. But we are consuming the she stock. The shambles have been the ultime thule of great numbers of potential mothers. Calf receipts at Chicago last month broke all records—not because there were more calves produced, no, not by a great deal, but because values are too attractive to permit owners to risk keeping them. There has been a ridiculously high butcher stock market, really out of all proportion to steer values. The incentive was the cry "cheaper beef." We got cheaper beef, but it soon became "dearer" beef, and is so today. There is no such thing as cheap beef in this country, nor is there much prospect of there being anything of the sort for some time to come. Not so very long ago it looked as though Argentine and Australian competition were going to knock the props from under our beef structure by killing our export demand, but so tremendously has our home demand increased, with increasing population and ever growing prosperity among the great mass of the meat eaters, that we now need all we produce, and the export question is an unimportant factor in the market. The Americans are essentially meat eaters, climatically so, and while a vegetarian spasm passes over us once in a while, as a result of the "beef trust bagaboo" being recreated, we soon forget it and go back to our well-beloved beef. Workingmen are well employed, there is little inactivity in any commercial or industrial line, and with such materially lighter supplies of hog products and correspondingly high values for pork chops and tenderloins, beef is in great consumptive demand. Take away 30 per cent of the numbers of swine which were being marketed a year ago when supplies were away below normal and the present high plane of values is not so very remarkable. And brood sows, like brood cows, are being ruthlessly slaughtered in the face of abnormally small supplies through the country. True, they breed rapidly, but they are not getting the chance, nor are their bovine sisters. When there is less inducement to sacrifice young calves as well as female stock of older growth we may see increasing numbers of cattle, but when will that time come? We appear to be going in the opposite direction and reducing the very stocks we want to see increased. There is plenty of demand for breeding heifers and young cows, but the supply is too inadequate. We might import, but that is expensive business, particularly as we impose a good round duty. We must raise our own beef. Out West there is a mighty movement going on, and there lies our salvation. The great herds have melted away. The barb wired fence encloses a multitude of pastures where formerly they roved at will, but where now small individual herds graze. In the aggregate they make many hoofs. Thousands of settlers have taken up their abode in the western states of late years. They are tilling the land. Irrigation and dry farming are as much discussed as were roundups and raids in the older days. Where sage brush abounded, great waving fields of deep green alfalfa gladden the eye. The transition is well nigh complete. And on this multitude of small ranches and farms the bovine stocks are being enlarged. Their influence as yet is not so marked, but it is growing apace and helping in large measure to relieve the situation. But after all we have need of more production in the middle states, in the great valleys of the Missouri, the Mississippi, the Ohio, and until, as said above, that increase occurs it is but reasonable to expect a continuance of high-priced beef. We believe it will come, but its progress is essentially slow and will be so long as the mass of consumers are willing to pay so well for their meat.

Movement of Texas Cattle Increases.

The movement of Texas and Oklahoma cattle marketward is now the largest of the season. And shipments will show a decided increase from now on. At the start of this week the supply in the quarantine division at Kansas City was 9,000, East St. Louis received a big run and there were 1,500 at Chicago. Sharply lower prices were in force at all of the markets. The decline here was 15@25c, in sympathy with the loss for natives. Clay, Robinson & Co. landed 32 head of corn and meal-fed horned Oklahomas of 1,414 lbs average at $7.45, the top of the year for horned offerings. Had they been dehorned they would have sold 15@25c per cwt higher.

As mentioned above, shipments of Texas and Oklahoma cattle will increase in numbers from now on. They will also improve in quality. This bodes ill for the class of native steers and butcher stock that has to compete with Texas cattle for the favor of the buyers. In fact, we would not be surprised to see a very sharp price loss for these grades of native cattle just as soon as the movement of Texans is on in full blast. For this reason we are advising our patrons to market the common and medium grades of native steers and all classes of butcher stock as soon as possible. Do not delay in this, as it may mean the saving of hundreds of dollars.

T. W. CHITTICK GOES TO MILES CITY, MONT.

T. W. ("Tom") Chittick, for many years active in the Stock Yards trade at Chicago, has left for Miles City, Mont., to take up the position as live stock agent for the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway. He will also be foreman of the wool house at that point, which is controlled by the Milwaukee Road. His territory in the live stock field will be west of the Missouri River under the direction of his brother, Hugh Chittick, general live stock agent of the Milwaukee system. "Tom," as he is so familiarly known, has been a favorite at the Yards for many years and his leaving is regretted by a host of friends, who wish him success in his new work. He was with Clay, Robinson & Co. for six years and his services were valued very much by us. Mr. Chittick was prominent in Chicago Masonic circles. He is Past Eminent Commander of Englewood Commandery No. 59 K. T., Past T. I. M. of Imperial Council No. 85 R. & S. M., and at the time of leaving he was High Priest of Englewood Chapter 176 R. A. M. Before leaving Mr. Chittick's Masonic friends in Englewood presented him with a beautiful diamond studded Shrine pin and a handsome silver water set.

Prospects Favor Better June Sheep Trade.

There is a promise of a better market for sheep and lambs during June than in May. The supply will be some lighter. In May the ten leading markets received 802,140 head, a net increase of 111,539 over the corresponding month of last year. Texas poured heavy numbers of sheep and goats into the market hoppers and western-fed sheep and lambs were liquidated at a fast pace. Some of the worst drops in market history were recorded. The situation now presents a different aspect. The movement from Texas has spent its force, the feed lot stuff is well out of the way, the Colorado feds are all in and the run, from the western ranges will not be pressing on the market this month.

The Wool Property of the Sheep.

Sheep and wool very naturally go together; we can not speak of one, from the sheep raising point of view, without embodying the other. It is very important, therefore, in the raising of wool that we have sheep, and no less important in the raising of sheep that we have wool. When the sheep and wool business is properly understood, it assumes in the mind of the producer the double industry of mutton and wool. These two distinct products are inseparable in the same animal, and whether you desire to produce mutton or wool, the advantages you give the one, in feed and care, are shared in by the other, in increased production and profit.

It will be readily seen in this analysis the importance of combining these two qualities to the highest possible degree, in production, in the same animal. That is, in the selection of a breed of sheep to keep, get the sheep combining to the highest possible degree, both mutton and wool.

There has been great improvement made in recent years, in all breeds of sheep, practically in the increase of both of these qualities. All the mutton breeds of sheep are being bred to get more and better qualities of fleece, and vice versa, all wool breeds of sheep are being bred to get a better mutton carcass. The tendency is to a better sheep, a more profitable sheep, and the increase of mutton and increase of fleece, on the same animal, is the open field for improvement. This embodies the invitation that is extended to the ingenuity of the breeder.

It is quite important to know a good sheep when you see it. It is quite important to start with a good mutton carcass and a good, well wooled sheep. It is then up to you to improve on this start. You can do this in one way only, and that is by the use of a ram that excels in both mutton and fleece properties, on your ewe flock, and never let up on this determination, no matter how hard it becomes after a while, to secure such a ram. Improvement is a plain thing when you once get your mind to working in the right direction.

Kind Words About Sir Horace Plunkett.

It is always pleasant to hear about old friends, and in the North British Agriculturist of May 26 there is a leading article entitled "Ireland vs. Scotland." This article shows up how much Ireland has been favored by the British Government, and in the course of a very able article it has the following words to say about the above gentleman:

"But along with these, Ireland has done great things for itself in recent years, thanks mainly to the missionary zeal of Mr.—now Sir—Horace Plunkett. This gentleman was the very last man who might have been suspected of leading a great movement for the benefit of Ireland, for he was a Protestant and belonged to the much maligned and—in Ireland—distrusted race of landlords. Besides, he was anything but an eloquent orator who could sway the crowd with his finely rounded periods and thrilling perorations. In fact he was rather a poor speaker, so that everything was against him. But he was an enthusiast whose heart was in his work, and his enthusiasm carried him through. He saw that with a nation of small holders, such as Ireland was, co-operation was an absolute essential to success, and he 'stumped the country' preaching the doctrines of co-operation. He addressed fifty meetings before any of the good seed fell on good ground, but at length his persevcrance was rewarded by the wholesale establishment of creameries, bacon factories, credit banks, etc. But the good seed thus sown has at length sprung up and yielded 'some thirty, some sixty, and some an hundred fold,' and Ireland is now entering on the dawn of a new and brighter day under the influence of Sir Horace Plunkett's work, and the beneficent operation of the Land Purchase Act and the Irish Department of Agriculture."

Plunkett was for many years in Wyoming, and is still intimately connected with western affairs. His old partners, Andrew Gilchrist and Harry Windsor, have gone to the Other Side, but he retains all the energy which was one of his great characteristics twenty-five years ago. J. C.

Sheep on the Western Irrigated Farm.

Either for mutton or wool production, it is not probable that sheep raising on a large scale can be made successful on high priced irrigated land. There must be more to the industry than marketable wool or mutton, else some other system of using the productive power of the land is preferable.

Sheep may be profitably raised on such lands in two ways—a small band kept as scavengers or a pure bred flock for the purpose of raising rams for use in other pure bred flocks or in range herds.

The irrigated West is just beginning to face the problem of weed control, and as the lands are better fenced and better improved in every way the cleaning of fence rows, corners of the fields, and other neglected places becomes necessary for preventing the spread of weed seeds and for improving the appearance of the farm and the home. A small band of sheep will do this service more effectually and economically than any mechanical contrivance. Sheep do well in cleaning up neglected places, in the potato field, in stubble fields and wherever vegetative matter grows that is not harvested in salable crops. They eat practically all weeds when young. Investigation in Minnesota indicates that sheep will eat and practically destroy 430 of the 480 varieties of weeds native to that state. In the public parks of London, England, sheep do the lawn mowing and annually 5,000 sheep are fattened on the lawns of the metropolis of England.

Where the lands are well fenced—sheep proof—in the West, a small band of sheep will clean up the farm, thrive in so doing, and make salable mutton or wool on forage and roughage that would otherwise go to waste. Each ewe of such a band should annually produce a lamb worth $3.50 to $5.00, and from $1.50 to $2.00 worth of wool.

The handling of pure bred flocks, for producing rams suitable for range use, has already been taken up in some parts of Colorado, particularly at Greeley and Longmont.

With the exception of increased cost of foundation stock and therefore increased interest on investment to be taken into consideration, such flocks can be handled with but little more expense than grades. Pure bred rams produced by such a system of sheep husbandry when old enough for breeding sell to range flock masters for $16 to $25.

A sheepman at Boise, Idaho, who has established a reputation for producing rams for range use, has contracted his ram lambs for five years ahead at $25 per head.

It would pay western farmers to give sheep some consideration for either of the above mentioned purposes.—E. J. Iddings.

Northwest Crops Need Warm Weather.

"As a result of the continued cold weather and high winds which have prevailed throughout the Northwest," writes our South St. Paul house, "crops have been considerably hampered in their development. As compared with the same time last year there is no material advance apparent in the upper growth, although all field crops are very well rooted. Rains have been quite general throughout Minnesota, North and South Dakota of late, but temperature has ranged rather low and all that is lacking to effect good growth is warm, sunshiny weather. However, the situation at the present time is quite satisfactory in the main."

We Import Considerably More Wool.

For nine months ending March, 1910, the United States imported 218,677,680 lbs. of wool, compared to 174,000,000 lbs. last year and 92,000,000 lbs. in 1908. Of this amount 89,000,000 was clothing and 28,000,000 combing and over 101-000,000 lbs. was carpet wool. Heavy increases were noted in the clothing wool from South America and the combing wool from England.

Illinois-fed Cattle Top Chicago Market.

Richards & Galloway, extensive and successful farmers and feeders of Streator, Ill., were on the market June 16 with 28 head of mixed steers of 1,458 lbs average which Clay, Robinson & Co. sold at the top price of $8.50. These cattle were on feed about seven months and had been fed corn on grass since the opening of the grass season. Their first cost was $4.85 and they averaged at that time 1,048 lbs. N. B. Galloway accompanied the shipment and said that the price was 10c per cwt higher than their fondest expectations and that they were also highly pleased with the handling of their offerings.

A Place for Wether Sheep.

"It is said that fewer wethers reach the market every year," remarks W. C. Coffey, associate professor of Animal Husbandry of Illinois Experiment Station. "And, if the demand for dressed lamb continues to grow at its present pace, and if the range districts are brought into close communication with the markets, the number of wethers sold will probably be still less.

"If the rangeman has very cheap grazing lands, or too few sheep to run his ranch to full capacity, he has a place for wethers. When prices for mutton and wool are high, wethers will more than pay their way on almost any range, but the profit they yield compared to that from breeding ewes is much less, and hence wethers are being discarded by the more progressive sheepmen.

"However, as a mutton product wethers are desired in the hotels, restaurants, dining cars and steamships where the heavier cuts may be used to advantage.

"Prime wethers must be highly developed in fat, quality and condition and weigh from 95 to 125. However, wethers weighing 140 lbs and even more frequently grade as prime if all other conditions are right. This class of mutton is used for export, although there is some demand for it it larger cities in this country."

The Service Rendered by Commission Men.

[By Denver Record Stockman.]

Did you ever stop to think of the service rendered you by the commission firm that handles your shipment on the market and of how much you owe to the men who represent you in the selling or buying of your stock? Shippers are often prone to complain over the small charge of the commission man and occasionally—though we are glad to say less frequently with every passing year—they try to sell their own stock. This they are at perfect liberty to do if they desire. Of course the odds are against them when they try to do this, for the packers pay big salaries to men who have had a life-time training in the business, their duty being to buy just as cheaply as possible. When a stockman or farmer who has only a very meager knowledge of market conditions endeavors to cope with such a man, the result is inevitable—the farmer certainly gets no more than his stock is worth and usually much less than a competent commission man could have obtained for him.

There never was a time in the history of the trade when the requirements of the commission man in ability and shrewdness were as great as at present. To get such men requires high salaries, and the small charge asked by the commission firm for keeping such men always at the command of its customers seems infinitesimal when the amount of service rendered is taken into account.

In addition to the service of buying and selling, the commission man is required to keep this customer posted at all times on market conditions, to advise him when to ship and when not to ship, give him pointers on what class to handle, and in many other ways render him a service throughout the entire year for which the small fees he receives at shipping time often seem inadequate.

The commission man collects from the packers and other dealers to whom he sells the shipper's cattle and gives his own check to the latter as soon as the sale is made, thus obviating a long delay in receiving returns which was common before the days of the modern commission man and the modern live stock exchange. In addition to the service of selling, the commission firm has men engaged who meet the stock at the chute, see that it is properly yarded, fed and watered, and after being sold see to it that it is weighed at just the right time to bring the most money for the shipper. In fact, in a thousand and one ways is the commission man of service to his customer, which service the latter takes as a matter of course and for which he often gives little credit.

Government's June Estimate Shows Enormous Crops of Small Grains.

Undoubtedly the largest spring wheat, oats and barley crops ever produced in this country are promised in the June report of the Department of Agriculture, providing present prospects hold to harvest. The spring wheat crop is 30,000,000 bushels ahead of its next nearest competitor, that of last year, and that was in turn 17,000,000 bushels larger than the big crop raised in 1905. In round numbers the spring wheat crop this year promises 320,000,000 bushels, of which the three northwestern states of Minnesota and the two Dakotas have a promise for 272,000,000 bushels, or 40,000,000 bushels larger than last year's. The combined spring and winter wheat yield is but 22,000,000 bushels less than the record crop of 1901, and only 11,000,000 bushels behind that of last year. Heavy losses in Kansas and Nebraska seriously impaired the winter wheat promise.

The condition of pastures on June 1 was 88.5, against 89.3 on May 1, 1910, 89.3 on June 1, 1909, and 90.9 June 1 average of the past ten years.

Following table shows condition, acreage and indicated yield of the several crops, with comparisons:

Marketing Thursday of last week 5,819. An excellent demand at mostly 10c higher prices. The supply was soon cleared. A load of prime 1,455-lb offerings reached $8.75. Run Friday 2,041. Trade was fairly active at firm rates. Best arrivals comprised a string of distillers of 1,075 to 1,415 lbs average at $8.20. As compared with the close of the previous week prices showed a gain of 25@30c.

On Monday of this week supplies totaled 25,528, being several thousand above expectations. Buyers were mean bidders and the market was a dull affair from start to finish at prices 10@25c lower, the choice to prime lots showing least loss. There was a goodly number of choice beeves from Illinois, Iowa, South Dakota and Nebraska, with many distillers. However, medium and short-fed lots were in heavy proportion, which, along with 1,500 Texans, caused buyers to bear down on the market for these hard. The pinnacle was $8.75, as high as any time since March. The price was obtained by us for 45 branded western Herefords from Nebraska of 1,498 lbs average. There were 1,500 Texans and they sold at $7.00@7.50. Run Tuesday 4,617, which included thirty-five loads of Texans direct to packers and seven loads on sale. Native offerings were of ordinary class and met weak sale. Distillers sold 10c lower, with 18 head of 1,480 lbs average topping the market at $8.15. Texans sold at $6.60@6.95. Receipts Wednesday 17,000. While the good to prime offerings sold steady, all other kinds went slow to 10c lower. Packers had 1,500 Texans direct from the River markets and these exerted a bearish influence over the trade for medium and short-fed natives. Top was $8.75 for 32 head of prime 1,581-lb Illinois offerings. Bulk of sales were at $6.90@8.25.

Do You Know The Reason?

Webster said: "Deal with the man who does the most business: You will find there is a reason for it." Clay, Robinson & Co. are doing a good business. There's a reason for it. In the conduct of your business you no doubt have due regard for all details that are an aid to success in that business. Close attention to smaller details makes money in any business. If you take care of the pennies the dollars can go it alone. At your end of the road we will concede you overlook nothing that helps you to make money, but you will not secure the full reward for your labor, caution and painstaking methods unless you are certain your shipment will have the same careful attention at market you give it at home. We watch these details, for upon your satisfaction our success depends. That's the reason we do a big business. That's the reason you hear so much about us. Results tell in dollars and cents—the results of your attention to details and ours. Try, at any one of the ten leading markets and be convinced,

COWS AND HEIFERS.

At last week's close prices for good to choice cows and heifers showed 15@25c advance over the previous week's finish, but the common and medium classes were merely steady. A dull trade on Monday of this week, with prices 15@25c lower. There was another decline of 10@15c Tuesday, with grass-fed offerings going under $5.00 showing 50@75c loss from best time last week. Wednesday market semi-demoralized, with sales largely 25c lower. Twenty-four head of fancy 714-lb yearling heifers made $7.50, while 23 head of prime 1,236-lb cows brought $6.75. Market 50c@$1.00 under week ago.

The pens were well cleared of stockers and feeders at the close of last week, with prices 25c higher than the finish of the previous week. On Monday of this week supplies were increased, which, along with a slack demand, caused a break of 15@25c. Trade was again dull Tuesday, but not quotably lower. Generally a 10c lower market on Wednesday, with demand from all sources very slack.

Supply of hogs on Thursday of last week 10,312. It was a 10@15c higher deal, mostly the latter, with a $9.75 top and a $9.60@9.70 bulk. A good clearance was effected at an hour when the market had not got started on the corresponding day of last week. Light hogs were very scarce and there were no pigs to speak of. As corn is rendering a big profit by being converted into pork, marketing healthy pigs or shotes at this time would certainly be foolish. Friday run 17,437. There was a good market and a 5@10c decline, according to time of comparison with the previous day. Pinnacle was $9.70 and most offerings sold at $9.60@9.65. Receipts Saturday 14,287. Prices fell 5@10c, with the market closing on bottom, when packers bought some offerings at $9.50. Summit $9.70, but $9.55@9.60 took the big end of the crop. There was a pronounced tendency to discriminate against weight, especially if it was not in combination with quality. As compared with the close of the previous week prices showed generally 25@30c advance, with best light 30c up.

On Monday of this week arrivals totaled 41,322. The supply was several thousand above all expectations. It was mostly a 20c lower lower market, with a strong close. Bulk of offerings went at $9.35@$9.45. The top was $9.50, at which price we landed two lots, but some $9.32½ and $9.45 business was transacted in light, but $9.40 stopped anything with weight. Wet weather and low temperature in the country late last week rendered conditions favorable for shipping, which, along with the bulge in prices, caused more liberal marketing. Quality is still running phenomenally good. Big hogs with finish predominate. The average weight of last week's offerings at 242 lbs was the heaviest of the season and compared with 217 lbs a year ago. Tuesday run was 12,344. Early market was strong to 5c higher and before the finish 5@10c higher. Early it was a $9.40@9.45 deal and later $9.45@9.50 took the bulk. Top was $9.55, paid for light. Light hogs continue very scarce and shippers are clamoring for them where they have quality. Supply Wednesday 22,000. It was a good market at generally 15c higher prices. A spread of $9.60@9.65 took the bulk, with the top at $9.70. Both the small and big packers, as well as eastern shippers, were lively bidders during most of the session.

Run Thursday of last week 14,432. Barring heavy native ewes, which closed 10@15c lower, sheep and lambs soldsteady. Fed western yearlings and wethers mixed brought $6.40. A string of fed-western wethers made $6.10 and prime 104 to 139-lb native ewes sold at $6.00, although just as good heavy had to go at $5.85 late. Grass Washington wethers, averaging 105 lbs, landed at $5.85, within 15c per cwt of the record price for rangers in July, 1909, while ewes and wethers from the same state made $5.55. Spring lambs reached $9.65. Shorn Colorados topped at $9.10, we obtaining the figure. Receipts Friday 9,817. Fed-western sheep sold 10@15c higher. Other kinds, as well as lambs, were merely steady. Top sheep at $6.15 for fed-western wethers and $6.00 for native ewes. Spring lambs were landed by us at $9.75, summit by 10c per cwt, and best shorn fed-western lambs went at $8.75. The advance over the previous week was mostly 50@75c, with extreme cases showing $1.00 gain for lambs.

Receipts Monday of this week 17,098. The spring lamb market was hit a hard blow, prices being leveled 25@40c. Shorn lambs were also 25c down. On the other hand sheep were readily taken at prices strong to 10c higher. There was an abundance of the young stock and a decided shortage of the aged lots. Result was a narrowing of the price spread. A string of prime 112-lb fed-western wethers sold at $6.25 and several lots of fancy native ewes at $6.00. Spring lambs made $9.65 early, but the limit late was $9.50. Fed-western shorn lambs landed at $8.65. Run Tuesday 24,716. Opening steady, market was soon 15@25c lower. We landed fed-western wethers at top price of $6.25. It was generally a 25c lower deal in lambs than the previous day's close. The practicable top for springers was $9.10 and for shorn fed westerns $8.35, although the outside price of $8.50 was paid early. Marketing Wednesday 36,000. Barring a few early sales, sheep were generally 35@50c lower, while the decline from last week's close was 50c@$1.00. Market for lambs was semi-demoralized. Opening 25@50c off, the market closed 50@75c down, while compared with the close of last week last sales were anywhere from $1.50@2.00 lower for springers and $1.00@1.25 off for shorn lambs. Early top on spring lambs was $8.50 and late $8.25, while the limit for shorn western lambs was $7.85. A fancy lot of 109-lb fed western wethers reached $6.00 early. The class of native sheep which went at $5.50@5.75 early had to go at $5.00@5.25 later on.

Looks for a Wider Spread in Hog Prices.

The exceptionally narrow spread in hog prices provoked Frank Murphy, head hog buyer for the Cudahy Packing Co. at Sioux City, to remark that a month from now the present spread will look like a mere streak. "I should say that within thirty days we shall see a spread of from $1.00 to $1.50 in the hog market. Farmers have been holding back their sows and there will be a lot of heavy hogs of this kind that have been on grass coming forward. From the way the hogs are coming now it looks like there is plenty of corn in the country and we shall probably get a lot of very good corn-fed hogs and in this event you may look for the spread predicted."

Fail in Effort to Raise Freight Rates.

The railroads failed utterly to raise freight rates. After meeting at Chicago a large committee of heavy shippers was sent to Washington to ask the help of the Government in preventing the advance. This committee was able to bring such pressure to bear upon the administration that the day before the advances were to go into effect Attorney-General Wickersham secured an order of court enjoining the railroads from making the proposed advances. Thus for the time being live stock shippers need not worry over a likelihood of increased freight rates.

Efficiency of Brood Sows

In considering the efficiency of brood sows, Henry Wallace gives the following advice: "Go over those that have had pigs the present year and ask them the following questions: How many pigs did you have this year? Were they even in size and form? Were they all good ones, or did you have two or three choice pigs and were the rest quite inferior? How did you take care of these pigs? Are you a good suckler? Are you good natured? Are you a good mother, or are you one of the nervous, fidgety kind, always worrying and fretting for fear somebody will hurt you and your precious piglets? If the brood sow on being interrogated, cannot give satisfactory answers to these questions it is not worth while to scold her or give her a moral lecture. Just turn her into the fattening pen; for there is where she belongs."

Experience in Hogging Corn.

An Iowa feeder let his hogs harvest 40 acres of corn for him last year and figured just what they paid him for the corn. It was estimated that the corn would yield 35 bushels per acre. The hogs sold at an average of 6c per pound, The 40 acres of corn made $840 worth of pork, or $21 per acre, thus the corn brought about 60c per bushel. Besides there was no harvesting to be paid for.

The Prairie Cattle Company are just starting to dehorn eleven thousand head of steers. They wait until their steers begin to mend on the grass before dehorning, which they can do with safety from fly trouble by using Shoo Fly Horn Paint. Last year they dehorned nearly twelve thousand head between May and July and after applying Shoo Fly Horn Paint, drove them 150 miles and not one animal was troubled with fly blows. It was a very severe test for the Paint, but it proved equal to it and gave entire satisfaction.

Do not hesitate to try Clay, Robinson & Co. with that first shipment. We assure you that it will not be a disappointment to you. We have pleased others. We can please you.

Samuel Allerton is Now 82 Years Old.

Samuel W. Allerton, pioneer farmer, live stock feeder and heavy owner of railroad and stock yards property, was a pleasant caller at our office this week. He has reached his 82nd year. Mr. Allerton is a young old man. He is in excellent health and keen spirits, and is as fresh as a daisy. He has lived in Chicago since 1856. In the panic of 1857 he lost everything. However, he was not to be defeated by this calamity, but entered into the game with greater energy and confidence. That he has made good is attested by the fact that he is now worth millions. He has been raising and feeding cattle since he was eighteen years old and owns 50,000 acres of fine famming land in Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska. We are proud to say that he is a liberal patron of our firm. Mr. Allerton is well known to the veterans of the Chicago live stock trade and always meets a warm welcome on his visits to the Yards. Of a rugged constitution, careful in all of his habits and much out door exercise have rendered Mr. Allerton a man of middle age in both health and action.

Students Appreciate Encouragement in Journalism.

The following letter from J. Clyde Marquis, instructor in agricultural journalism at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, Madison, is self-explanatory.

"I beg to acknowledge receipt of yours of June 6 enclosing check for $100 for the prize offered by Mr. John Clay in competition in agricultural writing. The first, second and third prize articles have been sent you to be published in the Live Stock Report.

"Permit me to say that the students, as well as myself, sincerely appreciate the stimulus which you have lent their work in agricultural journalism and trust that the results of this contest may not be measured alone by the present interest aroused, but by permanent enthusiasm among those who participated."

Southwest Run of Grass Cattle Heavier.

James Harris, live stock agent of the Chicago & Alton Railroad, was at Chicago from Kansas City. He says Missouri is putting in a good many light cattle and that the Oklahoma and Kansas run of grassers will be 10 to 15 per cent heavier than a year ago.

Importing Many Cattle From Mexico.

About 100,000 Mexican cattle were imported into the United States between Jan. 1 and June 1. The duty amounted to about $350,000. This means a tax of that much money on the future beef supply, as few of these cattle were suitable for immediate slaughter, most of them going to Montana, the Dakotas, Wyoming and Colorado to be matured. Two years hence they will show up at the market ready for convertion into beef.

McFarlane Beeves Top the Sioux City Market.

L. E. McFarlane, prominent stockman of Lake Andes, S. D., was on the Sioux City market June 20 with 15 Aberdeen-Angus steers of 1,523 lbs average and we sold them at $8.30, the top of the market there that day, as well as for the year.

HIGHLAND SHEEP AT HOME IN SCOTLAND.

More Packing Sows Are Coming.

As the season advances the grassy sows will become more in evideuce. Some are coming now, but they are in good condition, showing that producers are giving them corn on grass because of the attractive prices. The season is opened on a $9.00@9.25 basis for packing sows, buyers bidding on them separately when arriving with other hogs. They are being discriminated against, while light weights are the most popular. Owing to so many heavy hogs coming we would not be surprised to see a price spread of $1.00 between grassy packing sows and desirable light.

Montana Cattle Re-Shipped from Canada.

We were recently asked by a range cattleman now residing in Alberta, Canada, and formerly living in Montana, and who has cattle ranging on both sides of the line, what the regulations were concerning duty upon cattle bearing Montana brands shipped out of Canada. We thought it well to submit the question to J. G. Bair, collector of customs at Great Falls, Mont., for full and official reply and received from that gentleman the following communication, which may be of interest and possible value to other owners having cattle ranging on both sides of the line:

UNITED STATES CUSTOMS SERVICE.
Port of Great Falls, Mont., June 18, 1910.

Messrs. Clay, Robinson & Company,
Union Stock Yards,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

Answering your letter of the 14th instant, requesting advice as to the amount of duty on cattle from Canada, you are informed that cattle valued at more than $14 per head are dutiable at the rate of twenty-seven and one-half per cent ad valorem, under paragraph 225 of the Tariff Act, 1909.

Under paragraph 500 of the Tariff Act, admitting free of duty articles the growth, produce or manufacture of the United States upon return to this country, animals are not included.

Therefore, cattle in Canada bearing Montana brands are dutiable just the same as if they were native Canadian cattle, and there is no provision by which they can be shipped to market without having to pay duty, except in bond, when it would be required that an inspector of the United States Customs accompany them, the expense to be borne by the importer and shipper.

The market value of cattle in Canada at the place from which shipped is the basis upon which duty is assessed upon entry to the United States.

Paragraph 492 of the Tariff Act reads in part as follows:

"Cattle, horses, sheep, or other domestic animals straying across the boundary line into any foreign country, or driven across such boundary line by the owner for temporary pasturage purposes only, together with their offspring, may be brought back to the United States within six months free of duty, under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury."

Article 656 of the Customs Regulations for 1908, reads:

"OWNED IN UNITED STATES—RETURN.—The above provision is held to apply only to animals owned in the United States which have been driven by their owners across the boundary line for temporary pasturage purposes or which have strayed across from ranches, farms or premises in the United States."

The animals on return must either be owned by the parties owning them at the time of their departure or a bill of sale to a resident of the United States from the owner at such time must be produced.

The animals and offspring must be returned together within six months from date of departure from the United States, otherwise duty, will be assessed thereon."

Aticle 657. "EXPORT ENTRY—MARKS AND BRANDS.—An export entry must be made of all animals driven across the boundary line for pasturage purposes, and facsimile marks and brands must be filed with the collector at the time of exportation."

Article 658. "IDENTIFICATION.—The identity of such animals and their offspring must, on their importation, be established to the satisfaction of the collector of customs by the best evidence obtainable, such as brands, distinguishing marks, oath of importer, extract from the export entry, etc., and the following oath or affirmation will be exacted in all cases from the owner, viz:

Encouraging the Growing of Cattle.

A stock yard secret that has been in everybody's possession is that packers have paid high prices for hogs without reluctance, if not cheerfully, conscious that the money would furnish growers with incentive to expand production. Of all the handicaps packers experience in carrying on their business, scarcity of raw material is not the least. Deficiency in supply means keen competition and narrow profit margins.

Trade prediction that what packers are now experiencing in the hog market will be duplicated in cattle is distinctly audible and is responsible for a suggestion that killers have an excellent opportunity to stimulate production during the summer by paying good prices, especially for western product. Cattle raising in that quarter is in a transition stage. This year liquidation will be practically completed, and by the time snow flies even the old-time big range outfits will have only remnants of their former herds. Meanwhile the immense grazing areas they once exclusively occupied are being possessed by thousands of settlers who, judging the cattle business by its unstable market record, are not disposed to regard it as a certain avenue to wealth. This element needs encouragement, and no more effective campaign could be designed to secure increased production. Give the western cattle crop a good market during the coming summer, and confidence will be established, hundreds of breeding herds founded, and the period when beef production will respond to consumptive demand hastened.

With the marked decrease of beef making on the open range it is essential that those who have succeeded to possession of the grass shall utilize it. The country cannot afford to get short of cattle and long on grass, a condition now threatened as indicated by the necessity of filling southwestern pastures with two-year-olds and importing Mexican stockers to replenish northern herds this year. All that is needed to stimulate breeding operations is a good market this year, and the slaughtering interest cannot pursue a more profitable policy even from the standpoint of self interest.—Breeder's Gazette.

MISSOURI CATTLE WHICH TOPPED EAST ST. LOUIS MARKET FOR YEAR BY 10c PER CWT.

These 20 head of 1,574-lb beef steers were handled by Clay, Robinson & Co. and marketed by Oswald Bros. & Robien of Boonville, Mo. They brought $8.60 on June 8. Barring the four loads of cattle sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. at $8.50 on the same day, this price was 70c per cwt higher than any other load of cattle made. In addition to this, it is necessary to go back to last October to find a time when as high a price was obtained, and also it stood 10c per cwt higher than any cattle brought on that market this year. These cattle were bought in Kansas City last fall during the Stock Show and averaged 1,100 lbs at that time. They were Colorado bred, grade Herefords, branded westerns and were fed by E. Schlotzhauer of Pilot Grove, Mo., on a full feed of corn, oats, bran and clover hay, and finished with a ration of linseed meal. The cattle were of good quality and fat. They were contracted by Oswald Bros. & Robien from Mr. Schlotzhauer about April 1 at $8.00. Sturtevant & Haley of Boston were the purchasers.

Western Range Sheep at Chicago.

There was a light showing of western range sheep and lambs here this week. This was due in part to the movement not being fairly started and partly to the demoralized trade of last week discouraging shipping operations. Prices have taken a big drop since the start of the season, which was two weeks ago. For instance sheep this week went 85c below then, yearlings lost $1.50 and lambs declined $1.40. Buyers have shown much better interest this week. However, they would have hit the market harder if big runs had been available. It is fortunate that range stock is not pressing on the market now, when native and southern spring lambs are coming so plentifully.

Sales of western range sheep and lambs this week follow:

544 California spring lambs	69	$7 85
517 California spring lambs	67	7 50
615 California spring lambs	68	7 25
260 California feeder lambs	63	6 75
36 California spring lambs	61	6 00
581 Oregon yearlings	82	5 75
245 Oregon yearlings	82	5 50
236 Oregon feeder yearlings	75	5 50
506 Oregon wethers	102	5 25
388 Oregon wethers	108	5 00
125 Oregon feeder wethers	103	4 25

Oregon Sheep Top the Chicago Market.

Bicknell & Gemmell had on the Chicago market on June 21 a string of yearlings and wethers from their range in Baker county, Ore. We handled the entire shipment and secured three different tops for them by selling 581 yearlings of 82 lbs average at $5.75, 236 feeding yearlings of 75 lbs average at $5.50 and 506 wethers of 101 lbs average at $5.25.

Mistake of Southern Lamb Growers.

Every year the Tennessee and Kentucky growers are the main factors in creating a demoralization in the lamb market at about this time. They were greatly responsible for the sensational break of $1.50@2.00 last week. They, as in past years, made the fatal mistake of shipping too many to the Louisville market, which is not a killing center. Leading western packers have their buyers on that market and they took advantage of the heavy runs. For instance last week Chicago packers shipped direct from Louisville around 32,000, receiving 5,000 to 15,000 daily. Of course, this enabled them to dictate terms here. If southern growers would market more of their lambs at East St. Louis, Chicago and East Buffalo, where commission men would look after their interests and where strong competition is assured, a more favorable story of the market could be recorded.

First Range Sheep at South St. Joseph.

The first western range sheep of the season to reach South St. Joseph were there June 15. On June 16 Clay, Robinson & Co. handled a six-car shipment of yearlings and wethers for Bicknell & Gemmell, prominent dealers in Oregon and Idaho While the market was in a semi-demoralized condition everywhere, we succeeded in selling their killing yearlings at $6.25, feeder yearlings at $5.00 and killing wethers at $5.35. They were on that market again June 20 with three double decks of Oregon wethers and yearlings, we selling the wethers, which averaged 104 lbs, at $5.00, and the yearlings, averaging 85 lbs, at $5.90.

A Point for Western Range Sheepmen to Remember.

It would be well for western range sheepmen who can advantageously bill their stock by the way of South St. Paul to bear in mind that that point has excellent feeding facilities. In addition to enjoying this modern convenience, they also would be given an opportunity to try the South St. Paul market for both fat and feeding stock. In a good many cases during the fall of the year Clay, Robinson & Co. are able to dispose of feeder sheep and lambs at relatively high prices on the South St. Paul market, they having a good many orders on hand. Any further information desired on this subject will cheerfully be furnished by Clay, Robinson & Co., Union Stock Yards, South St. Paul, Minn.

Montana Sheep Shipments May Be Heavier.

J. L. DeHart, writes from Great Falls, Mont., under date of June 12: "Conditions have improved some since my last letter, but we have not had the moisture we should have. Shearing is now well under way and sheepmen will be knowing soon what they want to turn off. The wool market has opened up somewhat bad, 17c being about the price. There seems to be a disposition on the part of the wool men to make a price that will compel the purchaser to carry the burden until after the coming election. These conditions may cause heavier shipments of sheep."

Initial Trade in Feeding Lambs.

On Tuesday of this week the first feeding lambs to arrive at Chicago this season were recorded. There were 260 head of 63 lbs average in the lot and they sold at $6.75. They were of a good kind and from California. The initial arrivals here last year were from Idaho in July, averaged 58 lbs and went at $6.40. For June $6.75 is remarkably high for range feeding lambs. Those at $8.25 in 1907 were fed westerns taken out for shearing purposes and a quick turn in the feed lot. The price paid Tuesday was 35c higher than the initial transaction in range feeding lambs last year, $1.25 above that in 1908 and the same as in 1907.

Wool Market Notes.

A party who knows whereof he speaks says: "All of this talk about there being a combination among the wool dealers is all bosh. It is simply a case of a lack of demand from manufacturers."

Included in the recent representative sales of wool at Boston were: 60,000 lbs Ohio ¼ blood, 26@27c; 75,000 lbs Michigan ⅜ blood, 27@28c; 35,000 lbs Oregon staple, 18½@20c; 55,000 territory, 16@23c.

At this time last year there was a rush for the wool clip out West. Buyers were fairly tumbling over each other to get the product and price raises were merrily going on. But now what a contrast with then !

It is understood that a Boston buyer is paying 24@26c for medium wools in Michigan. Another dealer has instructed his buyers to pay 23c as top for best medium Ohio, although it is reported some are selling at 22@23c.

It has been another dull week in the wool market; in fact, one of the dullest as to volume of business in some time. Eastern dealers have received orders only where there were urgent needs to fill. And these have been scarce.

An extensive wool grower of Wyoming is quoted: "Wool buyers will not even make an offer. If they would bid, even if it was below what we would accept, we might stand a chance of coming to terms by splitting the difference. But this is impossible as long as they will not name a price."

Louis Penwell of the Montana Wool Growers' Association says: "We are consigning our clips to the Chicago warehouse. There is no reason why growers should not get as much for their wool as last year. If everybody refuses to accept current bids we will ultimately secure fair prices. In Montana dealers are offering 18@18½c for clips they bought freely at 21@25c a year ago."

Dates have just been fixed for the forty-seventh annual convention of the National Wool Growers' Association, which will be held in Portland, Ore., Jan. 5, 6 and 7. President Gooding of Shoshone, Idaho, accompanied by George Walker, secretary and, members of the board of control, will come to Portland within the next few weeks to meet the local committees and complete final arrangements for the convention.

From Portland, Ore., comes the news that growers of wool in the vicinity of Shaniko are no more eager to let go their clips at existing prices than are the growers of Umatilla county, judging by the sale held in that place recently. Though Shaniko is the largest wool center in Eastern Oregon, less than half a million pounds change hands. Three million pounds would have been disposed of had the prices been right. The prices paid for the 470,000 lbs sold ranged from 14½@16¾c per pound. The heaviest growers did not offer their clips, preferring to hold for a better market. Fifty growers are represented in the ownership of 1,7500,000 lbs of wool now in the Moody warehouses. This represents about half the clip tributary to the Shaniko market. The general impression is gaining ground among the growers that the price will be higher at the succeeding sales. Ten buyers were present from Boston and other eastern markets, while only about twenty-five growers of the Wool Growers' Association appeared at the opening of the bids.

"There are those who are coming to the belief that the market for wool has touched bottom. Although the general conditions in most lines of industry at the present time are not conducive to a spirit of optimism, and although the near prospect for the textile industry, not only the woolen end, but the cotton end as well, is anything but bright, it seems as if those who believe this have pretty good grounds on which they may base their belief," comments the Wool and Cotton Reporter. "In the first place, the stocks of wool in Boston must have been greatly reduced by the recent heavy liquidation. And secondly, everything now points to a long drawn-out session between the buyer and the wool grower. The former points to the low price prevailing at present for wools of all kinds, and says that basing his value upon these prices he is not warranted in going above 23c, even for the very choice medium fleeces. He moreover cannot see any appearances of appreciable improvement in the call for worsted, into which class of clothing most fleece wool goes, and this he states does not warrant his doing any speculation. The grower, on the other hand, points to the high prices he received for his wools last year, and he is apparently unable to realize how the conditions in the primary markets could have undergone such a complete reversal in so short a period of time. Then, too, the latter must get something out of his wool, and as it is costing him considerably more to produce it at the present time than it did several years ago, he has got to get a living price out of it or else go out of the business altogether. Every time the manufacturer comes into the market he of course reduces the supply of stock by just so much as he takes out of it, which signifies simply a following stronger market. And for that reason it certainly cannot be said that there is nothing to justify bottom prices. And yet, we can hardly expect a higher range of prices for some time, unless the whole market assumes a brighter aspect than at present."

*As high as any time this year.

Marketing Thursday of last week 5,869. While the better grades of offerings met ready sale at prices strong to 10c higher, the less desirable lots were dull and weak sale. The top was $8.50, obtained by us for Illinois offerings. Receipts Friday 2,420. Packers had 40 loads of Texans direct, which comprised the great bulk of the steer arrivals. There were only a few loads of corn feds and distillers. The market was about steady. Twenty-one Hereford yearling steers and heifers mixed of 1,076 lbs average topped the trade at $8.40. The next best price was $8.35, paid for 34 distillers, averaging 1,472 lbs. While the week closed with choice to prime offerings showing a firm price basis with the finish of the previous week, the medium to good kinds lost 10@15c and the common and plain, as well as the grassy grades, went 25@35c lower.

This week started out with a run of 20,388. It would have been well for the selling interests had the supply been several thousand smaller. The offerings of value above $7.75 made a firm and in some cases a shade higher basis. Such as sold between $6.75 and $7.75 showed mostly 10c loss, while those going under $6.75 declined 10@20c. The latter grades were very draggy sale from start to finish. The demand was centered on the better classes. The top was $8.85, as high as since March, when the same price was recorded. Thirty-five prime 1,470-lb beeves made the price, they being from Missouri. Bulk of trading was at $7.10@8.30. Tuesday run 4,374. While best grades sold steady, short-fed and grassy lots were draggy at 10c loss. Best offerings were 35 head of 1,515-lb stillers which made $8.50. There were 33 loads of Texans on the open market and packers had around 40 loads direct from outside markets. A drove of 1,218-lb offerings of exceptionally good grade went to an eastern shipper at $7.75. Marketing Wednesday 26,000. Choice to prime offerings went 15@25c lower and other kinds 25@40c down. Top was $8.55, obtained by us for 44 head of grade Hereford branded westerns of 1,515 lbs average from the H. Holsten feed lot in Nebraska.

Meet Us Face to Face

When next you come to any of the ten leading markets call on Clay, Robinson & Co. and get acquainted, and see for yourself what a splendid organization we have. Many business concerns, with all conditions in their favor, fail because of a lack of organization, inadequate attention to important matters, and more often neglect of the multiplicity of small details, to which close application is required to assure the best results, the greatest satisfaction to the customer. Our strongest competitors concede that we have the most nearly perfect organization of any live stock commission firm in existence. That is the one great secret of our success. We have had as our sole aim the construction of an organization which would work to but one accomplishment, the greatest possible satisfaction to the customer by our service. It is true we do a good business. That is the reason you hear of us so often. But we have the organization to take care of this business, and take care of it right, to the profit of the feeder or shipper. Our latch string hangs out to you always. Come in, meet us face to face, and let us give you at first hand an insight into the systematic organization which will do as good work for you as it is doing for others. You will be warmly welcomed by

COWS AND HEIFERS.

Buyers hit the cow and heifer market a terrible swat last week, the decline being 75c@$1.00 from the close of the previous week. Liberal runs of Texans at the other markets and goodly supplies of natives here brought about the terrible break.

On Monday of this week receipts were considerably reduced and the market had active tone, with prices generally 10c higher. Twenty-three fancy corn-fed heifers of 799 lbs average reached $7.75. While the market ruled slow Tuesday, prices were not quotably lower. There was another decline of generally 15c on Wednesday, the market being dull and draggy.

BULLS.

Last week closed with rates 30@50c down from the finish of the previous week.

It was a 10c higher deal Monday of this week, with buyers active bidders. Prices were lowered 10@15c Tuesday, due to increased receipts and a more narrow demand. Very dull trade Wednesday at prices 15@20c lower.

CALVES.

Last week's trade finished with prices 50@75c lower than the close of the previous week.

On Monday of this week the market was dull and weak. A few assorted vealers sold at $8.25@8.50. Tuesday there was a deadlock until around the noon hour. Buyers finally had their own way, prices ruling generally steady. The practicable top was $8.50, although one fancy lot went at the outside figure

Prices at the close of last week showed 25@35c loss from the previous week's finish. The demand was slack from all sources all week, but anything on the common order was a drug on the market.

On Monday of this week demand continued very narrow and prices dropped mostly 25c. Demand was disappointingly small. The Tuesday market was dull at prices weak to 10c lower. Prices for stockers and feeders Wednesday showed 15@25c loss. The demand was very dull. As compared with Wednesday of last week feeders sold 35@50c lower and stockers 65@75c down.

Receipts Thursday of last week 15,951. The last round was demoralized. The market opened weak to 5c lower, became 5@10c off and closed 10@15c down, with $9.50 taking good ones on the finish. A $9.70 top was made, but it was out of line and $9.50@9.60 took the bulk. Heavy mixed sold at $9.45 on the close, with $9.55 about the limit. Marketing Friday 21,440. Mostly a 20@25c lower market. The limit was $9.50 and most sales at $9.30@9.40. There was a sprinkling of mixed carrying packers at $9.25. Everybody in the trade discriminated against this packery stuff. The run Saturday was 9,073. Prices were 5@10c higher on light and mediums, although heavy stuff did not share in the advance. Light reached $9.60 and bulk $9.40@9.50. with a $9.25@9.35 trade in common packers. Prime heavy had to go at $9.40 late in the session. Compared with the close of last week the top was 10c lower and bulk 15@25c down. This reflects the widening of the spread the past several days, a conspicuous percentage of rough packers and some that looked grassy showing up.

Receipts at the start of this week were 25,159. It was mostly a 15c higher deal. The summit was $9.75 for light and a lot of business was done at $9.55@9.65, with some heavy offerings on the packing order selling down to $9.40. The Tuesday run was 13,940. Trading in heavy hogs closed badly demoralized. In fact it was impossible to sell them. They were offered at $9.45@9.50 with no takers. Packers are trying to get something that will cure quickly and are all afraid to put long curing stuff into their cellars. Early trade on lights and mediums was strong to 5c higher, as high as $9.80 being paid. A spread of $9.50@9.60 took the bulk of the hogs that came, but the market in heavies was in bad shape, closing 10@15c lower on heavy offerings of ordinary quality, full loads going down to $9.15. Strings of heavy hogs, averaging 300 lbs, that sold at $9.65 early were re-sold at $9.50. Supply Wednesday 32,000. Rates were lowered 20@30c from the average of the previous day. Pinnacle was $9.55 and bulk of trading was at $9.15@9.50. Market closed in very mean shape, with a good many hogs unsold.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of hogs:

*Sold by Clay, Robinson & Co.

The Thursday supply of last week was 12,630. It was a dull trade in both sheep and lambs, although prices were not quotably lower. The top sheep went at $5.40, this price being obtained by us for fed western wethers and ewes mixed. Bulk of the offerings were native ewes which sold largely at $4.75@5.25. Assorted spring lambs reached $8.50, with fed yearling lambs up to $7.00. Marketing Friday 12,738. A very draggy market from start to finish and prices were generally 25c lower. Best sheep available were fed-western wethers which went at $5.25 and the limit for native ewes was $5.00. Only two lots of spring lambs went above $7.75, with one small lot reaching $8.25. The week closed with sheep showing 75c@$1.00 decline from the previous week's finish, while lambs went anywhere from $1.50@2.00 off.

Marketing on Monday of this week 8,567. While there was better undertone to the trade, sellers were unable to get better than steady to strong prices for either sheep or lambs. Fed-western wethers sold up to $5.25 and the top for native ewes was $4.80. The limit for spring lambs was $8.25 and fed-western lambs made $7.00. California springers made $7.85. Supply Tuesday 13,293. Market was fairly active at prices steady to 10c higher, spring lambs going to best advantage. Two lots made $8.35 and $8.50. Native yearling lambs went at $6.75. A shipment of California spring lambs showed up and the fat end, averaging 67 lbs, brought $7.50, with the feeders of 63 lbs average going out at a cost of $6.75. Oregon grass wethers brought $5.25, yearlings $5.75 and feeding yearlings $5.50, sales being made by us. The limit for native ewes was $4.85. Supply Wednesday 15,000. Opening 25c lower, the sheep market closed 50c off. Lambs showed 25c decline. Top springers $8.00. The limit late for good ewes was $4.25. We sold Oregon yearlings at $5.50, Oregon wethers at $5.00 and Oregon feeding wethers at $4.25.

A. L. SAYERS OF LAKEVILLE, MINN.

The above gentleman is one of the latter day progressive farmers and stock raisers. Mr. Sayers operates a 160-acre farm at Lakeville, Minn., and is an extensive and skillful raiser and breeder of imported and American bred Shropshire sheep and Poland China hogs. He has been identified in the stock business for the past 15 years, but about five years ago began devoting his time and attention to pure-bred stock, and his success in this respect is well attested to by the many prizes that he has been awarded in his stock show entries. During the fall of 1908 and 1909 Mr. Sayers exhibited a carload of grain-fed Shropshire lambs, sired by his rams, at the Northwestern Live Stock Show at South St. Paul that was given the highest honors and was also assigned the Minnesota Special and Silver Cup presented by the South St. Paul Reporter. The same 1909 lambs which were afterwards shown at the International Show at Chicago took the fourth prize in their class and won first place in pens of 25. His Poland China hogs have made a clean sweep wherever entered. Mr. Sayers' winnings in small lots of both sheep and hogs have been numerous and we regret that our space will not permit of going into detail about these. Mr. Sayers is a very pleasant and affable gentleman to meet and he is well informed in his line. Clay, Robinson & Co. are proud to claim him as both a South St. Paul and Chicago patron.

J. E. Moore of Callaway county, Mo., writes our Kansas City house: "Lambs arrived O. K. Any time you can buy some more similar to these call me over the telephone."

Robert Dinsdale, a progressive cattle feeder of Sherman county, Neb., had a couple cars of steers on the South Omaha market June 7 which we sold at $7.80, averaging 1,346 lbs.

A. J. Williamson, widely known as a stock buyer and shipper from Albany and Harrison counties, Mo., and a good customer of ours, disposed of a mixed car of stock at South St. Joseph.

Goodell & Johnson of Montgomery county, Kan., write our Kansas City house: "We thank you for looking after overcharges in freight. We received check for $1.19 on car April 19."

Taylor & Lyons of Butler county, Kan., had on the East St. Louis market June 7 a string of 53 heifers which our house landed at $6.75. They averaged 848 lbs and were in good flesh condition.

W. R. Kennedy of Caldwell county, Mo., writes our Kansas City house: "I want to thank you first for a good fill on the hogs, second a good sale and third for prompt notification of sale."

J. F. Mitchell of Holt county, Mo., was on the South St. Joseph market June 7 with a car of short-fed yearling cattle which we sold at $6.25, a very pleasing price to Mr. Mitchell.

Earnest Rohwer of Scott county, Ia.: "I received the 38 steer calves and was well pleased with them. There was not a poor one in the lot. Thank you for sending such good steers for the price."

T. B. Bowman, a prominent hog raiser and cattle feeder of Boone county, Neb., had a nice load of 208-lb hogs on the South Omaha market June 10 which our house sold at $9.40, top for the day.

The highest price paid in several weeks for calves in the quarantine division at Kansas City was $8.30, obtained by our house for 140 head. They were marketed by Campbell Bros. of Coal county, Okla.

Matt Junt, a progressive farmer of Douglass county, Minn., was on the South St. Paul market with a car of hogs of his own raising and feeding which proved conclusively Mr. Junt's ability as a high-grade stockman.

Among those who patronized our South St. Paul house were: J. M. Kern of Renville county, Minn.: The Farmers Elevator Co. of Saint Croix county, Wis.; O. G. Greeno of Marshall county, S. D., and S. W. Bradford of Cass county, N. D.

Jennie M. Conrad, owner of the Oak Dene Farm, which comprises 5,000 acres under cultivation in Grundy county, Ind., writes: "Your recent sale of my four cars of stock cattle was very satisfactory. Thank you for the kind personal wishes."

John McCoy of Nemaha county, Kan., was on the South St. Joseph market with a car of cattle and expressed himself as well pleased with our work. Mr. McCoy is a prominent stockman, and has handled pure-bred Shorthorn cattle for over thirty years.

C. F. Morris, cashier of the Security State Bank of Havre, Mont., writes: "Our range feed is getting very short on account of continued drought. If we do not have a good rain very soon it is going to be a pretty difficult matter to get our range beef fat in the Sweet Grass hills."

Among the sheep shippers who had consignments to our Kansas City house were: A. B. Rosebraugh of Ralls county, Mo.; G. W. Triplett of Sullivan county, Mo.; E. J. Huling of Las Animas county, Colo.; W. S. Miles of Rio Grande county, Colo.; A. D. Mathias of Rio Grande county, Colo.

During the past week our Denver house has had the pleasure of handling hog consignments for the following well-known feeders: Ballantine & Beggs of Otero county, Colo.; W. J. Dean of Chaffee county, Colo., T. T. Plummer of Keith county, Neb.; John Fink of Scotts Bluff county, Neb.; W. R. Preston of Scotts Bluff county, Neb.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

John E. Rugg of Keokuk county, Ia., writes: "Our cattle were sold by you and we were well satisfied."

Peter Standage of Page county, Ia., writes: "I shipped my cattle to your South St. Joseph firm and was well pleased."

George Potter, owner of 1,800 acres of farming land in Brown county, Minn., disposed of a deck of sheep at South St. Paul.

Our valuable patron, John R. Jones of Richland county, N. D., had a mixed car of cattle, hogs and sheep at South St. Paul.

The Merchants Live Stock Co., an extensive shipping concern of Boyd county, Neb., had a consignment of hogs at South Omaha.

E. S. Hunn of Polk county, Ia., had 52 head of 243-lb hogs at East St. Louis on June 9 and our house sold them at the top price of $9.70.

It was the pleasure of our Denver house on June 10 to sell for W. L. McCaslin of Weld county, Colo., 841 lambs, averaging 66 lbs, at $7.75.

Clarence Wood of Jones county, Ia., was on the Chicago market June 16 with 66 head of 252-lb hogs which we sold at the top of the market, $9.70.

It was June 15 that our Sioux City house sold 81 hogs of 207 lbs average at the top price of $9.45. They were sent in by J. Flaherty of Brule county, S. D.

Our house topped the South St. Joseph hog market June 15 with 64 head, averaging 210 lbs, at $9.50, belonging to D. W. Holt of DeKalb county, Mo.

Ludvigson & Krueger, extensive shippers and located in Cottonwood county, Minn., favored our South St. Paul house with a load each of cattle and hogs.

Our South St. Paul house handled three cars of cattle for Ralph McGregor, an extensive farmer and owner of 390 acres of land in Washington county, Minn.

H. Ritter had a car of cattle and a car of hogs on the South Omaha market from his feed lots in Antelope county, Neb., that sold at very satisfactory prices.

W. L. Richards, president of the Dakota Loan and Investment Co., Stark county, N. D., writes: "Things look good now so far as range cattle and conditions are concerned."

Tillman & Mason of Bedford county, Tenn., had two double decks of choice 72-lb lambs at East St. Louis on June 15 and our house landed them at the top price of $8.25.

Carl Zander and Albert Zander, prominent farmers and stockmen of Stanton county, Neb., were on the South Omaha market looking after the shipment of two cars of hogs.

It was June 7 that our Denver house handled for H. W. Moore, the well-known breeder and feeder of Morgan county, Colo., a load of mixed cattle at satisfactory prices.

On June 14 our South Omaha house handled a car of steers for W. H. Imel of York county, Neb., averaging 1,417 lbs, at $7.90, which was well up toward the top of the trade.

We had the pleasure of handling a mixed load of stock for our long-time friend and patron, O. G. Greeno of Marshall county, S. D., through our South St. Paul house.

D. Wells of Washington county, Kan., writes our South St. Joseph house: "Was well pleased with the way hogs sold, and I certainly appreciate the way they were handled."

Edwards county, Ill., was represented on the East St. Louis lamb market June 15 with a deck of spring lambs, averaging 63 lbs, which our house sold at $8.25. This was the top for natives by 25c per cwt. They were marketed by Mitchell & Walsh.

Al Clark, a progressive farmer and feeder of Seward county, Neb., was on the South Omaha market with a car each of cattle and hogs that we sold at quite satisfactory prices.

M. G. Lee of Shelton, Neb., had a car of spring lambs on the South Omaha market June 15 that averaged 53 lbs and were sold by our house at $9.00, the extreme top of the day's trade.

P. A. Johnson of Kandiyohi county, Minn., one of our most prominent patrons, was at South St. Paul with one car of cattle and a mixed load, and stated that in his vicinity rain is needed badly.

Anthony Wilkinson, with headquarters in Hall county, Neb., had a car of steers on the South Omaha market June 14 from his feed lots at Ansley that we sold at $7.75, averaging 1,356 lbs.

Charles Miner of Beadle county, S. D., writes under date of June 9: "It has been very dry, but we had a good rain yesterday and today and prospects for corn good here now. Pig crop is good."

The limit by 10c per cwt for a load lot of spring lambs on the Chicago market June 16 was $8.35. We obtained this figure for 116 head, averaging 65 lbs, they belonging to E. Wilson of Coles county, Ill.

FRED SCHULTE OF ELLSWORTH, WIS.

We hesitate in the selection of words to describe the above gentleman for fear we may not do him justice. Mr. Schulte is of a very genial disposition, evenly tempered and as square as a die. To know him is to like him. His picture is an excellent one and well portrays his goodly character. Mr. Schulte's headquarters are at Ellsworth, Wis., where he has a farm of 200 acres. He has been identified with the stock business for the past twenty years and during the last three years has been a very liberal patron of the South St. Paul market, acting as shipper for the farmers in his section. He is held in high esteem. Since devoting his attention to the marketing of stock for his friends and neighbors he has been almost a constant customer of Clay, Robinson & Co. and it pleases us to be given an opportunity to tell of his sterling qualities.

Our South St. Paul house was favored with a consignment of mixed stock from our staunch friend, Wm. Gustafson of Kandiyohi county, Minn., who expresed himself as well satisfied with our work.

Mat McCaslin of Boulder county, Colo., was on the Denver market June 9 with two loads of 1,113-lb steers which our house sold at $7.25, the extreme top for that week. These were the tail ends of Mr. McCaslin's feeding, which totaled 200 head, all of which were purchased by Clay, Robinson & Co. last fall.

W. W. Wolf of Boulder county, Colo., who fed large number of cattle at Grand Junction last winter was on the Denver market June 13 with 10 cars of Colorado and Utah steers. One load of the native Colorados, averaging 1,196 lbs, brought $7.30, the highest price there for several weeks. The balance of the cattle were Utah steers and sold at satisfactory prices.

B. K. Babcock of Brown county, Kan., was on the South St. Joseph market June 14 with a car of 65-lb lambs which our house sold straight at $9.50, topping the market 25c per cent. These lambs were raised from aged western ewes bought for Mr. Babcock last August by our house, costing $4.40 and averaging 87 lbs. The lambs brought $2.35 per head more than the first cost of the ewes and he has the ewes and wool clip left.

Included in the many prominent feeders or regular shippers who marketed stock through our East St. Louis house recently: Taylor Lyons of Butler county, Kan., 4 cars; M. Mayfield of Cooper county, Mo., 1 car; Liston & Barfield of Hughes county, Okla., 11 cars; R. H. Belt of Carroll county, Mo., 2 cars; E. P. Harned of Cooper county, Mo., 1 car; W. T. Buford of Montgomery county, Ill., 1 car; Wilcox & Littrell of Randolph county, Mo., 2 cars; J. E. Tuttle of Scotland county, Mo., 1 car.

O. A. Brown, owner of 2,000 acres of land in Stark county, N. D., sold two cars of cattle through our South St. Paul house. Mr. Brown remarked that land was rapidly increasing in value in his section, but that the farmers were giving up raising stock in a surprising manner and were interesting themselves more and more in dairying and crop raising. He also stated that with one or two exceptions all the former big ranching outfits had been compelled to clean up, owing to the constant and growing influx of settlers.

Among the prominent Oklahoma shippers who had cattle to our Kansas City house were: Roy Riddell of Bryan county; C. H. Thompson of Washita county; J. E. Biffle of Garvin county; M. W. Hudson of Payne county; B. L. Price of Hughes county; G. F. Newberry and W. A. Lockridge; J. R. Washington of Love county; J. A. Wagner and O. J. Pharoah of Opfuskee county; C. A. Jerrett and Brooks & Lynn of Hughes county; F. M. Battles and L. Pollock of Pittsburgh county; and G. R. Boggs of Attawa county.

Our Kansas City house had the pleasure of handling shipments for the following parties, who are prominent either in feeding or shipping circles, and we are proud to say that they received the service that satisfies: C. C. Glandon of Kearney county, Neb., with steers and hogs; C. M. Bowers of Finney county, Kan., with steers; J. T. Forrester of Van Buren county, Ark., with quarantine steers; H. C. Thompson of San Juan county, N. M., with goats; Lockhart & Huling of Las Animas county, Colo., with lambs and ewes, and J. S. Hart of same county, with yearlings and sheep.

It was the great pleasure of our East St. Louis house to handle hogs for the following parties who are prominent either in feeding or shipping circles: Nunn & Waterman of Lewis county, Mo.; M. Mayfield of Jersey county, Ill.; B. F. Marshall of Scott county, Mo.; J. T. McAllister of Linn county, Mo.; W. D. Hibler of Chariton county, Mo.; J. D. Higginbothan of Pike county, Mo.; F. Winters of Lincoln county, Mo; Charles Brockaway and R. H. Garrett of Henry county, Mo.; Thomas Dodds of Schuyler county, Ill.; Jasper Hutchens of Green county, Ill.; J. M. Mayfield of Cooper county, Mo.; Frank Myers of Franklin county, Mo.; Bolsford & Norris of Knox county, Mo.; H. T. George of Caldwell county, Mo.; Wilcox & Littrell of Randolph county, Mo.; George Preston of Charitou county, Mo.; Newt Brown of White county, Ill.; G. W. Allen of Greene county, Ill.; W. T. Buford of Montgomery county, Ill.; G. J. Oliver of Saint Clair county, Ill.; Irvine & Duncan of Pike county, Mo.; Trusdell & Adams of Randolph county, Mo.; E. P. Harned of Cooper county, Mo.; C. A. Chittendan of Adams county, Ill.; Charles Brockaway of Richland county, Mo.; Smith & Hodge of Adair county, Mo.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

A. Broderson was on the South Omaha market with three cars of yearlings from Washington county, Idaho.

Our South Omaha house handled a two-car shipment of hogs for C. H. Taylor, manager of the Curtis (Nebraska) Shipping Association.

R. M. Hewson, manager of the Lexington Shipping Association of Dawson county, Neb., had three cars of hogs on the South Omaha market.

Our South St. Paul house was favored with a mixed load of stock from our friend and patron, J. N. Josephson of Washington county, Minn.

G. C. Stafford & Bros. of Platte county, Mo., sent to the South St. Joseph market June 15 a mixed car of sheep and lambs which made good prices.

R. M. Wood of Washtenaw county, Mich.: "Enclosed find 50c for a year's subscription to the REPORT. John Clay's articles alone are worth the price many times over."

A. Hewlett of Menor, Sask., Canada: "I find the REPORT a very interesting little paper and it keeps one posted on the market. Enclosed find $1.00 for two years' subscription."

B. F. Kniffin of Williams county, Ohio: "I always find your REPORT very interesting as well as beneficial in presenting lots of good information. Enclosed find 50c for renewal."

The top for a load of sheep at Chicago on June 16 was $5.40, this price being obtained by us for 100 wethers and ewes mixed of 100 lbs average. R. E. Baker of Lee county, Ia., was the owner.

Dr. J. D. Cole of Dyer county, Tenn.: "I think a great deal of your REPORT. It keeps me posted on the market and is the cheapest paper I get for the benefit derived. Enclosed find 50c for renewal."

On June 9 Mr. Bourvier, of the firm of Bourvier & Jones of Maricopa county, Ariz., was on the Denver market with 84 head of steers, averaging 943 lbs, which our house sold at $5.15.

C. A. McNeir of Hennepin county, Minn., shrewd buyer and extensive shipper from Dakota points, was in with his initial shipment to our South St. Paul house, and the same was handled to his entire satisfation.

J. G. Heim of Richardson county, Neb., writes our South St. Joseph house: "I wish to thank you for the way you handled my hogs. I am well pleased with the price and fill, they weighing more down there than here."

Samuel Corrough, the prominent banker and stockman of Nodaway county, Mo., was represented on the South St. Joseph market June 15 with a car of 70-lb fed lambs which our house sold at $8.25, top for their class.

R. B. Gordin represented Clark county, Ohio, on the Chicago market June 16 with 215 shorn western lambs, averaging 85 lbs, which we sold at $7.25, being 25c per cwt higher than any other western lambs brought.

At South St. Paul our house handled a car of hogs for Merz Bros. of Scott county, Minn., a mixed shipment of cattle and hogs for I. O. Hull of Richland county, N. D., and a load of cattle for E. Rice of Washington county, Minn.

Geo. A. Fair of Bradley county, Tenn., writes our Kansas City house: "The calves are fine. You could not have done better. People here never saw anything like them. I feel under lasting obligations to you. They are a bargain."

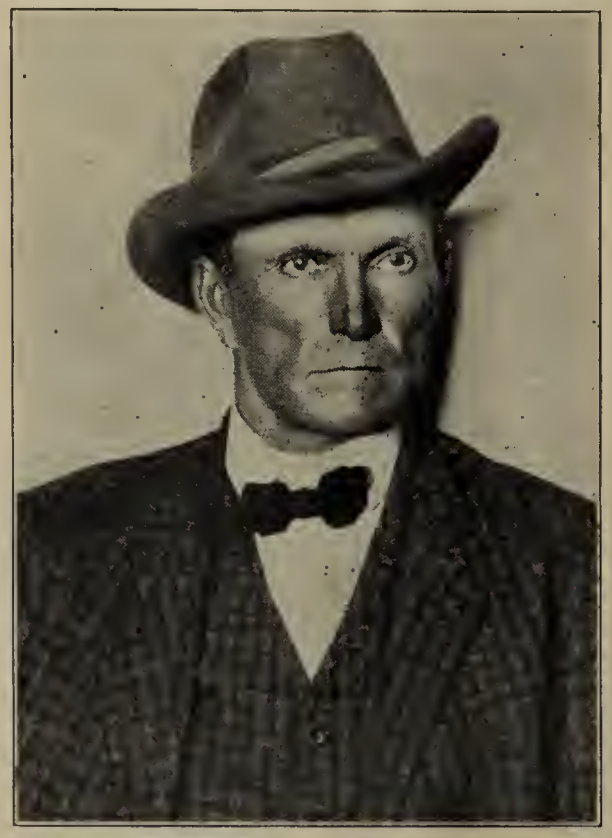
E. L. Lemert of Doniphan county, Kan., one of our frequent and regular patrons, on June 9 had on the South St. Joseph market 223 shorn lambs which our house sold at $8.50. Writing of the sale Mr. Lemert said: "I am well pleased with the sale. I like your way of doing business and will be on hand next fall with an order for feeding lambs."

Recently our Denver house handled hogs for following well-known shippers: M. H. Krab of Keith county, Neb.; Cook Bros. of Arapahoe county, Colo.; J. H. Fosher of Chaffee county, Colo.; J. R. Porter & Son of Dundy county, Neb.

On Monday of this week we sold two different lots of hogs at the top price of $9.50, the sales following: For E. S. Lundberg of Union county, Ia., 77 head of 217 lbs average and for Moreland & Koop of Cass county, Ia., 64 head of 222 lbs average.

Our Sioux City house landed two different lots of hogs at the top price of $9.45 on June 16. The sales follow: For M. C. McMullen of Lyon county, Ia., 57 of 228 lbs average and for Lincoln Frantz of Bonhomme county, S. D., 79 of 182 lbs average.

Dave Broomfield of Butte county, S. D., writes under date of June 18: "We had a nice rain here two nights ago and northwest there has been twice a pretty good rain in the past week. Everything is very dry. I don't think the hay crop will amount to much now. These rains may be in time to make good pasture, but not hay."



J. A. CLARK OF BOWEN, Ill.

J. A. Clark and C. G. Clark comprise the extensive and successful feeding firm of Clark & Son of Bowen, Ill. Recently they sold through Clay, Robinson & Co. at Chicago three loads of cattle and one load of butcher stock at prices, according to Mr. Clark, that were highly pleasing. This firm feeds from 300 to 600 cattle and from 500 to 1,000 hogs every year, and beside farm 900 acres of land, of which 700 acres are worth $150. The senior member of this firm, J. A. Clark, marketed his first load of stock through J. M. Robinson & Co. thirty years ago. When this firm was succeeded by Clay, Robinson & Co. he continued his patronage and is probably one of the heaviest shippers to us from the Middle West.

At Chicago on June 16 we landed three different lots of native ewes at $5.50, being 25c per cwt higher than any other firm secured. The transactions follow: For L. Obermann of Henry county, Ia., 23 of 126 lbs average; for A. J. Pence of Howard county, Ind., 36 of 130 lbs average; for J. C. Patten of Linn county, Ia., 45 of 121 lbs average.

The following parties were represented by one or more head in a mixed shipment of cattle, hogs and sheep which our St. Paul house received from Pierce county, Wis.: J. Borwic, F. Cole, Aug. Field, H. Thom, A. Meir, Geo. Smith, F. Marshall, J. Keichler, Chas. Wolf, W. Morrison, Theo. Heckel, Aug. Curtis, Chas. H. Heckel, Mrs. Geo. Rice and J. D. Lowe.

Among the regular shippers who had sheep at South St. Joseph were: Harry Nance of Daviess county, Mo.; A. J. Williamson of Harrison county, Mo.; Tom Mason of DeKalb county, Mo., and J. L. Sears of Andrew county, Mo.

Hultgren Bros. of Plymouth county, Ia., had 63 head of 226-lb hogs on the Sioux City market June 20 and we landed them at the top price of $9.50. Barring another load, which was handled by us, these were the only hogs to make the price.

Fred Schulte of Pierce county, Wis., was again at South St. Paul with two cars of cattle, hogs and sheep. He ships for the farmers in his vicinity and fifty-three separate account sales and checks were rendered by our house, all expense being pro-rated.

R. L. Clark, the prominent farmer and feeder of Mitchell county, Ia., was represented on the Chicago market Monday with 106 head of 1,327-lb beef steers for which we obtained the very pleasing price of $8.05. He also had in 45 head of 315-lb hogs which we landed at $9.37½.

Clarence Wood of Jones county, Ia.: "I wish to thank you for the splendid sale you made of my car of hogs. As far as I can learn it was the only load sold on that day at that price. Rest assured I shall do what I can to advertise and increase your business in this section."

Joseph D. Sturgis of Saint Joseph county, Mich.: "In regard to the 100 western ewes that you purchased for me Sept. 5: I ran them on pasture and in the stock fields until Jan. 10. They had 120 choice lambs and sheared 11 lbs of wool per head. So much for the service that suits."

The highest price for native breeding ewes thus far this season is $5.50, at which figure we landed 20 head of 127 lbs average on June 16 for Duncan & W. of Clark county, Ill. We also sold for this firm on that day 66 native lambs of 63 lbs average at $7.25, which was the top for natives by 25c per cwt.

The Colorado Stock Feeding Co. of Boulder county, Colo., marketed through our Denver house on June 7 four cars of steers at top prices. These people are among the largest feeders of cattle in Colorado, and without exception their stuff has been handled by us in a manner entirely satisfactory to the owners.

We had the pleasure of handling shipments of cattle and hogs at South St. Paul for our long-time patrons and friends, G. T. Stevens of Walworth county, S. D.; W. E. Stevens of Douglas county, Minn.; Sheldon Mercantile Co., G. L. Thorpe of Norman county, Minn., and J. Chisholm of Renville county, Minn.

B. J. Fair of Steuben county, Ind.: "Car of cattle which we purchased through you the last of January was sold June 11 for $7.00 at Orland. They averaged 947 lbs at Chicago when you shipped them and weighed 1,258 lbs when sold. We paid you $5.00 for these cattle. They were by far the best load of cattle shipped from Orland this year. Thank you for your good judgment in selecting this load."

F. J. Sheffield, a very prominent farmer and stock raiser of Brown county, Minn., favored our South St. Paul house with a shipment of butcher steers and she stuff. Mr. Sheffield cultivates about 560 acres of land. He stated that a week ago they had an excellent rain in his locality and that the pastures and fields are looking fine. Upon leaving Mr. Sheffield expressed himself as very well satisfied with our work.

W. J. Hampton of Sheridan county, Wyo., an old-time resident of the Sheridan territory, was on the South Omaha market with a car of cows and calves in just fair flesh that we sold satisfactorily. Mr. Hampton stated rain was needed badly in his territory and that grass, as well as the small grain, was damaged to a very large extent. This is the first severe dry spring and early summer experienced in that territory in seven years, and Mr. Hampton stated prospects were unfavorable for a heavy shipment of beef the coming fall.

A car of cattle was marketed at South St. Paul by Geo. E. DeWolf of Dickey county, N. D.

Recently our Denver house handled hogs for C. D. Horner of LaPlatte county, Colo., and J. M. Sterrett of Laramie county, Wyo., both well known shippers.

Harry Brown of Weld county, Colo., was on the Denver market with two cars of cows and calves which were handled in satisfactory manner by our house.

H. R. Rhodes of Anderson county, Kan., was on the Kansas City market with a shipment of cattle June 21 which our house landed at the top price of $8.50.

S. B. Whitmore of Antelope county, Neb., had 64 head of 233-lb hogs on the Sioux City market June 21 for which our house obtained the top price of $9.50.

It was June 20 that our East St. Louis house sold for C. V. Bobo of Bedford county, Tenn., a double deck of 62-lb lambs at $8.25, being 25c per cwt higher than any other sale that day.

On June 18 our Denver house handled for E. J. Wagner of Prowers county, Colo., who has fed sheep quite extensively this season, a mixed car of ewes and lambs. There were 290 head of spring lambs, averaging 48 lbs, which sold at $9.00, the extreme top so far this season.

We are pleased to make mention of the following prominent shippers who favored us with a consignment at South St. Paul, all of whom are staunch adherents to the "Service that Satisfies:" J. A. Estes of Ottertail county, Minn.; A. A. Fladager of Dickey county, N. D.; Geo. T. Stevens of Walworth county, S. D.; Merricks Bros of Watonwan county, Minn.; J. S. Hart of Beadle county, S. D.; Jos. Wustner of Ward county, N. D.

Jacob Weiss & Son, the well-known farmers and feeders of Crawford county, Ia., were on the market June 8 with a shipment of cattle, hogs and lambs, all of which were handled by us. We landed their 17 steers of 1,451 lbs average at $8.50, the 64 hogs of 234 lbs average at $9.57½ and the 131 lambs of 81 lbs average at $8.65. Mr. Weiss said that the cattle and hogs sold fully up to his expectations and that he did not expect better than $8.00 for the lambs.

Edward L. Lemert of Doniphan county, Kan., writes our South St. Joseph house: "To say that I am greatly pleased with the sale of car of lambs is stating it mildly; I am delighted. In fact, the season's work from last September to the present month has been admirable. You bought for me on the slumps and sold for me on the bulges. This is the seventh year I have done business with you and I have neither complaints nor regrets, but on the contrary gratification and satisfaction."

The Holsten Nebraska Beeves Top Chicago Market.

The 44 head of 1,515-lb beeves which brought the top price of $8.55 at Chicago on June 22 were handled by Clay, Robinson & Co. and fed and marketed by H. Holsten of Dodge, Neb. They were grade Herefords, branded westerns and in good fat condition. Mr. Holsten is prominent in Nebraska feeding circles and also a prominent banker, being cashier of the First State Bank of Dodge.

Cheap Cuts of Meats.

The little "cook book" gotten out by the Department of Agriculture is proving a huge success, and is another achievement of a practical kind which that department has added to its already long list. Discussing the use of the cheaper cuts of meat it is particularly timely and its influence is likely to become permanent.

With little or no prospect of the so-called better cuts being reduced in price, it becomes obligatory for us, as a people, to use all of the available meats at our disposal, comments The National Provisioner. The great difficulty, however, in marketing these cheaper cuts in this country has been that our people have not been educated in their proper preparation, and there has been an inborn prejudice against the use of anything but the "best" in the food line, even among our laboring classes.

The official cook book dispels many of the notions regarding the food value of the cheaper cuts, showing them to be equal, or nearly so, to the ribs and loins. It also gives recipes showing how these may be made into palatable, attractive and nutritious dishes.

The effect of the book is being shown in an increased demand for the cheaper cuts and converts to it will be likely to continue to practice its economical lessons. The experience thus gained will be spread to others, and it is to be hoped that it will continue until ultimately all portions of our meat carcasses will find a ready sale in this country, and it will no longer be necessary to export them.

The general meat situation, throughout the world, shows no gain over a year ago, and it appears that it has made a considerable loss in this country. Our official census figures, which will be completed during the summer, will probably show a tremendous gain over ten years ago, and these taken into comparison with the visible meat supply of the two periods will make it plain that we must eat all the meat we raise and export, but a very small portion of it, or none at all.

Nebraska Yearling Cattle Top Chicago Market.

The top by a big margin for yearling heifers and steers mixed at Chicago on June 20 was $8.10, which price Clay, Robinson & Co. secured for 53 head of 868-lb yearlings belonging to J. K. Van Nostrand of York county, Neb. They were grade Herefords and Shorthorns, horned and dehorned and while fat lacked finish.

Pioneer Missouri Farmer and Stockman.

H. B. George of Hamilton, Mo., is one of the pioneer farmers and stockmen of that community and, we are proud to say, a valued friend of Clay, Robinson & Co., and extensive shipper from that place longer perhaps than any other [illegible] in all that country. And he is just as active [illegible] as he was in his younger days, although he is badly crippled, having been shot "all to pieces" during the war. When but 14 years of age he entered the Confederate army, and went clear through. He suffered with the rest of them at the great siege of Vicksburg, and was in some of the hottest battles of the war.

"This live stock business looks just as attractive to me as it ever did," said Mr. George. "In the early days I shipped to Chicago. That was before the Kansas City market was known. Of course I have had to adjust myself to the changes as they have come along through the years that I have been handling live stock. These changes are so frequent that a regular shipper and trader must be on the lookout all the time. In early days we bought by the head, but that would not go now. And while it might look easy to buy and trade that way, I doubt whether we made as much money then as now, when the margins are so close and when we are compelled to buy and ship at greater risks. In the early days there were not so many side issues in the field, such as provision and other speculative side deals to influence the markets. And we did not have so many classes of cattle then as now, or hogs either. They nearly all went into the same class. Now it is stockers and feeders, also killing steers. So a man must keep in close touch with the conditions if he expects to hold his reputation at the banks and stay in business."

MISSOURI-FED CATTLE WHICH BROUGHT A HIGH PRICE ON EAST ST. LOUIS MARKET.

On June 8 Clay, Robinson & Co. sold these 51 native Missouri beef steers of 1,580 lbs average at $8.50 for Wilcox & Littrell of Renick, Mo. This price was within 10c per cwt of the extreme top of the market that day and 60c per cwt higher than any other load of cattle sold by any other firm. The cattle which brought $8.60 were handled by Clay, Robinson & Co., and, barring this sale, the Wilcox & Littrell offerings sold as high as any cattle have made on that market thus far this year, only one car since Jan. 1 equalling them in price. These cattle were put on feed in November by Wilcox & Littrell and had been on a full feed of corn and clover hay. They were of fairly good quality and in good flesh condition.

Nebraska-Fed Heifers Top Omaha Market.

Gerhard Loseke, an old-time feeder of Platte county, Neb., had a car of well-finished heifers on the South Omaha market June 17 which our house sold at $7.20, averaging 804 lbs. This price is considerably above any late sales for this class of stock. Mr. Loseke is a good feeder and fully understands his business, and this shipment was nothing out of the ordinary, as he always has excellent stock.

Colorado Experiment Cattle Break all Price Records at Denver

On Wednesday, June 15, Clay, Robinson & Co. sold at Denver for the Colorado Agricultural College at Fort Collins, 30 head of steers, fed experimentally in three lots of 10 head each. These cattle were purchased through Clay, Robinson & Co. from the Tomkins Cattle Co. of Pueblo, Colo., at 5c per lb., and the steers were weighed up on the Denver market Nov. 30, 1909, averaging just 650 lbs per head.

These steers were bought at Denver by H. F. Blayney, buyer for the Coffin Packing & Provision Co. for that firm's fancy Denver trade. These cattle not only put a new season's top on the Denver market, but brought the highest price ever paid for cattle on the open market in Denver, outside of show cattle. The combination cattle brought $8.00 per cwt, the corn cattle $7.85 and the barley cattle $7.60.

The cattle were put in the lots on Dec. 1. The 30 head were fed together on alfalfa hay until Dec. 11, when they were divided, re-weighed and the experiment really begun. Ten head were put on a ration of alfalfa hay and ground California feed barley, ten head on alfalfa hay and corn chop and ten head were started on alfalfa hay, sugar beets and cotton cake. This third lot was fed on this ration until about the middle of March, when corn chop and molasses were added, replacing the sugar beets, this change in feed on this third lot being made at this particular time for the reason that as a rule the pulp at the sugar factories is usually exhausted about that date. When the steers were re-weighed on Dec. 11 the barley lot averaged 663, the corn lot 668 and the combination lot 673 lbs, and they gained right along in the same notches up until about April 1, when the barley cattle began to fall behind. The combination lot continued the heaviest until within two weeks of the finish, when the corn lot made their heaviest gain, nearly 4 lbs per day, while the combination cattle gained a little less than 3 lbs and the barley cattle only about one pound during the last two weeks of the experiment. This was probably due to the hot weather, and the syrup being very heating the cattle ate less of it. In feeding the two bunches on barley and corn they were given the same number of pounds of each ration per day and all three lots consumed practically the same amount of hay per day. The difference in the cost of the feed makes the combination cattle the most profitable from the feeder's standpoint, and they also showed the most finish, not only as live steers, but also in the beef, although as a lot the chucks on the corn steers are a little better covered than on either of the other two bunches. The average net profit on the three bunches of cattle is $1.00 per head on the barley cattle, $7.50 per head on the corn cattle and $10 per head on the combination cattle. In this experiment alfalfa hay was figured at $8.00 per ton, corn chop at $1.20 per cwt, barley at $1.20 per cwt, cotton cake at $32 per ton and syrup at $9.00 per ton.

These cattle were purchased, fed and marketed under the direction of Professor G. E. Morton, in charge of the Department of Animal Husbandry of the Colorado Agricultural College, who will issue a detailed bulletin on the experiment, which will prove highly instructive to western feeders. Professor Morton deserves the highest credit for the efficient manner in which the experiment has been conducted throughout. He is planning a much more elaborate experiment for next year with molasses and roots.

Following is copy of a letter received from Professor Morton, acknowledging proceeds and account sales:

Fort Collins, June 17, 1910.

Clay, Robinson & Company,
Denver, Colorado.

Gentlemen:

Your statement and check for $2402.90 received.

I am more than pleased with the sale you made for us. I have been receiving congratulations ever since I came home. The price was really better than I had hoped for, and we were especially pleased over the fact that the best of the stuff sold for a price which was the highest ever paid on the open market in Denver.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) G. E. MORTON.

We present below reports on the killing test, covering the three lots:

Lot No. 1—Barley and Alfalfa.

Value of hides, tallow and offal, per cwt. live weight, $1.04.

Iowa Experiment Station Markets Cattle.

The Iowa Experiment Station of Ames, Ia., on June 15 had on the Chicago market 40 head of yearling steers that had been used in an experiment test. Clay, Robinson & Co. handled the shipment and the sales follow: 13 head of 842 lbs average at $8.00, 14 head, 803 lbs, at $7.75 and 13 head, 816 lbs, at $7.65. The sale at $8.00 was the highest made that day for cattle of that weight. These cattle were fair quality Angus and lacked fat. The shipment was accompanied by H. H. Kildee, who has charge of the experimental work in the Animal Husbandry department of the Iowa Experiment Station.

Mr. Kildee said that the objects of the experiment were: First, to compare calves with older animals in economy of gain; second, to compare silage vs. dry feed; third, to compare cottonseed meal and oil meal as supplements to corn and cob meal in fattening young animals. Speaking of the experiment Mr. Kildee remarked:

"In this experiment we had three lots of Angus calves, 14 calves in each lot. At the beginning of the experiment, Nov. 19, the average weight was 385 lbs and at the close of the experiment the average weight of the calves in the different lots ranged from 829 to 854 lbs. The average daily ration for the calves in the different lots follows: Lot 1—Corn and cob meal 11.6 lbs, cottonseed meal 1.8 lbs, silage 5.2 lbs and clover hay 2 lbs. Lot 2—Corn and cob meal 13.4 lbs, cottonseed meal 1.8 lbs and clover hay 2 lbs. Lot 3—Corn and cob meal 13.7 lbs, oil meal 1.8 lbs and clover hay 2 lbs. The average daily ration for the 203 days follows: Lot 1, 2.25; lot 2, 2.19, and lot 3, 2.30. The cost of 100 lbs gain was $6.29 for Lot 1, $6.67 for Lot 2 and $6.39 for Lot 3. The dry matter for 100 lbs gain for Lot 1 was 705 lbs, Lot 2, 716 lbs, and Lot 3, 683 lbs. The selling price of the different lots: Lot 1, $7.65; Lot 2, $7.75 and Lot 3, $8.00.

"It will be noted that the gains were produced for about 55 per cent of the cost of gains produced in older animals. Another interesting feature is that in spite of the fact that the calves received a very large amount of silage in proportion to the roughage in order to secure a finish instead of securing so much growth, the calves made very economical gains and required an exceptionally small amount of dry matter per 100 lbs gain. meal made the most rapid gains and obtained the greater finish and therefore sold for a higher price on the market, while the lot receiving the silage stood second in rate of gain and first in economy of gain.

"This experiment would indicate that it is very advisable to finish our home grown animals at an early age rather than carry them over and finish them at two or three years of age."

Idaho Sheep Top South Omaha Market.

On June 20 the Butterfield Live Stock Co. of Washington county, Idaho, had a shipment of eight cars of sheep and lambs on the South Omaha market, all of which were handled by Clay, Robinson & Co. In this shipment were 592 lambs, averaging 67 lbs, that sold at $7.35; 428 rough, heavy hided wethers, averaging 97 lbs, at $4.75 and one car of ewes averaging 112 lbs at $4.60. These prices were extreme tops for their different classes.

On June 21 the above firm had in another shipment. Our house sold their two double decks of lambs to feeders at $6.40, averaging 55 lbs, the extreme top of the day's trade in this branch, and two double decks of wethers to the packers, averaging 92 lbs, at $4.75, also the top.

Shearing in the West is practically over. Relatively few clips have changed ownership during the last week. A great deal of consigning has been done, however, and many owners have given instructions to hold the wool until the market rights itself, even if it takes a year. This would indicate that the grower has firm faith in the future.

Idaho. My Idaho!

Lift all of New England and New York bodily a mile above the level of the sea, add 5,000 feet to Mount Washington and 7,000 to Mount Mitchel; throw in dozens of peaks just as high, all punching holes in the sky with their snowy summits; pile up everywhere hundreds on hundreds of mountains from 10,000 to 14,000 feet high; exaggerate 50-fold all the wild notches, gorges and glens of eastern America and multiply them by scores; send cataracts and cascades leaping and foaming down a thousand dizzy precipices and channels; toss in promiscuously parks larger than whole states in the smaller mentioned east and gardens of small area.

Erect statues of gods, genii, gnomes, titian centaurs and unnamed monsters thousands of feet high, hewn by ages on ages of winds and whirling water; cap all mountains with everlasting ice and snow and clothe their shaggy sides with waving forests of valuable timber; fill all the valleys to the mountain's feet with orchards and gardens, vineyards and grainfields bending beneath the burden of their own magnificient fruitage, and dot the horizon bounded pasture lands with flocks and herds waist deep in the very wantonness of plenty.

Underlay the whole vast area with gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc and iron ores, marble of a hundred hues, anthracite, bituminous and lignite coal, salt, sulphur, soda, lime asphaltum, gypsum and nearly every other mineral and metal in human use; through countless wondrous canyons pour mighty rivers with water power enough to run all the world's machinery; smite the rock-ribbed laboratories of Omnipotence and let the surging floods gush forth, rich in miracle healing virtues for the alleviation for many of the ills that flesh is heir to.

In the whole transcendent scene put 25,000 miles of mysterious mountains in whose rock walls lie enough wealth to pay the national debts of the world and leave a fortune for every man, woman and child from Cape Cod to Yuba Dam. Over all is spread a climate whose glory is unsurpassed under Heaven since sin and death crept into Eden, with the translucent splendor of skies more radiantly blue than ever bent their crystal arches above the far-famed Bay of Naples; where nights are glorious with floods of silvery moonlight and stardecked void, and murmuring zephyrs waft the symphonies of nature, the songs of the denizens of tree, shrub and flower, lulling to a sleep from which one awakens refreshed in mind and body, ready for whatsoever tasks the day may bring forth,—take all these things and you have a poor, puny idea of Idaho.

It is the promised land—a land where mountains of gold and silver ore wall in valleys that yield from 50 to 60 bushels of wheat, 75 to 100 bushels of oats, and 500 to 900 bushels of potatoes to the acre. It is a land where every man makes his own rain, and crops never fail; where rewards of industry are as sure as the decree of God; where wonder treads on beauty's heels and riches run to meet the earnest seeker. Its resources are as boundless as it limits and as varied as its sunsets of prismatic splendors.

Such is Idaho, the Gem of the Rockies.

The Young Man and the City Job.

There are, in the United States, probably something like one million young men whose eyes are directed more or less longingly toward that golden, glittering business Loreli, the New York job. New York, with its fascinating dash and rush and building towering into the skies! A New York job, with its big pay and untold chances for rapid advancement and more, much more, consequent pay and glory! What an alluring combination to the young fellow still in college; or to the young fellow dissatisfied with life on the farm; or to the young fellow discontented with the slow-moving business opportunities of his home town. What a pretty, enticing picture! But let us look on the other side.

Clerking will bring the young man anywhere from seven to ten dollars a week at the start. Eight dollars would be a very fair average estimate. And, in chronicling these figures, the clerkships in the average shop are chosen as standards for judging. If the young man gets a job in the wholesale houses down-town—an office job—he will be started out at about eight dollars a week, although, obviously, if he commands a knowledge of bookkeeping or stenography, his pay will start at a figure nearer twelve dollars.

Wall Street, with its lofty sound, is another lure. If the young man—a stranger—gets a job in Wall Street, he will start in at about six dollars a week, although the figure may be listed at eight dollars in some instances. And the subsequent "raises" will take considerable time to reach the fifteen, to say nothing of the twenty-dollar mark. There is a lot of money in Wall Street, undoubtedly—but it isn't in the young man's first job.

If one of these young men gets a job on the office staff of an insurance company he will start in at a salary of about eight dollars a week, this figure, too, being a fair initial criterion of the remuneration he will receive from similar jobs with other big companies. A job with an engineering firm pays not more than from six to ten dollars a week at the start, but if the young man has ability his opportunity for advancement to twenty dollars a week will be open and comparatively easy. Again, in this case, the young man with an engineering education is not considered. If the applicant obtains a job in a lawer's office he will receive eight or ten dollars a week.—Harper's Weekly.

Northwestern Live Stock Show.

The fourth annual live stock show of the Northwestern Live Stock Association will be held at the Union Stock Yards at South St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 15 to 18, inclusive. This show is planned without classes for breeding animals and is designed to aid the small feeder and farmer in obtaining knowledge as to what constitutes the best types of anima[illegible] market purposes. Cattle, sheep and swine [illegible] ranged under two main divisions: First, Pure Bred, second, Grades and Cross Breds. This avoids multiplicity of classes by bringing together all the pure breds in the classes for pure breds, and all the grades and cross breds in the classes for the grades and cross breds, the champions for each class competing for the Grand Championship. The premium list contains liberal cash prizes from the association and some attractive trophy cups and special prizes from others. A special prize is offered this year for amateur exhibitors who have never been in a show with their live stock.

Excellent quarters have been provided for the care of all animals sent to the show, and special features in the way of lectures and demonstrations by leading authorities on animal husbandry will be offered for the instruction of those who may attend the show. One excellent feature of this show is found in the system of having the judges give their reason for placing animals and awarding prizes. These little lectures by the judges are full of valuable information for the exhibitor and farmer, and it is information that is rarely obtained at any show.

The farmers and feeders of the Northwest can well afford to fit animals for this show, and the experience of those who have been exhibitors in the past shows a very handsome net profit as the prices at which the stock has sold and the cash prizes won make excellent returns for the feed consumed in fitting the animals for the show, in spite of the fact that ever since the show was started the price of feed has been high. It is not necessary for a farmer to be a professional exhibitor in order to win money at this show, and this opportunity for farmers and feeders to increase the knowledge of what is necessary to make good market types of animals should not be overlooked.

Do You Want Feeder or Breeder Sheep?

From present prospects it looks as though there is going to be a good demand for all classes of feeder sheep and lambs and breeder ewes this season, and we would not be surprised to see all classes sell relatively high.

There will no doubt be a good run of western range stock the next fifteen to thirty days. At the present time we know of a string of choice Idaho yearling breeder ewes which we expect on the market about July 1. If you should be interested in these ewes, or expect to purchase feeders or breeders at any time during the season, kindly let us know in order that we may keep you posted with our special market letters.

Alfalfa on Dry Land.

I have found several fields of alfalfa doing well on unirrigated land in Eastern Colorado. One man near Hugo has 100 acres which was shown on sandy land two years ago. When seen in May, 1910, it was looking well. This was sown upon freshly broken sod after the sod leveled with a disc. Several other smaller fields of alfalfa were found on sandy land near Hugo. Also some small fields were found growing on clay land in Lincoln and other counties.

The men who have succeeded best with unirrigated alfalfa have prepared their land well and then seeded it when an abundant supply of moisture was present. Some have sown with success as late as August 1, upon land which had been plowed early and kept free from weeds until the time of seeding.

With perfect germination and perfect soil conditions one pound of alfalfa seed will produce enough plants to cover an acre of land, but many have recommended 15 to 20 lbs an acre. The amounts sown which have given the best results on dry land have been from three to ten pounds an acre. And it is possible that from 5 to 10 lbs of good seed will give better results than larger quantities, because all extra alfalfa plants not needed are weeds which weaken the plants that survive the competition.—J. E. Payne, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins.

A 1,200-lb steer, when dressed according to modern packing house conditions, will yield, says the National Provisioner, as follows: Ribs, 165 lbs, loins 114, rounds 165, chucks 150, plates 113, shanks forty-five, flanks twenty-four, suet twenty-eight, kidneys two, tongue five, hide sixty-five, oleo oil twenty-five, oleo stearine 13.20, tallow 5.21, hair twelve, glue 1.55, cheek five, brains five, lips one, heart 3.5, liver ten, tail 1.25, sweetbreads two, medicinal glands six, tripe eight, casings 5.07, fertilizer 24.75, hoofs 1.75, shins 1.5, neat's foot oil one, butter stock 1.25, saw bone thirteen, horns 1.75, blood 1.20, total 881.56 lbs. These figures are said by packers to be extremely conservative.

The uses of the several parts are: From hides, leather; from tallow, soap, glycerine, butterine, lubricator and candles; from blood, albumen, fertilizer and stock food; from the tankage, which includes all manner of "refuse," fertilizer and stock food; from the hoofs, buttons, hair pins, fertilizer, glue and fancy goods; from the oleo, oil, butterine and compound lard; from the intestines, sausage casing, gutskin hose and snuff packages; from the weasands, sausage casing, brewer's hose and snuff packages; from the bladder, casings and packages for putty, lard, snuff from the tail, hair for mattresses and upholstering; from the bones, buttons, glue, handles and fancy goods; from the neat's foot oil, polish leather dressing, lubricant and illuminant; from the bone meal, stock food fertilizer, material for tempering steel, anhydrous ammonia and glue. The tongue, cheek, brain, lips, heart, liver, tail, sweetbreads and tripe are all sold for meat. There is nothing wasted but the water in the carcass.

Save on Your Baling.

Less than forty cents a ton is the cost with Ertel's new Daisy one man one horse hay press. It is a self-threader and self-tyer and one man can bale from four to ten tons a day. Just think what that means in saving. No big baler crew to feed. No interruption of regular work. You can do your own baling in your spare time. This press is mounted on wheels and can be taken right into the field and the hay baled right at the windrow.

The Ertel Company also make the Cyclone Three Stroke Selfeed Hay Press. This is the latest, most powerful and efficient horse power press on the market. It is operated by two men and two horses, and will bale from ten to twenty tons per day, with very light draught on the team. A whip attachment can be furnished, making the team drive itself.

A new power press which they will have ready this summer is the first practical and economical application of power to a baling press.

Vol. 20 | Chicago, Friday, July 1, 1910 | No. 26

Copious Rains Put Nebraska in Good Shape.

Our Mr. John Clay writes from Central City, Neb.: "This part of the country is in splendid condition. There was a heavy rain (.78 inches) on Friday night of last week and another rain (½ inch) Saturday night. All crops were suffering. Small grain will be an average crop and corn is looking splendid. On the way from Omaha to Fremont the country looks dry, but after passing the latter place everything looks good. Notwithstanding a great deal of replanting, corn seems a more even crop than usual and is very clean. With average rains Nebraska promises immense crop of corn. Hay is a short crop, the first cutting of alfalfa being especially disappointing. Fat cattle nearly all gone, but lots of pigs in sight."

land in the West that will never be fit for any other purpose than growing live stock, but the Government went to work and made the ranchmen tear down their fences. Out there there are millions of acres of land that can never be irrigated, yet the Government says it can't be fenced. If this land was leased for a long term of years to stock raisers and ranchmen and they could fence it there would be thousands of more head of cattle and sheep raised than at present."

"It is my judgment that farmers do not like to raise hogs as long as corn is bringing a high price. In 1881 there was a short corn crop, and corn went to 75c per bushel. In 1882 hogs brought $9.50. We have had three years of high-priced corn, and now we have high-priced hogs. Farmers would rather sell their corn than feed it."

corn is plentiful and will be fed to young pigs during the grass season in unlimited quantities. The result will be an early run of somewhat light but fat butcher hogs. Unless sickness appears, no pigs will be marketed.

Spread in Cattle Prices Getting Wider.

Quotation range is gradually getting wider in the cattle market, which is quite the usual thing at this time of the year. The spread is now around $3.25, being $1.00 wider than a year ago. While the market for good to prime cattle is in relatively strong condition, common and medium steers are working to a lower level, as they generally do when the grassers start to come freely. From now until full grass cattle are likely to be much in evidence and as they get more abundant prices are likely to drop

FEED LOTS OF PERRY REEDER, NEAR FORT COLLINS, COLORADO.

"Cattle Prices to Go Higher."—Samuel Allerton.

That the price of cattle, especially good grades, will remain high or go higher, and that farmers of the country will not raise hogs as long as corn brings the good prices that it now commands, is the opinion of Samuel W. Allerton, veteran packer, financier, land owner and feeder, who, as we stated last week was a pleasant visitor at the offices of Clay, Robinson & Co. "Cattle will remain high, or go higher, especially good grades," declared Mr. Allerton. "Farmers east of the Missouri River are not raising any more cattle, but are selling their calves. It is my belief that cattle will go to a still higher figure, because the former ranch land in the West is now being turned to other purposes, and farmers east of the Missouri River cannot profitably grow live stock on $100 and $200 land. They are compelled to grow crops on this high-priced land, and what calves they have they dispose of.

"Take west of the Mississippi River. If a different policy prevailed there might be more cattle raised there. There are millions of acres of Normal Pig Crop is Looked For.

About 1,200 answers to an inquiry sent to the country recently regarding the condition of the spring pig crop and winter supply prospects have elicited replies which are printed below:

The pig supply will not vary much in numerical strength from that of last year. More sows were bred, but breeding was done with gilts, nearly all the aged sows in the country having been cashed in last summer in response to attractive prices. The result has been small litters.

Porcine health is uniformly good. March farrowed pigs had good weather during the infancy stage which gave them a good start. Usually March weather is unfavorable and pigs are stunted in consequence. The bad weather of May found the pigs thrifty, having "something to go on," and mortality has been very light.

Spring pigs will make their appearance in the fall market six weeks in advance of the usual time. They will troop toward the shambles in September and October, instead of November and December, owing to the good start they got. Old still more. The popular prediction is that good cattle are going to be scarce and high all summer, while the common grades will be numerous and relatively cheap. Western rangers will start to come in a few weeks, according to the latest reports from the range country, and then there will be enough of the light weight steers to fully supply the demand. It is generally figured that the supply of rangers this year will be less than last year, but this is only a vague guess, and there is no assurance that it will be true till the returns are all in.

Ohio-Fed Texas Yearlings at $8.10.

Howard Gerlaugh of Osborn, Ohio, was on the Chicago cattle market June 22 with 21 Texas-bred yearling steers of 1,035-lbs average which Clay, Robinson & Co. landed at $8.10, the pinnacle by 35c per cwt for yearlings on that day. They were grade Herefords and of the famous S M S breed belonging to Swenson Bros. of Stanford, Tex. Mr. Gerlaugh is prominent in Ohio Shorthorn cattle breeding circles and is also a well-known farmer and feeder.

No Market on The Fourth.

There will be no market for cattle, hogs or sheep at any of the points on July 4. As usual on the Fourth, the yards will be closed, but all stock received will be watered and cared for. The Fourth falls on Monday this year, which is one of the main market days of the week. However, buyers will likely receive increased orders on Tuesday.

Topped Chicago Cattle Market at $8.50.

A. P. Grout, a noted breeder and feeder of Winchester, Ill., was on the Chicago market June 27 with a shipment of Angus cattle which Clay, Robinson & Co. handled. In the consignment were 3 head of 1,580-lb steers which sold at $8.50, the top of the market by 10c per cwt, and 12 yearlings of 999 lbs average which brought the top price of $7.75 for yearlings.

Bullish on Summer Market for Hogs.

"We have made exhaustive inquiries into the hog supply, both for the present and future, both by personal investigation and letters, and we have finally arrived at the following conclusion," write Schwabacher & Co., provision experts of Chicago. "Hog receipts will be light until next winter, when they wil begin again to be oppressive. We went into last September with a fair stock of both lard and meats and it quickly disappeared. This year there are no stocks and we feel that when the fall export lard demand and the southern meat trade get under way prices here will be higher than those of a year ago."

Both Grass and Cattle are Good.

"Grass is good in the pastures along the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad, in Oklahoma," said W. V. Galbraith, general live stock agent of that line. "Texas cattle sent to Oklahoma pastures last spring are in excellent condition, and the outlook is promising for the stockmen this year. Good grass and excellent crop prospects are reported from practically every Katy station in Texas."

Record Price for Colorado-Fed Cattle.

A new high price was recorded for Colorado-fed cattle at Kansas City on June 20, when Clay, Robinson & Co. sold 20 head of 1,147 lbs average at $8.25. They were from the Sugar City feed lot of Ballantine & Beggs, who are among the most famous raisers and feeders of cattle in the West. Colorado-fed cattle continue to come to the front and attract attention not only in the West, but East as well. Ballantine & Beggs and other prominent Colorado feeders are doing a great work of advertising for Colorado in showing the easterners what fancy cattle can be produced and finished within the borders of that state.

Need Rain Badly in the West.

A communication from our South Omaha house reads in part: "We are getting bad reports, especially from Wyoming. The weather is very dry, grass is drying up and quite a number of people are beginning to ship stock to get rid of it. Last week there were quite a number of cows and calves here from Wyoming and Idaho. The cows were mostly in thin condition. Around Sheridan, Wyo., the range is in bad shape, and it does not look as though we are going to get any fat cattle from that part of the country."

Big Run of Minnesota Stock Cattle.

Our South St. Paul house writes us to the effect that on June 21 there was the largest run of cattle on that market of any day this year, due to droughty conditions. Common Minnesota stock cattle made up the great bulk of the arrivals.

Montana Will Ship Cattle Month Earlier.

W. P. Davidson, manager of the Empire Cattle Co. of Chinook, Mont., writes under date of June 19: "Conditions are very dry in the northern part of the state-and I believe the beef shipments will start a month earlier than usual, as the grass has already matured."

STEAM PLOWING IN WYOMING.

The above cut shows a steam plow outfit on the range of the Nine H Six Sheep Co. of Natrona county, Wyo. It will be observed that there are several hogs leading the procession. Ambrose Hemingway, president of the above company, writes us that their hogs show an increase of 750 per cent this season, which is certainly a "heap sight" better than sheep have done in Wyoming, at least during the present season. Mr. Hemingway encloses $1.00 to extend his subscription to the REPORT two years and in his letter says: "Out of some twenty papers and magazines received by us the REPORT is the only one that is always read."

Great Growth of Mutton Lamb Industry.

The mutton lamb industry has in recent years developed a feature in meat supply that seems to have no limit in price or demand. The consumer wants lamb and the smaller and younger the better his sense of taste seems to be satisfied. This industry now offers great opportunity for the farmer sheep raiser who can keep a small ewe flock and produce a few lambs for the market that will fit in any time from the early winter to the early summer. The fat, light weight lamb is in best demand, and this kind of meat is now so fixed in the taste of the mutton eater that price is no barrier. The large western flocks that supply the general market with the young class of muttons cannot compete in the young lamb supply because they are too remote from the market and because this class of lamb is quickly produced by extra feed and care. There is a good demand for the 40 or 50-lb lamb, and this lamb can best be produced where feed is plenty and shed and housing suitable to grow it without any of the checks or embarrassments that too frequently accompany such work where large flocks are handled.

The farm in the corn belt is the place to carry on successfully the early mutton lamb industry. It is the place fitted by crop production to make the mutton lamb industry highly profitable. These farms are now usually fenced into pastures and inclosures to safely handle the breeding flock. There is no kind of stock that can be put onto the farm and be made to produce larger profit for the money and labor invested than a small flock of good mutton quality ewes.

Hog Crop Depends on Outturn of Corn.

"I can make a better estimate on the coming hog crop when the corn crop has been heard from in the fall. It is impossible to have a substantial hog production without plenty of corn to fatten and finish them on. There are lots of young pigs in the country and the acreage of corn has been increased but no one can estimate the hog production until the corn crop has been assured" So spoke John Clay of Chicago who was in the city.—Buffalo Record.

Big Shrinkage in United States Exports.

Conditions were not favorable for an extensive export business in any kind of commerce during the past year and the falling off in food stuffs is particularly striking. Wheat exports were about half as large as in the previous year, and it was the same with corn and most of the meat for the reason that prices were too high at this end of the line. All fresh meat ruled higher than for many years and the European purchaser was not inclined to pay the price. There is a better outlook during the coming year, providing the crops are large. Lower prices will naturally mean increased exports. So far as live cattle are concerned, there is very little chance of ever getting that business back on the old-time basis. For the past year cattle exports have amounted to almost nothing and when one considers the price that had to be paid here and the price of beef in London it is a wonder that any were sent across the water. There will have to be a big drop in cattle prices here before the business will be materially increased.

Montana Rangers to Move July 14.

We are just in receipt of advices from Miles City, Mont., that the railway agent there has an order for fifty cars for cattle to be shipped July 14, this being the first car order for rangers placed there this season.

World's Supply of Cattle, Hogs and Sheep.

The International Agricultural society, of which the United States is a member, and which includes practically all of the more important countries, has issued some interesting data. It is, of course, a difficult procedure, owing to the varied times and methods of collecting such statistics in the several countries. The latest effort of the society was toward a world's live stock census. Some of the figures, including those of the United States, are for the year 1910. Other countries turned in their latest returns, but in some cases their latest returns are ten years old. So that the earth's live stock census is a jumbled up mess.

As will be seen by the following, Europe, Asia, North America and South America rank in that order in the number of cattle. In sheep the continents rank thus, Europe, Australasia, Asia, South America, North America, Africa. Europe and North America lead in hogs. Continental enumerations show:

	Cattle.	Sheep.	Hogs.
Europe	129,693,864	179,035,011	68,586,094
North America	81,456,542	63,345,820	51,310,548
South America	41,511,176	90,348,580	1,836,507
Asia	87,520,324	25,695,151	284,729
Australasia	12,316,338	109,452,101	940,581
Africa	1,147,895	1,321,159	10,771
	353,646,139	469,197,822	122,969,350

India, comprising British India and the native states, have 86,000,000 cattle, almost as many as Argentine and the United States combined. The world's hog supply is situated largely in Germany, with 22,000,000, and the United States, with about 48,000,000, being more than half of the total. In sheep Australia leads with 87,000,000, Argentine is next with 67,000,000, Russia third with 61,000,000, the United States fourth with 57,000,000.

Perhaps the census of each country will prove useful some time, and we therefore append it for filing:

Largest Sheep Ranch is in Chili.

The largest sheep owners in the world are Scotchmen, and, contrary to the popular idea that all the biggest things in sheep and wool are found in Australia, the largest sheep ranch is not in that English colony nor in Argentine, but in Chili, and is managed and controlled by Scotchmen—two "canny Scots"—and they have the job of looking after 2,500,000 head of the wooly tribe that range over 2,400,000 acres of land. You find a country where the Scotchman isn't a prominent figure in the sheep world and you will have to visit some other planet.

Cronies Enroute for Scotland.

We had our staff photographer "snap" the above gentlemen together because they are great friends, and their lines have run closely parallel throughout their lives. On the right is Walter Rae of Massena, Ia., and on the left James Ford of Bridgewater, Ia. These towns are contiguous, in the "garden spot" of Southwestern Iowa, the former being in Adair and the latter in Cass county. Messrs Rae and Ford were in our office Monday en route to New York to embark aboard the Cunard S. S. "Lusitania" for a well-earned vacation trip to their old home in Scotland.

Both gentlemen were born in the "bonnie border country," at or near Jedburgh, Roxburghshire, famed as the place where in early days they dispensed the "Jeddart" brand of justice which has passed into a proverb:

"Where in the morn men hang and draw
And sit in judgment after."

Some thirty-five or more years have elapsed since either gentlemen have seen their home-land, and naturally they look forward with keen anticipation to the moment when they can feel with Rob Roy that "My foot is on my native heath, and my name is MacGregor!"

Both these gentlemen are of the sturdy Scotch type which has contributed so much to our national prosperity and greatness. Each has achieved marked success as farmers and stockmen, and are numbered among the substantial land owners of their chosen state. Mr. Rae has many irons in his fire, and keeps all of them hot. He is a farmer, feeder, stock and wool dealer, breeder of registered Shorthorn cattle and Shropshire sheep, with a few other interests thrown in for good measure and to keep him busy. He "shows up" at the Chicago Stock Yards with frequent regularity, and no man is more welcome at the offices of Clay, Robinson & Co. than genial, whole-souled "Walter." After passing the time o' day with "Jim" Weir, himself a braw Scotchman, at the cashier's window, he usually next hunts up Mr. John Clay for a few minutes "crack," and they swap news and exchange reminiscences of the old days along the Tweed and Teviot, the "calf ground" of both. Mr. Rae has been a regular and almost weekly customer of Clay, Robinson & Co. for at least twenty years. Mr. Ford has also transacted some business through our firm.

Mr. Clay, who knew Mr. Ford some thirty-eight years ago in Scotland, they being natives of the same shire, recalled the fact that the last time he saw him was at the funeral of a shepherd and well-known character of the Cheviot Hills named John Douglas, otherwise known as Jock o' Phaup. Mr. Clay in a Scotch sketch first printed in the Live Stock Report of Jan. 19, 1899, drew the following word picture of that sombre event, which is apropos in this connection:

The scene changes. A year or two after one summer's day there is a solemn gathering at the shieling on the green hillside. Jock o'Phaup has been gathered to his fathers. Up to the farm buildings come the minister's and various other gigs and dogcarts, and there they are left. Once again we breast the hill. From every point the neighboring shepherds are making for Phaup. You see them in their black clothes and weather-worn beaver hats, striding solemnly across the valley or down the burnside. They come up, and as is the custom in those parts, show but little demonstration. It was a gray, gurly day, altho' in midsummer—fit hour for a funeral; and after the minister had led in devotion, all that was earthly of the old shepherd was transferred to a cart that had been brought up from the farm. It led the procession and we followed on over the divide, down the green hillside past a patch of timber, till we struck the roadway that led past the buildings and the old thatched cottages now out of use, down past the old churchyard, till four or five miles away we came to Oxnam kirkyard, and there we laid away Jock o' Phaup.

"You cross a bridge coming from God's acre to the main road. The stream was murmuring as usual, the birds were singing and the hills looked as green as on my first visit to the valley. Death has made no change in the scene and the ploughboy was whistling as gaily as ever as we passed him on the road. But sometimes when the witching hour of night comes round I think of those scenes, of the greening hillside, of the solitude of the glens, of the solemn procession from the shepherd's home to the tabernacle not built with hands, the grave where now the grass grows green."

Care of Live Stock During Dry Weather.

The extended drought in some sections of the country has made it necessary to give special attention to herds and flocks in order to prevent serious losses. Prof. G. C. Humphrey of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin urges farmers to give special care to animals at this time to prevent their suffering from the drought.

The importance of plenty of shade cannot be over-estimated, Prof. Humphrey says. Stock may be housed during the day, if necessary, in darkened stables through which air may pass, where the animals will be less annoyed by flies. An ample supply of water is also an essential, and the water supply should be well protected even though it costs considerable labor to haul water from a distance. Good food is also essential at this time. Green feed is preferable, although dry hay may be used without serious result.

Now is a good time to cull out the poor animals, as it is no time for "star boarders." Only the very best individuals in herds and flocks should be maintained. It will be better to buy feed to keep the best animals through a period of drought than to sell the animals and have to buy again for foundation stock at a later time when they will cost more. By providing some soiling crops later in the season, the supply of roughage may be kept up without drawing upon the main forage crop.

Drouth in Argentina Affects Beef Supply.

London Live Stock Journal: One cause of the dearness of beef which has not been noticed is the effect of the drought which prevailed in Argentina in the early part of this season, which seriously reduced the production of beef for a time. It is true that in the five months ending with May last imports from that source were 1,822,684 cwt of beef, compared with 1,678,710 cwt in the corresponding period of 1909, but the increase was not as great as the development of the meat trade would have shown under ordinary circumstances, with prices in this country as tempting as they have been this season. The total beef received from all sources is only 45,000 cwt more than that of last year up to the end of May, and against this there is a decrease of 146,500 cwt of mutton, while the cattle imports show a large decline.

Clay, Robinson & Co.

topped the week's cattle market at Chicago 10c per cwt by selling at $8.50 on Wednesday, June 29, a load--16 head--of 1,454-lb beeves for H. B. Schwaller of Burlington, Ia. These cattle were grade Herefords, of good quality and fat.

On same day we sold for M. R. Barton 18 head, 1,488 lbs, at $8.35; C. H. Barton, 18 head, 1,426 lbs, at $8.15, and Henry Barton, 18 head, 1,263 lbs, at $7.95. These gentlemen are brothers and also reside in Burlington, Ia.

Last week closed with the market in wretched shape. Barring Monday, the buyers were able to dictate terms on every day. Result was that they laid in supplies at the lowest cost in some time. Choice to prime offerings showed 20@30c loss for the week, such as went between $6.75@7.75 40@50c and those under $6.75 60c@$1.00. It was one of the worst markets of the season. Liberal runs of grassers from the Southwest at the River points and heavy liquidation of cattle from the corn belt, owing to the drouth, brought about the bad condition of the trade. Included in the week's offerings were 5,000 Texans and prices for these receded around $1.00 from the high point of the preceding week.

Prices continued on their downward trend Monday of this week. This was in spite of the early estimate being reduced to 21,000, with the official count 21,572, and a decrease of 9,000 at the River points from Monday of the previous week. The general market was dull and sluggish. Beef steer prices were lowered 10@15c for choice to prime and 25@35c for others from last week's close. The decline from the start of last week was 25@35c for choice to prime lots, 45@65c for good kinds and 75c@1.00 for common and medium grades. All classes of buyers were very indifferent bidders where sellers were not willing to concede the price breaks. We sold three head of 1,580-lb offerings from Illinois at $8.50. The next highest price was $8.40, paid for 45 head of prime 1,524 and 1,552 lbs average from Iowa. The best straight lot of yearlings offered were 12 head of 999 lbs average from Illinois which we landed at $7.75. There were not many sales above $8.00, showing the scarcity of extra choice to prime lots, and bulk of trading was at $6.50@8.00. Tuesday run 2,731. Quality of arrivals was mediocre and demand very poor, although prices were not quotably lower. Best offered were 20 head of 1,375 lbs average at $7.50. Receipts of 13,000 Wednesday fell 5,000 to 7,000 under expectations. It was no surprise that the trade was active aud higher for all desirable offerings. It was a 10@15c higher deal in good to prime lots and strong to 10c higeer for medium grades, but such as had to go under $6.00 were merely steady. The top at $8.50 was obtained by us for the H. B. Schwaller offerings from Iowa, there being 16 head of 1,454 lbs average in the shipment. No other sale was made within 10c per cwt of the price.

Shrink in Stock Weights

Ever taken into your calculations that possibly unnecessary shrinkage from home weights of cattle, hogs, sheep or lambs is responsible, many times, for a balance on the wrong side? Shrink runs into dollars about as fast as water through a sieve, when stock cost as they do now. It is an important part of Clay, Robinson & Co.'s business to be mindful of all the details which add to shippers' returns. This item of shrinkage is one of the important details now. We use every known expedient evolved by long practice and great experience to get fills on stock consigned to us. We get the offerings into roomy pens, keep the floors clean, yard as close to the scales as possible, and get them weighed as nearly at the right minute as conditions will permit. This all counts in dollars and cents to the feeder and shipper. It is the consignor we are looking out for. He pays us for our services, and we earnestly endeavor to give him value received, and something besides. Best service costs you no more than the poorest. See if your shrink will not be reduced and your profits increased by consigning to

COWS AND HEIFERS.

Buyers did not let up in their pounding tactics last week, being reflected in a decline of 35@50c. This made a loss of 75c@$1.25 in two weeks. Increased runs of Texans and liberal supplies of she stock from the corn belt because of droughty conditions were the depressing factors.

Not satisfied with the big price concessions of last week, buyers were out for more on Monday of this week. When a trading basis had been established it was a 25@35c lower deal, the plainer grades of grassy lots showing most loss. The market was a very draggy affair throughout the day. It was a dull deal Tuesday, yet prices were not quotably lower. The supply was small, as was also the outlet. Sellers were unable to boost rates on Wednesday, buyers steadfastly refusing to do sums in addition.

BULLS.

This branch of the market last week was trimmed to the extent of 75c by the buyers. The decline was just as pronounced for the heavy as for the lighter weight. It was a dull and lower deal every day.

There was a further decline of 15@25c on Monday of this week. And buyers were in no hurry to trade on this basis. The supply was fairly liberal. Buyers were very indifferent bidders Tuesday, although the small supply was cleared at steady rates. On Wednesday prices were steady to 10c higher.

CALVES.

Last week closed with prices 75c@$1.00 lower than the finish of the previous week. A liberal supply and the sharp break in prices for lambs proved too much for the selling interests.

Buyers started out bidding 25c lower prices on Monday of this week. The supply was light, however, and sellers finally obtained steady rates. An outsider paid up to $8.00, but $7.75 was the limit to the big packers. In spite of a light run Tuesday, buyers would not turn a wheel until sellers conceded 50@75c from corresponding day last week. Bulk vealers went at $7.50@7.75. STOCKERS AND FEEDERS.

Last week proved a disastrous one for stockers and feeders. There was a sensational decline in prices and the outlet was the narrowest of the year. The break for feeders was 50c and for stockers 75c@$1.00. Parched pastures, a declining fat cattle market, liberal runs and uncertainty as to the outturn of the corn crop were the bad features that sellers had to contend with.

This week opened up with greatly reduced arrivals, increased orders from both local and outside buyers and brisk bidding on the part of Yard dealers. The result was an active trade at prices strong to 10c higher, in spite of the dull and lower market for the fat grades. Prices were steady Tuesday. The supply was small and there was a good attendance of buyers. Trade was active at prices 10@15c higher Wednesday.

Thursday proved the low day last week. The top was $9.55 and big weight packers went down to $8.90. The great bulk of the day's business was at $9.15@9.40. The week closed with the top at $9.65, within 10c per cwt of the high point of the week, while the big heavy packers had to go down to $8.90, as low as any time for the week.

On Monday of this week the run totaled 34,171, being far larger than any one looked for. It was generally a 10c lower market. The exceptions were less for light weights and more for heavy packers. The market closed on the bottom, it being hard to get buyers to look at anything. Light weights had the call, fancy going up to $9.60, with $9.20@9.50 gathering in the bulk. Run Tuesday 18,223. The market was in bad shape. Opening 10@15c lower, trade got worse as the day advanced and closed 20@25c lower. The practicable top was $9.47½ for fancy light, but good 200-lb butchers had to go at $9.35 and prime heavy at $9.15@9.20 late. Taking the session as a whole, it was mostly a $9.10@9.30 trade. Heavy packers went down to $8.80 and pieces of loads as low as $8.50. Run Wednesday 23,000. Opening weak with the previous day's finish, the market gained strength as the day advanced and closed 10c higher. Top was $9.50 and bulk $9.00@9.40, taking the day's business as a whole.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of hogs:

Good to choice assorted light shipping	$9 35 @	9 50

*Sold by Clay, Robinson & Co.

The decline for sheep last week was 50@75c. Common and medium lambs showed 25@50c loss, but the good to prime lots held steady. Sellers were powerless to resist the pounding tactics of the buyers, in spite of the reduction in supplies, as the situation was still bad, owing to the heavy runs of the previous week and the sluggish and lower dressed meat trade both locally and in the East.

On Monday of this week the run was 16,319. Lamb trade acted better, a 15@25c advance being scored on the good to prime springers over last week's closing, sorts considered. A big band of prime Missouri springers sold at $8.15, sorted, and a dozen head reached $8.25, while there was lots of $8.00 business. The largest delegation of western grass sheep thus far this eason got in, but for the most part lacked good mutton quality. The best end of the Idaho grass wethers sold at $4.50@4.65, with a plain class at $4.00@4.15 and some light common culls below $4.00. Desirable mixed grass wethers and yearlings went at $4.75, and some of a thin light class found outlet as feeders at $4.10. Feeder trade was slow, parched pastures restricting the output. California feeding lambs made $6.50. Native ewes stopped at $4.25, and $4.50 bought good fed-western wethers. Marketing Tuesday 14,254. Native sheep and yearlings sold steady, but rangers were mostly 25c lower. Lambs brought prices strong to 10c higher. Tops on both natives and rangers (Washingtons) at $8.35 and $7.60 respectively were made by us. Native yearlings reached $6.00 and Idahos of 93 lbs average $5.00. Top sheep at $4.50, paid for Idaho wethers. Bulk natives comprised ewes which sold at $4.00@4.25. Supply Wednesday 16,000. Barring common and medium lambs, which were dull and lower sale, the general market was steady to strong. Top lambs $8.35 and best aged sheep offered at $4.25, although two-year-old range wethers went at $4.60.

All In The Salesmen

Many feeders and shippers have saved commissions by consigning to Clay, Robinson & Co. Suppose two men ship stock, same grade and quality, consigned to different commission firms. Suppose one firm by better salesmanship or harder work secures a nickel or a dime per 100 lbs more that the other. Don't you see that the extra amount would more than pay the commission, and add just that much to your check? We spoke of one firm getting a nickel or a dime per 100 lbs more than the other. As a matter of fact Clay, Robinson & Co. have often beaten competitors 15c, 25c, yes, 40c per cwt on stock of identically same class. It's all in the salesmen. We, of course, do not claim that in every case we get more for consignments than another firm would do. But in every case we do get the full strength of the market. If it were not a fact that some salesmen are better sellers and do habitually get better prices than others, where would be the sense of our hiring the highest salaried salesmen in the trade? We are not throwing our money away. If all salesmen were alike we could save thousands of dollars annually in salaries. Read about what we have done for others, or what we can do for you, will not put a penny into your pocket, unless you act upon your best judgment and consign to

Will Want Feeding Cattle and Lambs.

The following comes from our East Buffalo house: "The writer has just returned from a trip through Southern and Western Michigan and Northern Indiana and in all the territory covered found a very good crop of clover hay. Timothy hay is short and will not make much of a crop, even if they should have considerable rain. Oat crop looks very good, and there is a large acreage for that territory. Corn is rather backward, caused by the cold weather through May and fore part of June. A great deal of it had to be planted over, as all corn on sod land was cut off to a considerable extent by cut-worms and the replanted started quick when the weather warmed up and there is a very good stand of corn in all the territory mentioned, as well as in Northwestern Ohio.

"Hogs of a marketable age are very scarce in the territory mentioned, but there is a good crop of spring pigs which will no doubt commence to be marketed fully a month earlier than the former years, as every farmer is using every effort to shove his hogs along.

"Should the corn crop prove all right there will be a strong demand for feeding lambs from the sections mentioned, for in most places there is more clover hay than there has been in a good many years.

"No doubt with a good crop of corn there will be a big call for feeding cattle, as all who fed cattle the past winter did very well, and there are good many who did not feed last winter that want to get into the game this year."

Will Be Glad When It is Over.

Market quotations on grassy cattle at the period of the year always show a striking decline. It is apparently a change in the market, but in reality it is a change in the essential nature of the stock marketed. By the time the so-called declines are adjusted to the usual summer level, and this is the only way in which we can measure the situation, the class of stock coming will have undergone a material change, from that which stands as the basis of comparison at the beginning of the drop. Until that adjustment is made the quotations which span the gulf will run into considerable figures. This period of passing from the supply of hard-fleshed, dry-lot cattle to that of the slippery grassers is always one of uncertainty and great variation in quotation. Packer buyers get their fingers burned liberally and have troubles of their own during this time and sellers are never certain within wide limits of where the stuff is going to land. As a result there is much confusion in quotations and much difference of opinion between buyers and sellers as to what is being bough and sold, and everybody will be glad as usual when it is over.—Sioux City Record.

One of the biggest farces in the world is the advanced car report at Chicago on the three roads. On Tuesday of last week the car report was 775, followed by receipts of 23,984 cattle, 34,283 hogs and 15,894 sheep. Tuesday of this week advanced car report was 770 cars, only five less than the week before, followed Wednesday by a run of 13,000 cattle, 23,000 hogs and 16,000 sheep.

Clay, Robinson & Co.

$8.50 Topped the Kansas City Cattle Market Two Successive Weeks $8.50

On June 16 our house at that point sold 17 beeves of 1,470 lbs average at $8.50 for R. B. Wyatt of Reserve, Kan., extreme top for that week. Also on June 21 they obtained $8.50 for 17 head of 1,531 lbs average for H. R. Rhodes of Colony, Kan., the extreme top that week.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

Coats Bros. of Texas county, Mo., sold a shipment of sheep at Kansas City,

F. W. Geddes of Albany county, Wyo., marketed two cars of cattle at Denver.

Smith & Robinson of Las Animas county, Colo., marketed a car of cows at Denver.

M. Devoy of Union county, N. M., was on the Denver market with a car of cattle.

Geo. T. Stevens of Walworth county, S. D., was again in with a mixed load of cattle Monday.

Gould & Plessinger of Sedgwich county, Colo., marketed a car of hogs through our Denver house.

Carter & McFadden, the big shipping firm of Jasper county, Mo., last week marketed hogs at Kansas City.

We had the pleasure of handling a double deck of sheep for J. Minig of Ramsey county, N. D., at South St. Paul.

We had the pleasure of handling a car of cattle for O'Laughlin & Wale of Faulk county, S. D., at South St. Paul.

J. R. Porter & Son, the well-known shippers of Dundy county, Neb., were on the Denver market with a car of hogs.

Ed Loy, for whom our Kansas City house has sold a large number of cattle and hogs, had a car of hogs there last week.

J. A. Estes of Ottertail county, Minn., had his usuar weekly shipment of cattle and hogs at South St. Paul on Monday.

Wilcox & Tuttle, old and valued patrons of our Kansas City house, had a consignment of beef steers on that market.

C. C. Stout of Ottawa county, Kan., an old-time and valued customer of ours, had a shipment of cattle on the Kansas City market.

R. M. Craig of Muskogee county, Okla., was in the quarantine division at Kansas City on June 21 with a shipment of cattle to our house.

Vincent Bros., the well-known sheep raisers of Coconino county Ariz., disposed of a shipment through our Kansas City house.

On June 22 our Denver house handled a car of native sheep for J. O. Stream of Prowers county, Colo., at very satisfactory prices.

A. T. Schull of Logan county, Colo., was on the Denver market with a car of hogs which our house disposed of at satisfactory prices.

H. W. Moore, the extensive shipper and feeder of Morgan county, Colo., and a good friend of ours, marketed a car of cattle at Denver.

G. W. Rounds, well-known stockman of Pittsburg county, Okla., had a consignment of quarantine cattle to our Kansas City house on June 21.

T. McKnight of Cedar county, Mo., had a shipment of hogs to our Kansas City house June 21 that came within a shade of topping the market.

Henry Heiman of Mitchell county, Kan., one of the largest hog shippers in the Sunflower state, had another consignment to our Kansas City house last week.

Marlman & Kline of Bent county, Colo., who have been doing some spring feeding at Morris, Kan., sent a shipment of lambs to our Kansas City house last week.

Chas. Struve of Pierce county, Wis., was at South St. Paul with a load of cattle of his own raising and feeding and also a load of cattle for the farmers in his neighborhood.

The top of the market for sheep at Kansas City on June 20 was $5.15, obtained by our house for a string of wethers sent in from Wyandotte county, Kan., by J. D. Robinson.

On Monday our South St. Paul house sold a car of mixed cattle for A. Dunn of Edmundo county, S. D., and he expressed himself as well pleased with our work and treatment.

Guiser Bros. of Saint Croix county, Wis., were represented on the South St. Paul market with a consigment of cattle. These gentlemen are prominent in farming and feeding circles.

One of the most prominent shippers to the South St. Paul market is R. N. Mills of Wright county, Minn., and he favored our house there with a two-car consignment of hogs and sheep.

Jack Grant of Summit county, Tex., was on the Fort Worth cattle market last week with a mixed load to our house. Included were 15 calves of 157 lbsa verage which brought the top price of $6.50.

S. S. Seaton of Richland county, Ohio: "You purchased a fine load of breeding ewes for me. They have attracted much attention in this section, and should do you some good in the way of trade here."

R. B. WYATT OF RESERVE, KAN.

The above gentleman, with his sons, are among the best-known stock feeders of Kansas. On June 16 we had the pleasure of handling for them at Kansas City 17 steers, averaging 1,470 lbs, at $8.50, which topped the day's market and was also as high as any cattle had brought up to that time this year. Commenting upon this sale, Mr. Wyatt wrote our Kansas City house the following day as follows: "I want to thank you for the many sales you have made for us, and especially this last shipment of cattle. We have been consigning to Clay, Robinson & Co. for the past eight years and they have topped the market for us each year. You topped the market for us last year by 25c per cwt for the entire year up to July 20, 1909, on heavy cattle." It is a pleasure to do business for broad-gauged, appreciative parties like Mr. Wyatt.

H. McReynolds, a prominent and successful farmer and feeder of Wapello county, Ia., was on the Monday market with a load each of cattle and hogs and he said we landed his stock at exceptionally high prices, considering the bad and lower markets. He farms 420 acres of $125 land and besides prepares for market quite a number of cattle and hogs every year. "I buy my cattle through Clay, Robinson & Co. at Kansas City and sell them through Clay, Robinson & Co. at Chicago," remarked Mr. McReynolds. "Not once during the year I have been patronizing them have I had cause for complaint. They have always given me first-class service in every respect." He said prospects were fine for the corn crop in his country, but that dry weather had cut the oats crop down to only fair proportions and reduced the hay crop materially.

Last week our Denver house had the pleasure of handling for A. G. Murchy a car of hogs shipped from his ranch in Morgan county, Colo., Mr. Murchy is a well-known feeder of cattle and his home is located in Taylor county, Ia.

J. W. Boyle, for twenty-three years an extensive cattleman in Scotts Bluff county, Neb., was on the South Omaha market looking after the shipment of five cars of heavy steers.

E. T. Graham, the extensive feeder of Platte county, Neb., had four cars of his good cattle on the South Omaha market June 22 and we sold them at $7.90, averaging 1,524 lbs.

H. H. Kildee, assistant animal husbandman of Iowa State College: "We are well pleased with the prices you secured for the cattle and hogs, considering the condition of the market."

J. A. & J. Orten Finley of Knox county, Ill.: "Considering the downward market, sale of load of cattle was a good one. There was only 9 lbs shrink per head, lighter than any we ever shipped."

J. R. Clements of Ransom county, N. D., writes our South St Paul house: "Our last load of hogs shrunk only 230 lbs and we are very much pleased with the price they brought and your efforts in our behalf."

C. B. Clisby, Trumbull county, Ohio: "Received car of heifers in good condition. They are doing well. They are the kind I like. Others like your selection. I will place my order with you again next year."

On June 22 our South Omaha house handled hogs at the top price of $9.50 for R. M. Hewson, manager of the Dawson County (Neb.,) Shipping Asociation; Gembler Bros. of Seward, county Neb., and H. Weigert of Merrick, county, Neb.

Bicknell & Gemmel, noted western flockmasters, had on the Chicago market June 22 from Baker county, Ore., a string of sheep. We sold their 495 yearlings of 98 lbs average at $5.50 and 498 head of 105-lb wethers at $5.00, tops for the respective classes.

W. F. Thompson of Hall county, Neb., was represented on the South Omaha market June 21 with a car of hogs, averaging 204 lbs, which our house sold at $9.50, the top. On the same day we also sold a load of 190-lb hogs for J. S. Whisenand of Clay county, Neb., at the same price.

Charles A. Loos, a reliable and efficient engineer of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, with headquarters in Sauk county, Wis.: "Find enclosed 50c for the REPORT. I have a farm and rent it. I cannot get along without the REPORT. It has saved me a great deal of money. So send it along and keep a good thing moving."

A. J. Williamson of Harrison county, Mo.; J. H. Wintermute of Taylor county, Ia.; P. M. Anderson. of Gage county, Neb.; Lott & Walkup of Atchison county, Mo.; Hoffman & Campbell of Harlan county, Neb.; J. E. Bilby and Samuel Corrough of Nodaway county, Mo., were among the prominent shippers and feeders for whom our South St. Joseph house sold stock Tuesday of last week.

Our Denver house last week handled for W. W. Wolf of Boulder county, Colo., five cars of cattle from his feed lots at Grand Junction, Colo. These represented the tailend shipment of about 3,000 head of cattle which Mr. Wolf fed at the above point during the past season. The majority of these cattle were handled by our Denver house to Mr. Wolf's entire satisfaction.

Our South St. Joseph house was favored with hog shipments from the following successful feeders and shippers: Chas Hughes and P. M. Anderson of Gage county, Neb.; L. M. Wampler and W. J. Elliott of Andrew county, Mo.; J. G. Howard and Blair Syster of Brown county, Kan.; Henry Manville of Buchanan county, Mo.; J. R. Nair of Pawnee county, Neb.; Fuller & Bennett of Webster county, Neb.; S. D. Lance of Saline county, Neb., and S. S. Crilly of Franklin county, Neb.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

The Farmers Elevator Co. of Saint Croix county, Wis., sold a mixed car of sheep at South St. Paul.

Fred Schulte of Pierce county, Wis., sold a car of cattle and sheep through our South St. Paul house.

Our weekly patrons, Merrick Bros. of Watonwan county, Minn., had a mixed car of stock at South St. Paul.

G. C. Owens of Hickory county, Mo., had a consignment of beef steers to our Kansas City house June 20 which sold at $7.15.

Our valuable patrons and friends, Stuebe Bros. of Brown county, Minn., favored our South St. Paul house with a shipment of hogs.

Alex Scott of Pottawatomie county, Kan., an old-time patron of our Kansas City house, had a shipment of heifers on that market.

McCall Bros. and Lawrence McCall of Webster county, Neb., well known in live stock and mercantile circles, marketed cattle at Kansas City.

It was June 22 that our Sioux City house topped the hog market with 64 head, averaging 227 lbs, at $9.20 for U. E. Dawson of Osceola county, Ia.

Our St. Joseph house topped the hog market June 21 with 66 head, averaging 238 lbs, at $9.60. They belonged to Henry Williamson of Gage county, Neb.

The limit for lambs at Chicago on June 24 was $8.00, which price we secured for 46 head of 71 lbs average belonging to H. Allison of Lawrence county, Ill.

S. H. McGilliway of Mitchell county, Ia.: "This country needs rain. Pastures are dry. The hay crop is short. Small grain is good. Cattle are getting fat."

Floyd F. Hill of Wells county, Ind.: "Enclosed find 50c which was handed me by Mr. Fritz for a year's subscription. I advise all farmers to read the REPORT."

Bicknell & Gemmel had on the Chicago market June 23 from Baker county, Ore., 588 wethers of 108 lbs average which we landed at $4.65, the top by 5c per cwt for sheep.

D. J. McConnell of Redwood county, Minn., a prominent farmer and stock raiser, favored our South St. Paul house with two cars of cattle of his own raising and feeding.

The 145 yearling lambs of 68 lbs average which brought the top price of $6.40 at Chicago on June 24 were handled by us and marketed by O. A. Wright of Randolph county, Mo.

S. N. Moses of Perkins county, S. D.: "Stock is looking very well, but it is getting dry. Enclosed find 50c to renew my subscription to the REPORT. I don't want to miss a copy."

A. Dyer of Adair county, Mo., had a load of sheep and lambs at East St. Louis on June 23, and our house sold the sheep at $5.10, being 35c per cwt higher than any other sheep made.

Our South St. Joseph house topped the sheep market June 21 with two double decks of 85-lb native wethers at $5.00 for Wilcox Bros. of Redwillow county, Neb., who are heavy feeders of both cattle and sheep.

Thos. F. Payne, breeder of Duroc-Jersey hogs in Nodaway county, Mo., writes our Kansas City house: "Your letter with draft for $13.94 in settlement of railroad claim received. Many thanks for same. You certainly will get my business."

Among the shippers to our Kansas City house June 20 with consignments in the cattle quarantine division were the following well-known Oklahoma stockmen: L. D. Forrester of Haskell county, J. R. Washington of Murray county and O. C. Creilly, C. M. Claunch and R. Auldridge of Okfuskee county.

John Cameron of Audubon county, Ia.: "Considering the drop in the hog market, the price which you obtained was very satisfactory."

J. G. Crisman of Morgan conuty, Ohio: "I am much pleased with your paper, and think the market reports and forecasts for the future are the best I can get. Enclosed find $1.00 to renew my subscription for two years.

Last week our East St. Louis house obtained the extreme top price for hogs on two days in succession by selling on June 21 for D. Baker of Marion county, Mo., 88 of 159 lbs average at $9.75 and on June 22 for G. W. Shelton of Missouri 69 of 102 lbs average at $9.60.

The prominent shipper, B. W. Andrews of Nelson county, N. D., favored our South St. Paul house with a consignment of mixed stock and expressed himself as very well satisfied with our work. The shipment netted him more money than he expected.

A. E. Tye of Emmono county, N. D., a progressive farmer and sheep raiser, sold a double deck of yearling wethers and ewes through our South St. Paul house. Mr. Tye cultivates 300 acres of land and stated that there is very little stock in his section, farmers centering their attention on grain raising.

FEED LOT OF W. D. WILSON OF GRUNDY CENTER, IOWA.

Farmers Must Raise Own Feeding Cattle.

From every section in the big corn belt comes the cry, "Where can we secure the right kind of feeding cattle?" Not in years has there been such a scarcity of feeding cattle and such a general demand in proportion to the supply. Comparatively few feeders, really choice animals, are to be found on the markets. Fewer still are to be found on the farms. The farmers, have almost, if not entirely, gone out of the business of raising beef steers. The supply from the ranges has been cut down gradually, but very materially, and those of desirable quality is far below the demand.

Some farmers claim that they cannot afford to raise the steers at the price at which they have been able to secure them. They say they have been buying calves at a year old for less than $25 per head, and that they cannot raise them at that price, that it is cheaper to buy the calves. But calves of the right sort, that will make the feeder money, are harder to secure, even at $25 per head. And more than that, the scarcity is but beginning to be felt.

There is no denying that people will eat beef. They will not do without it so long as it can be secured at any figure within reason. There is no denying that this is a beef eating nation, and always will be. We have been eating beef too long to quit now. With all of the land in this country upon which cattle can be raised there will be a readjustment of conditions that will permit the nation to continue as a beef-eating nation.

And so long as farmers raise corn they can feed it to hogs and sheep. But the demand for beef is such and always will be that they must feed it to cattle. And they must feed it to cattle not only because feeding is the most profitable, but because in that way, and in that only, can they best conserve their land. More and more the corn belt farmer realizes that he must be a cattle feeder in order to dispose of his grain to the best advantage, and at the same time to give the most possible back to the soil.

Where is the solution? asks the American Hereford Journal. The farmers themselves, the men who have been feeding the range-bred steers heretofore must produce their own calves. They must raise their own feeders. No longer may they depend upon the ranchman with his thousands of acres of open or free range. The range is going. It is being cut up into small farms and the settlers are now farmers and in the same class with the corn belt feeder who is demanding the feeding cattle. The western farmers, hundreds of them now where there was formerly but one ranchman, must feed their hay and grain to cattle. Their necessities will but increase the demand for feeding cattle.

The feeding steer of the future, and most of the present, must be produced on the farm on which it is to be fed into prime beef. Corn belt farmers are beginning to realize this, but before they all know it feeding cattle will advance in price to the highest level ever known in the business. Then we will see the farmers raising their own feeders. The time is at hand, or nearly so. The feeder of the corn belt and the smaller farmer who is making his new home on what was once the western range must be cattle raisers as well as cattle feeders.

The prospects for growth in the cattle business were never brighter, and the cattle business as a whole never was on a sounder basis than at the present time.

Western Range Sheep at Chicago.

Included in the receipts this week was a fairly good proportion of western range sheep and yearlings. Nothing choice was available, the great bulk showing a lack of quality or of flesh. The packers displayed keen interest in lambs, but they gave poor support to the trade in sheep and yearlings. The drought was relieved in some sections by rains early this week, and as a result the inquiry for feeding and breeding stock has shown material improvement. If the corn belt should get a good wetting down we look for a broad outlet for this class of offerings. A fair to good class of 52-lb lambs were landed by us at $7.60, and a fair class made $7.00. We also sold 48-lb feeders at $6.60. A good grades of wethers anr yearlings went at $4.75. The wethers which brought $4.75 Monday were good and had to go at $4.60 Wednesday, while those at $4.50 Monday went at $4.40 Tuesday, with twice as many sorted out, and on Wednesday they brought $4.25 straight to feeders. A fair class of yearlings made $5.25 Monday and another cut went at $5.00 Wednesday. There were no range feeding or breeding ewes on the market this week, but on the strength of inquiries we think they would sell as quoted below.

Following shows sales of western range sheep and lambs at Chicago during the past week:

Obtained Highest Prices for Lambs this Week.

On June 28 Clay, Robinson & Co. obtained the top prices for both native and range lambs at Chicago, as well as for the week. George McFadden of West Liberty, Ia., was the owner of the 114 native lambs of 70 lbs average which we landed at $8.50, the top by 10c per cwt, and R. Hamilton of Ellenburg, Wash., was the owner of the 619 rangers of 52 lbs average which we sold at $7.60, the next highest price for rangers this week being $7 00. Also we obtained the top price of $6.60 for Mr. Hamilton's string of 48-lb feeding lambs, being 10c per cwt higher than any others made.

Yearling Cattle go Sharply Lower.

Buyers have given the yearling cattle market an awful drubbing during the past two weeks. Some of the best grades have escaped with a loss of only around 35c, but the big end of the crop have sold 50@75c lower since Monday of two weeks ago, with extreme cases where it took $1.00 to cover the decline. Conditions were decidedly against the selling interests. There was a narrower demand than usual for this time of the season and then there was heavy liquidation. Another depressing factor was that too many yearlings have been picked before they were ripe. Immatured yearlings are very hard and most uncertain sale at this time. It would be well for those who contemplate marketing yearling cattle that are not fat to hold them for better flesh, if possible.

Many are Woes of Range Sheepmen.

Advices from Rawlins, Wyo., are to the effect that flockmasters are hurrying to the mountains of Southern Wyoming and Northern Colorado with their flocks as fast as shorn, as the ranges are the driest known in years. Already a heavy loss is feared unless rain comes at once. Shearing and lambing are practically at an end. Wool is lighter on the average this year than last, owing to the severe winter, and the lamb crop is not as heavy. With no demand for wool at reasonable prices, the flockmasters are not in as cheerful mood as they might be, but they will stand pat in the hope of more favorable conditions in the near future.

Cattle Market Gets a Breathing Spell.

Materially lighter supplies than expected afforded the first ray of light Wednesday the cattle market has known for some little time. The run was 13,000, or 5,000 to 7,000 under most guesses, and the trade was fairly active at 10@15c advance on practically everything except common sorts. The top was $8.50, secured by our firm for a load of 1454-lb beeves belonging to H. B. Schwaller of Burlington, Ia. Values are anywhere from 60c@$1.00 lower than two weeks ago, but as we have had rains over a considerable area of the corn belt we believe we ought to see a more stable market. We look to see the good to choice cattle regain a goodly portion of the drop, but there will be, in our opinion, a pretty free movement of both native and western grass stuff, and we hardly look for much, if any, improvement on the ordinary killing sorts.

Buyers Hit Cow Market Hard Blow.

The annual slump in prices for cows and heifers is here in full force. It comes every year in June, and this year it was on schedule time. Buyers get their axes sharp ready for the chopping process as soon as there is sufficient excuse, and they make the excuse when the grassers start moving in liberal quantities. The cut in prices during the past three weeks has been quite severe, a large share of the supply showing a fall of $1.00@1.50 in that period, although canners and cutters do not display so much loss. An increase supply of butcher stock, coupled with grassy quality, gave buyers the opportunity they were looking for. During the past three months cow prices have been remarkably high and taking the whole range of values into consideration were never high for so long a time. The market has been fed lightly, and in such a way as to keep the prices at a high level, but now with the grassers here and more of them to come still lower prices will have to be expected.

Excellent Demand for Feeding Cattle.

There has been one of the best demands for stocker and feeding cattle this week in some time. Timely rains and the sensational break in prices last week were the causes for the much broader outlet. Of course, the trend of the market has been higher. This was only a logical sequence. The unusual happened on Monday. In the Yard dealers' division around 35 loads had been sold on country account by the noon hour, while as a rule very little business is transacted until in the afternoon. The demand was quite general, being broad from near-by and eastern states.

Different Types in Different Sections.

There are about 25,000,000 or more sheep west of the one-hundreth meridian, scatterd all over the country from Canada to Old Mexico. In three almost distinct districts are to be found different types of sheep with corresponding different forms of management. These are the southwestern plains region of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and Southern California, the inter-mountain region, comprising Colorado, Utah and adjacent territory, and the northern regions of the Dakotas, Montana, Wyoming and Idaho. The flocks vary in these sections according to the climatic and the character of the men engaged in the industry. As the range grasses increase in abundance and sweetness as you go northward, so likewise the quality of the sheep becomes better, and in the North the best sheep are found.

Initial Range Cattle of the Season.

A 17-load consignment of range grass cattle arrived at Chicago Wednesday. They were the first of the season. Barring one load to the killers at $5.65, all of the offering went on feeding account at $5.10@5.40 First arrivals last year were here July 14 and were 1,016 to 1,084-lb Wyomings at $5.00@5.45. Quality was lacking both Wednesday and last year.

Sales Wednesday follow:

Wm. Moncrieffe.. 19 Wyomings	1297	$5 65
Wm. Moncrieffe..181 Wyoming feeders	1076	5 40
Wm. Moncrieffe..241 Wyoming feeders	9$7	5 10

Late Notes on the Wool Market

At Red Bluff, Cal., a sale was held and some wools sold at 18@19c in the grease.

It is claimed that the individual clips of wool in Utah and Nevada are well cleaned up.

Advices from Texas are that there have been very few sales of wool in that state.

The sale of only 170 000 lbs of wool out of 1,000,000 lbs offered at a recent sale at Baker City shows up the situation in Oregon.

Shearing has made good progress in Montana. Little has been done in the way of sales, although some large clips have been consigned.

Most manufacturers are showing little concern over securing stocks of wool. Some have offered lower prices than have been ruling lately, but found no acceptances.

Very little is being done by wool dealers in Wyoming, barring consigning. The "going" price is 14@15c. However, advances on consignments are said to be generous.

There are those who believe that wool prices have touched bottom and others say they will go .till lower. The fact of the matter is the market is pretty much up in the air.

Some of the manufacturers have buyers in the West who are bidding a little more for wool than eastern dealers. Also there are a few Boston speculators doing the same thing.

From Boston comes word that the wool market the past week has been the duliest known, outside of panicky periods. It has been simply a sampling market, trading being mostly in odds and ends.

Recent representative sales of wool at Boston were: 5,000 lbs washed delaine, 35c; 10,000 lbs unwashed delaine, 25@26c; 25,000 lbs Michigan ¼ blood, 26@27c; 40,000 lbs Oregon, 18@20c; 385,000 lbs territory, 16@22c.

One big woolen mill in the East, which had not been in the market for some time, made quite a buy recently. This is taken as an indication that their stocks of wool have been greatly reduced and that they consider the wool worth the money at the current prices.

There seems to be more selling of wool in Idaho than any other state. Even at that the aggregate sales are small as compared with a year ago. It is reported that the "Malad" Association have sold around 700,000 lbs at 18c and the "Arimo" Association about 400,000 lbs at 15c. Other sales are reported at 14@16c.

According to the Wool and Cotton Reporter, about every wool house in Boston has samples of new wool on display. Most of them are not as desirable as a year ago. They are said to be shorter in staple, are heavier and will probably shrink more than last year's wools. This holds quite generally, except Montanas, which are as good as last year.

F. J. Hagenbarth, one of the best posted and most extensive flockmasters in the West, with headquarters at Spencer, Idaho, writes us: "Wool is coming off much lighter and cleaner than usual, although there is more or less broken staple Wool prices have sagged materially from last year, the top price for best quality ranging around 20c per pound, the bulk of wools thus far sold averaging between 17@18c."

Mangus Brown, president of the Minnesota Wool Growers' Association, announced at St. Paul that the state associations of wool growers of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Wyoming and New Mexico have formed a co-operative organization and have obtained an option on a plat at Albuquerque, N. M., where the wool of those states will be sent for manufacture. The object of the organization is to secure the highest possible prices for growers.

Tom Chittick, live stock agent of the C. M. & St. P. Ry. at Miles City, Mont., and also foreman of said company's wool warehouse at that point, writes the Report under date of June 25 as follows: "The wool question in Montana is rather quiet, to say the least. There are a number of buyers at this point, but no sales are being made. I understand there has been but one sale made in the state, being 10,000 lbs sold here last week at 16c. A few cars have been consigned and shipped through, and I should judge there is somewhere about 2,500,000 lbs in the storehouses at Miles City, and quite a number of sheep yet to be shorn."

"Buyers do not want to buy the wool outright," says a prominent Sheridan county, Wyo., flockmaster, "but they want to get consignments to their eastern houses. One or two propositions have been made for a sale at 18c, but no contracts have been made at this figure. Most all of the Sheridan county flockmasters who are stock holders in the National Wool Growers' Warehouse and Storage Co. are expecting to consign their fleeces to the eastern storage houses at Chicago, Boston and Omaha. We received from 12@13c on these consignments, according to their quality, and the remainder comes when the fleeces are sold. It is also learned that only two flockmasters are using the paper twine for tieing purposes this year, and they are separating the tags and black fleeces and confining their method as nearly as possible to the system advocated by the National Wool Warehouse and Storage Co.'s plan of perfection. They think by so doing they will receive a higher price than anybody else in the country and that the additional method will pay for wool cutting and dipping."

Do You Want Breeding or Feeding Sheep and Lambs?

From present prospects it looks as though there is going to be a good demand for all classes of feeder sheep and lambs and breeder ewes this season, and we would not be surprised to see all classes sell relatively high.

There will no doubt be a good run of western range sheep and lambs the next few weeks. At the present time we know of a string of choice Idaho yearling breeder ewes which we expect on the market about July 5. If you should be interested in these ewes, or expect to purchase feeding sheep and lambs at any time during the season, kindly let us know in order that we may keep you posted with our special market letters.

Attention, Prospective Buyers of Feeding Cattle!

This class of cattle can be bought to good advantage during July, August and September at South Omaha, Kansas City, South St. Joseph, East St. Louis, Sioux City, South St. Paul and Chicago. Offerings include desirable half-fat natives, westerns from the pastures of Oklahoma and Kansas, from the Sand Hills in Nebraska and from the ranges of Wyoming, Montana and the Dakotas. We believe that this will prove a profitable investment where feeding for the above mentioned length of time. We advise buying steers of 1,150 to 1,250 lbs average. The heavier they are the quicker they can be returned to market, and at the same time when finished sell 30 to 40c per cwt higher than if they had weighed around 900 lbs at the start of feeding. : : : : : : : :

Parties wanting such cattle to feed should place their order with Clay, Robinson & Co. at any of the above markets. Give us as much time as possible in which to make a purchase. If this is done we are not compelled to buy the stock the day we receive the order, but can wait and buy them when there is a big run and a lower market. Thus we can save the purchaser anywhere from 10 to 25c per cwt. : : : : : : : : : :

Also along in October and November well-bred thin cattle, averaging 700 to 900 lbs, can be bought to good advantage at the above mentioned markets. Late in the season they are well shrunken out and if carried along on fall pasture and stock fields, and given a little grain during January and February to keep them going ahead, they can be fed out for the May, June and July markets to good advantage. Or if this is not favorable, the cattle can be fed corn on grass for the August and September markets. : : : : :

Remember that it is not necessary for you to come to market, and incur unnecessary expenses and loss of time that are incidental to such a trip. Send us your order, tell us the class of cattle you want, etc., and we will do the rest.

Late Reports from the Western Range.

The following reports in regard to range and flock conditions out on the western ranges were received too late for publication last week with the others and we publish them this week. They follow:

IDAHO.

Fremont County—The lamb crop of Idaho this year will not be up to average, largely due to poor condition of ewes prior to lambing. Further, the range conditions are extremely dry and with the exception of a few favored localities the usual growth will not be put on this summer. So there will be a larger proportion of feeders than usual. There are very few wethers in Idaho, although there are quite a number in Montana and Southwestern Oregon. Range ewes are selling as high as ever, ranging from $4.50@6.00, according to quality.

UTAH.

Wasach county—Winter loss was 5 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 90 per cent. Shipments will be heavier than last year. We had an early spring, but no rain and it is very dry.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Perkins county—Winter losses around 12 per cent. Flocks in fine condition. Lamb crop 65 per cent. Shipments will be heavier than last year. Wool crop was not up to average.

TEXAS.

Kimble county—Average winter loss was 5 per cent. Flocks are in good condition. Lamb crop was 95 per cent. Shipments will be less than last year. Wool crop was an average. The range is in extra good condition. This county is in fine shape, there being plenty of grass and water, with sheep in fat condition.

Terrell county—Winter loss was about 5 per cent. Flocks are in pretty thin condition. Lamb crop about 65 per cent. Shipments will be considerably smaller than last year, owing to the thin condition of the flocks. Wool crop is not an average. Range is short and needs rain very badly.

Sutton county—Winter loss was 3 to 5 per cent, due principally to the ravages of wolves. Condition of flocks above the average. I had 1,100 lambs from 1,320 ewes. Shipments will be about the same as last year. Wool crop is an average. Range is in good shape.

Edwards county—Sheep are in very fine condition. Lamb crop was 95 per cent. Wool crop will be above average, as we have no scab; range is in good condition, having had lots of rain.

NEW MEXICO.

Chaves county—Winter loss was 10 to 15 per cent. Condition of flocks poor to fair. Lamb crop percentage about 50. Shipments will be about the same as a year agoargerwYisa.l M. kfA about the same as last year. Wool crop is not up to the average. The range is very dry up to date, we having had no rain since last August.

ARIZONA.

Navajo county—Winter loss 5 per cent. Flocks are in good condition. Lamb crop 80 per cent. Shipments will be about the same as last year. Wool crop above the average. Range is in fair condition, but is getting dry and rain is needed badly.

Coconio county—Winter loss 15 per cent. Condition of flocks is improving. Wool crop best in years. Lamb crop 65 to 70 per cent. Shipments will be less than last year. Range is very dry.

WYOMING.

Crook county—Winter loss was about 25 per cent. Green grass six weeks earlier than usual and consequently sheep are in much better condition than usual at this time of the year, being at least a month ahead of average years. Lamb crop was about 50 per cent, possibly a little under that figure. Shipments will be heavier than last year, as we held nearly everything over last year. While the wool is clean, the clip will be 10 to 15 per cent short. The range is good so far, but getting dry, with rains needed badly.

Carbon county—Winter loss about 25 per cent. Condition of flocks good. Shipments will be about same as last year. Wool crop up to average of previous year. While the range is very dry, feed is fair.

Big Horn county—Winter loss 35 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 60 per cent. Shipments will be less than last year. Wool crop not up to average. Range in good shape.

MONTANA.

Billings county—Winter loss only normal. Condition of flocks good. Lamb crop 90 per cent. The movement marketward depends upon prices. Wool crop up to average. Range very dry in places.

Rosebud county—Winter loss 5 to 10 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Wool crop up to average. Range is very dry.

Rosebud county—Winter loss 5 to 10 per cent. Flocks in good condition. Lamb crop 50 per cent. Range in fair shape, but getting dry. The wool crop east and south of Miles City will be poor and north of there first class.

ARIZONA.

Maricopa county—Winter loss was practically nothing. Flocks are in good condition. Lamb crop 77 per cent. Shipments will be about the same as last year. Wool crop is an average. Condition of the range is good.

COLORADO.

Las Animas county—Winter loss was 10 per cent, which is a little more than minimum from year to year. Flocks are pretty good as to flesh and wool. Lamb crop percentage about 75. Practically 90 per cent of all lambs born have been saved, but, owing to severe weather during the breeding season, many ewes were not bred. Shipmnts from Southern Colorado and Northern Mexico will be decidedly less than last year. Wool crop very good as to staple, etc. In Southern Colorado early spring conditions were pretty good, with timely rains. Portions of New Mexico had timely rains, although large parts are decidedly drought stricken. Northern New Mexico generally in first class condition, with the central and southern portions absolutely dry, although this condition was helped in spots by local rains.

WYOMING.

Sweetwater county—Wyoming will not average a 50 per cent lamb crop.

Converse county—Winter loss was 40 per cent. Condition of flocks somewhat poor. Lamb crop percentage 50. Shipments will be less than last year. Wool crop was not up to average. Range is exceedingly dry and grass has been burned up. Rain is needed badly. It is dryer than I ever saw it in the nine years I have been in Wyoming.

Natrona county—Winter loss was 30 per cent. Flocks are in very good condition. Lamb crop 50 to 60 per cent. Shipments will be less than last year. Wool crop 1½ lbs per head short of last year, although the fiber is strong and very clean. Grass is good at present, but getting very dry. There is much need of rain.

Montana Wool Growers are Bullish.

According to reports from Montana flockmasters, the wool crop is going to be satisfactory both in weight and quality, despite the fact that the winter was unusually severe. It is believed the amount shipped out of Montana will be fully as large as that of last season, but whether the price received will be as great remain to be seen, for virtually no sales have been recorded up to the present time. A number of wool buyers are in the field sizing up the situation and the prices offered are considerably lower than those of last year, so that growers are inclined to hold back and enter into no contracts and give no options. The sheepmen declare that there is every reason why, from their standpoint, they should receive prices at least equally as favorable as those which have prevailed for the last two seasons. The wool is up to the standard in quality, and they were compelled to stand a much heavier expense of feeding last winter than formerly.

A Garden Ship

Not so long ago there arrived at a Pacific port a ship from Belfast, Ireland, after a voyage that was in one respect remarkable. It appears that this vessel's ballast consisted of about two thousand tons of Irish soil. This, when leveled off, made a pretty good-sized garden patch, and the crew, with commendable thrift, took it into their heads to improve it.

They planted a good stock of garden truck—cabbages, leeks, turnips, radishes, peas, beans, lettuce, and other things. These came up in due course, and flourished admirably, especially while the ship was in the tropics, and the men had fresh "garden sass" to their heart's content.

As they rounded Cape Horn they replanted the garden, and by the time they reached the equator everything was again green and the table well supplied.

The two drawbacks were the weeds, which grew apace, and the inroads of the ship's drove of pigs, which were kept in the "farmyard attachment," and which, on several occasions, when the ship was rolling heavily, broke out of bounds and of course did their best to obtain their share of the garden truck.

The last pig was killed and served with green vegetables just before the vessel entered the port on the Pacific. On the arrival of the ship the sod was taken to its destination, ready to be used again for terrestrial gardening.—Harpers Weekly.

Kansas City Live Stock History.

The Kansas City Times of June 4, 1870, had to say of one of the great industries of that place:

"There are a few people who appreciate the number of cattle that are received and shipped from this point. That portion of the city from which the trade is carried on is over in the bottoms, near the state line. There are on the average from 4,000 to 10,000 cattle received and shipped monthly. They have hitherto been received from Abilene. Hereafter, no doubt, Baxter Springs will be a great forwarding point."

Four to ten thousand a month meant a right smart business in those days. Even the most hopeful of the pioneers could not have forseen the enormous increase in business that fetches 180,000 cattle a month to the Stock Yards at this time of year, 6,000 a day, as many in a day as were received in a month in those piping times when Baxter Springs was regarded as the coming center of the cattle businesss.

In the '70s every family expected to raise its own ham and bacon and there was no market in Kansas City for hogs and sheep. The 4,000 to 10,000 cattle a month represented the entire receipts of animals. Now, counting sheep and hogs, as well as cattle, the receipts run about 20,000 a day—a three months' business for 1870. Something of a change, even for forty years.

This Calf Meal will be eagerly bought at $75.00 to $80.00 per ton when its merits become known.

RECOMMENDED BY AGRICULTURAL COLLEGES.

This calf meal is made from a formula recommended by an agricultural college and is made from ingredients which are recommended by nearly every agricultural college in the land for calves, pigs, lambs, or any young animals at the milk age. The reason you cannot make a substitute for milk out of home-grown feed or mill feed is because the young animals cannot digest starch, and when these are fed or mixed with skim milk it will generally cause indigestion and scours. In the manufacture of Smith's calf meal the starch is changed to a form of dextrose that is easily digested by young animals. It will prevent scouring and keep the calves and pigs in a fat growing condition.

WEANS PIGS IN LESS THAN TWO MONTHS.

We print herewith a letter from F. H. Smith, farmer and feeder of Somerset township, Hillsdale county, Michigan:

George B. Smith & Company,
842 Exchange Avenue,
Union Stock Yards, Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

I have had so much success with your calf meal that I have purchased a number of calves in this neighborhood besides those of my own raising. These calves were three or four days old on an average when I brought them home and I fed them milk for a few days, gradually changing them to calf meal. They are all good thrifty calves, and some of them I expect to sell for veal.

Last November one of my Duroc-Jersey sows had a litter of seventeen pigs, a very large litter to be raised in winter. I at once partitioned off one corner of the pen and fixed a small trough so that the little pigs could crawl through the partition and eat a warm slop which I made from the calf meal. This was kept before them until they were old enough to be fed the calf meal regularly, when they would all scurry through the partition at feeding time and clean up their feed like older hogs. These pigs actually weaned themselves before they were two months old. They liked the calf meal better than their mother's milk, and they thrived better after weaning than before. I would not take $300.00 for the seventeen shoats today. I figure that $50 would cover the cost of the calf meal and what other feed I have given them to date.

In feeding calves I use the calf meal mixed with cottonseed meal or blood flour dry mixed with oats and cold pressed cottonseed cake, giving them plenty of water to drink. As soon as they will eat the dry feed readily I prefer to feed them that way entirely, as I think they do better on the dry feed than they do when it is mixed in their drink.

For pigs I use the calf meal mixed with tankage, as a slop.

Yours truly,
F. H. SMITH,
Somerset, Michigan.

COTTON SEED MEAL FOR CALVES.

R. B. G., Indiana.—Is cotton seed meal a good feed for calves?

Ans.—There is a difference of opinion. Some prefer linseed meal. We are selling cotton seed meal to manufacturers of the best grades of calf meals, from which we infer that it is a good feed. However, we do not use cotton seed meal in our own preparation which is listed in the Feed Stuff Market of the Live Stock Report as our calf meal is used for feeding large litters of pigs. In that case linseed meal or feeding tankage would be better by far for them than cottonseed meal. Besides, our calf meal is used extensively with skim milk, in which case no protein supplement is necessary at all, as it is contained in the milk. We used cold pressed cotton seed cake last winter, mixed with the dry calf meal for our young calves, with the best results we ever obtained from any seed for calves less than six months old.

Blood flour is also used for protein and a sack should be kept on hand as a tablespoonful mixed in the feed will cure a case of scours. On the other hand, linseed meal is a trifle laxative. Where each is used as needed and the calves are watched closely there will be no trouble either from scours or binding up, and the calves can be kept in a thrifty, growing condition at all times.

CALF RAISING.

G. S. F., Indiana: "Please send me information about raising thrifty calves without milk."

Answer: In a "nut shell," keep from feeding starchy feeds until they are 5 or 6 minths old. There is no starch in milk and the stomach of the young calf does not become fully adjusted to digest starchy feeds before the calf is 6 or 8 months old. During this time a change is gradually taking place and the grain ration may be increased. At Glenwood farm we have a bunch of 20 spring calves on dry feed, i. e., we have taken away their liquid food, giving them nothing but water to drink. They are all thrifty and doing better as a whole than calves formerly raised on a ration of skim milk continuing during the summer months.

Their dry feed consists of one-half oats, one-tenth cold pressed cottonseed cake and two-fifths calf meal. The calf meal is prepared by parching the grain which converts the starch into grape sugar. Toasted bread is an illustration. Grape sugar or dextrine is soluble and easily digested. That is why a physician will recommend toasted bread for a person with a weak stomach.

It is best to feed the young calf 2 or 3 quarts of milk to a feed for two weeks from birth. After the calf is a week old the milk can be diluted with warm water mixed with calf meal and linseed meal or blood flour, 6 parts calf meal to 4 parts linseed meal, dividing a cupful of the mixture between 4 calves.

The calf meal is of light, bulky character, but dissolves readily in warm water, as it contains no fiber. We first began grinding the calf meal but found that in the absence of starch granules it dissolved as readily without grinding and is much more preferrable as a dry feed than the fine ground meal, as it keeps the animal from bolting it down without mastication, producing some action of the saliva glands before swallowing.

The calf can be taught to eat dry meal by putting some in the bucket after the feed.

Vol 20 | Chicago, Friday. July 8. 1910 | No 27

Range Conditions in Montana are Spotted.

Chas. H. Green of the Green Cattle Co., Fort Benton, Mont., writes under date of June 28: "Range and stock conditions from Great Falls along the Great Northern Railroad to Dakota are very bad. We have had no moisture and so have no feed. Most of the stock owned by members of our association are not in this locality, but are where they have plenty of moisture and feed is good. They are in fine condition. The calf crop will be heavy. Every dry animal will be in good flesh and condition for market. Most of us expect to ship all fat steers, even quite a lot of short ages, also cows that are dry, including two-year-olds. We expect to hold cows and calves, as well as yearling heifers, unless there is good demand. "Some of the new settlers on dry land farms are discouraged. Crops of grain along the Great Northern here have burned beyond recovery. Those who are prepared to hang on for a year, I think, are sure to win out. Any country that has produced grass for thirty years to make as much beef as has been made on these bench lands will, with proper tilling and working, produce grain and vegetable matter to build many fine homes. It may take a few years to accomplish this, but it is sure to come. I only hope there will not be a lot of poor people to suffer in the meantime. Water is scarce for these people, and it costs a lot of money to get deep wells or reservoirs, and all their fuel must be shipped by rail and hauled on wagons for long distances, making it very expensive. Hay is worth $20 per ton now and will be much higher. And all of these people must buy buy for their work and dairy stock.

"These new people in this country have about put the old-time stockman out of business. It looks as though we will have to help them out or see them suffer. And no one ever goes hungry here.

"Well, I see you are still getting good prices for cattle. I hope they will continue. We expect to start you quite a bunch in thirty days and keep the road hot from that on."

IOWA-FED BEEVES WHICH TOPPED THE WEEK'S TRADE AT CHICAGO BY 10c PER CWT.

These cattle were sold at Chicago by Clay, Robinson & Co. at $8.50 on Wednesday, June 29. This price was 10c per cwt higher than any other cattle brought that week. They were fed and marketed by H. B. Schwaller of Burlington, Ia. There was 16 head in the lot and they averaged 1,454 lbs. They were grade Herefords, of good quality and fat. This was Mr. Schwaller's initial shipment to Clay, Robinson & Co. and he expressed his gratification with the service and the price they brought. He is one of the leading farmers and feeders of the Hawkeye state. He resides in Burlington, but keeps in close touch with his farming and feeding operations. Mr. Schwaller appears in the above picture at the left with his hat in hand. His bright son, who took a keen interest in the way business is conducted at the Stock Yards, appears on horseback at the right in the picture.

Big Fall in Hog Run First Six Months.

[illegible] in the half-year hog supply as compared with the same period of 1908 and 1909 is indicated by a compilation showing approximate aggregate arrivals at the eleven principal markets, January to June, inclusive, for the three years. Arrivals at Chicago, Kansas City, South Omaha, East St. Louis, South St. Joseph, Sioux City, East St. Paul, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Buffalo and Pittsburg for the half year just closed unofficially are 10,330,000, against 13,160,000 last year and 15,470,000 in 1908. Minor markets show proportionate losses. Chicago's decrease, 93,810, compared with 1909, is the heaviest. Kansas City's deficiency is 500,000. Fort Worth, Tex., which is not included in this compilation, reports a decrease of 141,000.

More cattle reached the principal Western markets during the half year just closed than in the first six months of 1909, but the sheep run was lighter. Chicago gained 56,000 cattle, but Kansas City lost 67,000, thus reversing last year's conditions. Aggregate receipts of cattle, hogs and sheep at the five major markets—Chicago, Kansas City, South Omaha, East St. Louis and South St. Joseph—for the half year, with comparisons, follow:

	Cattle.	Hogs.	Sheep.
1910	3,314,000	6,955,000	3,626,000
1909	3,239,000	9,238,000	3,817,000
Gain	75,000	.....	.....
Loss	.....	2,283,000	191,000

J. Ogden Armour is an Optimist.

J. Ogden Armour is an optimist on the general financial situation and believes there will be no break in the tenor of prosperity. Upon his return from Europe he expressed the opinion that King Edward's death exerted no influence on European finance, and he said the plentitude of money on this side of the Atlantic presaged the absence of sensational changes in the business situation, the outlook for which he considers favorable.

Concerning the high cost of living, Mr. Armour said: "As long as existing conditions prevail, high prices are bound to exist. Packers do not make prices, and when the public rails against the packers because of high prices, it does so without cause. If bountiful crops are harvested this year, lower prices may be hoped for, while, if the crops of wheat, corn and oats are short, the supply of hogs, cattle and sheep will be affected. Lower prices mean correspondingly greater profits for the packers, and as long as we are obliged to pay exorbitant prices for live stock, the prices of products cannot be reduced.

"Exports of meats from this country to Europe are on a decline. The plains of South America furnish conditions for the prolific and cheap raising of cattle that obtained in our Western country many years ago, and Argentina, where the facilities are excellent for raising live stock cheaply, is furnishing the meat Europe requires. The quality is not equal to American beef, but meat is food and that is what Europe requires."

Corn Crop Makes Wonderful Progress.

The growing corn crop has made wonderful progress the last three weeks, warm weather and clear skies having given the plant a big boost in all sections. Rains came opportunely over a large area, and in no section is there any actual suffering from lack of moisture, but from a market standpoint futures are now in the shadow of a possible hot spell which may become serious.

The number of feeding cattle, hogs and sheep in the country is steadily increasing and by next fall it is expected the supply will be enough larger than a year ago to make an appreciable difference in the feeding requirements. To accentuate this phase of the situation the hay crop is practically a failure in many sections, especially in the northern half of the country, and the outlook for forage crops in general is far from good. These two factors will be big price makers in the next few months.

At the moment the market is almost entirely a weather proposition with general rains a needed element in the near future. Snow's figures on the crop indicate a yield on present conditions of 2,877,000,000 bushels, or about 100,000,000 bushels less than a final estimate of a year ago. He made the acreage about 104,000,000 acres. Other estimates are as high as 3,000,000,000 bushels, and it is expected the Government report will be moderately bearish on reports.

Colonel Pryor on the Cattle Situation.

In regard to the recent break in the cattle market, Colonel L. T. Pryor, the famous Texas cattleman, says: "No man has ever been able to correctly forecast the price of cattle when the busy season is on. The present trend of prices is perhaps not so surprising as it is disappointing, and I find in the present receipts at the markets a verification of my prediction, made at the Fort Worth convention last spring, that the country still had plenty of cattle, though a shortage was in sight. One bad feature in the situation now is that Kansas still has a large number of steers that were brought through the winter in good shape and should have been marketed a month ago.

"The news comes also that grassers from the Northwestern ranges will be coming to market from four to six weeks earlier than they did last year. However, if it is true that Oklahoma has fewer cattle than last year, I am not prepared to say that the shipper need abandon hope of a reasonably prosperous year. Regulating the supply would be the most efficacious means of securing fair prices, and a more even distribution throughout the five market days of the week would prove another strong weapon in the hands of the shipper in bringing about the desired end."

New Postoffice Ruling for South Omaha.

When communicating with our house at South Omaha our patrons are requested to address their communications to "Clay, Robinson & Co., Stock Yards Station, South Omaha, Neb." Effective with July 1 the postoffice department will require postal clerks to make special pouches for all mail addressed to the Stock Yards Station, South Omaha, and such pouches will be transported directly from trains to the Stock Yards Station. Mail addressed as heretofore, South Omaha, Neb., or Union Stock Yards, South Omaha, will have to go through the South Omaha postoffice, thus losing considerable time before it can be delivered to the Yards.

England Imports Much Less Meat.

For the fifth month in succession the Board of Trade of England returns show a blank in the column for imports of sheep into that country. Cattle have continued to fall off, the number for the first five months of this year being only 76,773, against 111,857 for the like period of 1909 and 155,757 for that of 1908. Beef shows a small increase and mutton a considerable decrease. Bacon and hams have also fallen off, and the total for dressed meat imported in the five months comes out at 7,661,141 cwt, compared with 8,395,691 cwt for the first five months of last year.

Drought in North Dakota is Broken.

G. R. Wannemacher, prominent wool grower and real estate dealer of Dickinson, N. D., writes under date of July 1: "In the vicinity of Dickinson for fifty to sixty miles around there has not been much suffering on account of dry weather. The grass is fairly good and rains came just at the right time. Within the last few days there have been abundant rains from Billings, Mont., east to Bismarck and more or less over North Dakota. The drouth appears to be broken. Stock will do well from now on."

A Tale of Russian Wolves.

A man was telling about an exciting experience in Russia. His sleigh was pursued over the frozen wastes by a pack of at least a dozen famished wolves. He arose and shot the foremost one, and the others stopped to devour it. But they soon caught up with him, and he shot another, which was in turn devoured. This was repeated until the last famished wolf was almost upon him with yearning jaws, when—

"Say, partner," broke in one of the listeners, "according to your reckoning, that last famished wolf must have had the other eleven inside of him."

"Well, come to think it over," said the story teller, "maybe he wasn't so darned famished, after all!"—Everybody's Magazine.

Notes From Belle Fourche, S. D.

This is Independence Day, but at the ranch things are quiet. The boys are on the round-up, and the grangers who put up a little dab of hay went away last night. This country is dry, in fact, very dry, and if it had not been for a good shower on Friday night (July 1) it would be brown as a berry. A hot south wind has been blowing across these plains for over two weeks. Yesterday the thermometer registered 92 degrees; this morning at 7:00 a. m. it was 82 degrees. The dry farmer is shrivelled up, and the rangeman who depended upon wild hay will be more or less out of business. It is just one of those seasons that come along periodically and remind you that the seasons have not changed, that the eternal laws of nature are the same as of yore.

The stockman is looking forward to winter, and, having the memory of the past one in his mind, he is preparing. The cattleman will need to ship close; he cannot take any risks. Nor can the sheepman, but he can provide against winter loss by corn. Last winter proved that. Two or three ounces of corn per day had a wonderful effect in keeping life in range sheep. This fall corn will need to be brought by the trainload and stored near the sheep herds of the West, against winter snows. It is insurance. The banker will treat it in this light. But you have to take time by the forelock and ship in, haul and store when the roads are good.

The man with the hoe is getting the laugh this season on his neighbor. His green fields tell of prosperity, as against the shrivelling grain and the dried-up alfalfa patches of the man above the ditch.

VVV Ranch, Belle Fourche, S. D., July 4.

Big Sum for Land and Autos.

According to information compiled by Graham G. Lacey, a banker of St. Joseph, Mo., who has obtained replies to a series of questions addressed to more than 600 bankers in Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri and Iowa, $15,000,000 has been spent for autos and $18,000,000 for land.

Reports from 251 banks showed that approximately $18,000,000 had gone out of their section for the purchase of lands in other states and 234 banks reported that a heavy amount had gone out of their section for such purpose, but they could not give an exact estimate. For autos, 427 banks report that a total of $15,000,000 had been spent.

Fifty-one per cent reported that the banks were carrying more real estate loans for their customers at this time than they were carrying a year ago.

Montana Shipments will Start Aug. 15.

J. L. DeHart of Great Falls, Mont., writes under date of June 28: "We are experiencing very hot, dry weather. The hay crop is going to be very short. However, in some localities feed is good and shipments will likely commence about Aug. 15." Mr. DeHart is of the opinion that the wool buyer is making a price that would compel the producer to carry the burden until after the election.

A Scotchman's Test.

Asa Goddard of the American Automobile Association was recounting in Worcester some of his touring adventures.

"One summer morning," he said, "the approach of a great flock of sheep obliged me to pull off the narrow country road. I halted my car and watched with interest the passage of the sheep, the intelligent dogs and the shepherd. I had a short talk with the shepherd about his odd and difficult trade.

"'Look here,' I said, 'what do you do, driving sheep on a narrow road, when you meet another flock coming from the opposite direction?'

"'Well,' said the shepherd, 'ye just drive straight on, both of ye, and the one that has the best dog gets the most sheep.'"

Feeder Cannot Specialize Much Longer.

It is good business for the man who can finish livestock to let the other fellows raise it just as long as they can do it cheaper than he can. But this policy has been carried entirely too far in a large part of our country. Too many people have got used to depending on the West for stock to feed, and among them are many on grazing lands which are better adapted to raising stock than to finishing it. The farmers should get back into the stock business without delay. They can raise cattle and sheep cheaper than the grain farmer can, and they can raise them at a profit if they have to sell to him for feeding purposes. The day of cheap feeding stock has passed. Well-bred animals will pay for their hay and grass if sold at feeder prices, and the prospects are that they will continue to do so.—National Stockman and Farmer.

C. E. PROCTER, OF ALEXANDRIA, S. D.

We are pleased to reproduce this picture of this representative family. Mr. Procter has been a liberal and consistent patron of Clay, Robinson & Co. during the past three years. He has lived in South Dakota about a year, his former home being in Whiteside county, Ill. He has 400 acres of fine land which is now worth $80 per acre, against $40 per acre four years ago. He raises corn, wheat, oats, clover hay and alfalfa. He has 210 acres of farm land and says that just as good corn can be raised there as in most parts of the Middle West. Mr. Procter feeds from six to ten loads of cattle and raises and feeds 100 Poland-China hogs annually.

The Hog in Ancient Times.

By some of the ancient nations the hog was considered a sacred animal. By others it was regarded as unclean, and prohibited as food. This prohibition among the Jews was regarded by Tacitus and others as having been because of a feeling that pork was often unfit to eat in warm climates, and apt to encourage the spread of leprosy. Moses is thought to have forbidden the eating of pork because it was liable to give the Israelites diseases that would make them unable to endure the long march out of Egypt. In those days, when cooking was crudely done, there was no doubt much reason to fear trichina.

St. Louis Pushing to The Front.

Here are some figures which speak for themselves. During the first half of 1909 Clay, Robinson & Co. handled at East St. Louis a total of 941 cars of stock. During the first half of 1910 they handled a total of 1684 cars, showing a gain over last year of 743 cars, or 79 per cent. When you consider that our East St. Louis branch was opened only seventeen months ago, this showing is little short of phenomenal, and speaks eloquently of "sales that suit, and service that satisfies." If you ship to East St. Louis, consign to Clay, Robinson & Co. and you will understand why their business has grown so rapidly.

Should Arrange to Exhibit at Show.

The territory of the Northwestern Live Stock Show and the Northwestern Corn and Grain Show, which will be held at South St. Paul on Nov. 15 to 18, is limited to the states of Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Washington and Idaho and that part of South Dakota lying west of the Missouri River, also that portion lying north of the southern boundary of Moody, Lake, Miner, Sanborn, Jerauld and Buffalo counties, and in Wisconsin is included that portion of the state lying north of the southern boundary of the counties of LaCrosse, Monroe, Juncau, Adams, Marquette, Green Lake, Fondulac and Sheboygan counties. The exhibitors at county fairs in this territory will without doubt be encouraged to show larger numbers of market types of animals at the local fairs because the same animals can be entered in the Northwestern Live Stock Show. Heretofore the exhibits at local fairs have been made up principally of breeding stock because there was not a fat stock and feeder show near at hand to furnish additional opportunities for the exhibitors.

The Northwestern Live Stock Show supplies that need and exhibitors will find a ready market for their stock right on the show grounds at the close of the show. The exhibitors also have the privilage of entering single animals in the carcass contest which affords additional opportunity for winning liberal prizes and disposing of the carcass at its market value. These advantages will be appreciated by the farmers and feeders in the territory of the show, and will operate to stimulate the number of entries at local fairs.

The Corn and Grain Show carries an attractive offer for "county exhibits," which shall consist of a display of grains, grasses and fodders by any county in the show territory. Exhibits in this class will be governed by the following conditions:

Grains must be grown in 1910, not less than 10 nor more than 20 named varieties, two quarts each. Corn in sheaf must be of this year's growth, not less than 10 nor more than 20 named varieties. Corn must be shown in the ear. Native grasses, not less than 12 correctly named varieties. Tame grasses and clovers, including alfalfa, not less than 10 correctly named varieties. The exhibit may also include millet, rape, sorghum, fodder corn, vetches, and other varieties of forage. Potatoes for stock feeding and field roots up to 12 varieties in all.

The prizes to be awarded for these exhibits are: First, $100; second, $50; third $25; fourth $25. The advertising feature for the county represented is, of course, the chief consideration, although the prizes in themselves make it worth while for exhibitors to enter.

Notes From Hyannis, Neb.

The Sand Hills of Nebraska are enjoying a period of great prosperity, grass is excellent, hay promises a big crop and cattle are very forward in condition. After leaving dry pastures round about Omaha it is pleasant to wake up and look out upon the greensward in the vicinity of Broken Bow. The Loup River winds through a lot of splendid meadows and everywhere you see green grass over hill and dale. The drought that has been so hard in other sections of the country is conspicuous by its absence here. Last night (June 29) they had a heavy rain all over this section and so far as feed is concerned it is assured. Shipments of cattle will be ahead of last year.—J. C.

NATIVE BEEF STEERS.

Receipts Thursday of last week, 4,627. Strong demand prevailed for all kinds of good offerings. Receipts were smaller than expected and prices were generally 10c higher. Common offerings did not share in the advance. Top was $8.25, paid for three lots, averaging 1,432 to 1,433 lbs. Marketing Friday, 2,009. Very few good corn-fed steers were offered and the common kinds did not meet with favor. General market, however, was steady. Distillers constituted about all the desirable offerings on sale, with 101 head of 1,436 lbs average topping at $8.25. There were about 300 Texans direct to packers. The week closed with good to choice steers strong to 10c higher than finish of the previous week and the medium to good kinds generally steady. Common and light grassy lots, however, showed 10@20c loss.

Monday of this week was a holiday at the Yards, owing to the Fourth falling on that day. Total marketing Tuesday was only 10,231. Prices ruled steady to 10c higher, the best grades showing the strength. Best beeves offered were 50 head of 1,567-lb distillers which went at $8.55. This is the highest price they have ever brought here by 5c per cwt. Best corn-fed steers went at $8.50 and bulk of trading was at $6.50@8.15. Close to 30 cars of Texas cattle were on the market and sold at $5.20@7.00, with fed steers and grassers down to $4.50.

Marketing Wednesday 15,000. Buyers refused to boost rates and the selling interests had to content themselves with steady prices. Top was $8.60, paid for 16 head of 1,502-lb offerings

COWS AND HEIFERS.

Last week the market was in good condition for all that graded good and above the grassy line. The break of early in the week was repaired and at the close prices for the good kinds were stronger. Grassy stuff continued relatively hard to sell, although such are not especially low for this time of the year.

Generally speaking, there was no improvement to be noted in the market on the first market day of this week, which was Tuesday. It is true that supplies were greatly reduced, but packers were determined from the outset not to pay a higher price. Demand was centered on the good to choice offerings.

There was a moderate run for Wednesday and buyers showed hunger for the offerings at generally 15c higher prices. Canners and cutters steady.

BULLS.

The week closed with the trade on a stronger basis, the break of early in the week being repaired.

On the first market day of this week, which was Tuesday, the trade was slow and prices no more than steady. Buyers were very bearish on bolognas.

There was a good demand on Wednesday and the trade ruled active at 10c higher prices.

CALVES.

The demand last week was not as strong as usual, due likely to the hot weather, and buyers forced a decline of 50@75c during the first half of the week, although most of the loss was regained later on.

Prices were generally 25c higher on the first market day of this week, which was Tuesday, and selected lights landed up to $8.50. The supply was very small.

There was fairly good life in the market on Wednesday, although prices were not quotably higher.

STOCKERS AND FEEDERS.

General demand last week was very good. Values at the finish were 15@25c higher than the close of the previous week. The better grades showed most advance. Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Pennsylvania buyers book a big share of the offerings, although Illinois feeders were also liberal buyers. As long as the pastures are good east of Chicago the outlet will likely prove broad at current prices.

There was a very good demand on the first market day of this week, which was Tuesday, both local and outside buyers seeming to be anxious for the offerings. Prices were on a strong basis and the light supply was cleaned up in short time. Good rains in most of the territory east of Chicago has stipulated the demand considerably.

There was another good demand for stockers and feeders Wednesday and there was firm undertone to the market.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for stocker and feeding cattle:

Hogs.

Run Thursday of last week, 14,303. There were two different kinds of a market. Light and light butchers sold 10@15c higher, but the good heavy, heavy mixed and heavy packing did not sell better than steady with the previous day's general prices. Top was $9.55. Early a lot of $9.35@9.45 trade was done in light and light butchers. When buyers of these classes got through it was mainly a $9.15@9.30 basis for good heavy and decent qualities mixed, with $9.25@9.30 taking medium mixed butchers. The close was very mean and in many instances re-sold hogs showed 15c decline from first cost. Marketing Friday, 11,336. Opening 10@15c lower on desirable grades, the market became even worse on other kinds. A $9.45 top was made, but $9.00@9.20 bought a lot of good heavy and medium mixed. Armour bought a drove of good mixed at $9.10 late in the session. Straight loads of heavy packers were in the $8.50 notch. Trade in weighty stuff was badly demoralized. Supply Saturday, 8,123. The market was 10c lower than the general trade of the previous day. The practicable top was $9.25. Light and light butchers sold at $9.15@9.25 and light mixed at $9.00@9.15. Straight loads of heavy mixed had to go at $8.80@8.90 and heavy packers in straight loads at $8.50@8.80, according to quality. Heavy butchers sold largely at $9.00@9.15. Prices were generally 40@50c lower than Saturday of the previous week, with heavy offerings showing most decline.

Only 15,152 hogs arrived the first market day of this week, which was Tuesday, the Yards being closed on Monday, owing to the Fourth falling on that day. Opening 10@15c higher, the market closed dull and 5@10c under the opening. A top of $9.50 was made on a load of fancy 185 pounders. The bulk sold at $9.00@9.30, outside of light stuff, which was very scarce and brought mostly $9.35@9.45. The bad break in the provision market offset the light run and 6,500 head were left at the finish.

Supply Wednesday 10,000. Opening 5@10c higher, market closed 15c under start. Top $9.60 and bulk $9.10@9.50.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of hogs:

Sheep and Lambs.

On Thursday of last week the run was 12,219. It was generally a firm deal. Supply was light and the demand fairly good. Included were 13 loads of Western grass sheep and yearlings. The practicable top for lambs was $8.40, with a good class of native yearlings at $5.50. Idaho yearlings brought $5.00 on feeding account. Handy weight Idaho wethers sold up to $4.60, with strong weights at $4.50 and the feeders at $4.00. Native ewes went largely at $4.00@4.25. Friday run 10,454. Another active market at strong prices. Only three loads of Western grass sheep were received. These were Idaho wethers at $4.50. Pinnacle for lambs was $8.50. During the week 57 carloads of Western range sheep and yearlings and 23 loads of lambs were marketed, which is believed to be the largest number of Western grass offerings ever received here in any week in June. As compared with the close of the previous week, sheep and yearlings sold on a firm basis, while the better grades of lambs advanced 35@50c and other kinds 15@25c.

Marketing was only 13,699 on the first market day of this week, which was Tuesday, the Yards being closed on Monday owing to the Fourth falling on that day. The market was active from the outset at prices 15@25c higher, most of the arrivals showing 25c gain. However, after the most urgent orders had been filled the lamb trade closed with some weakness apparent. Native lambs topped at $8.60 and Washington rangers brought $8.00. Oregon yearlings went at $5.35, although fed-western yearlings sold up to $6.00. Range wethers landed at $4.50@4.75, with some two-year-old Idaho ewes at $4.65. The limit for native ewes was $4.50.

The Wednesday supply was 20,000. It was a dull, sticky deal from start to finish. While both yearlings and sheep of a choice class sold steady, other kinds went 10@15c lower. Lambs were mostly 25c lower. Top lambs brought $8.35 and best sheep $4.75.

East St. Louis Markets.

[Special telegram from Clay, Robinson & Co.]

National Stock Yards, Ill., July 5.—Receipts were quite liberal today. Market opened steady with last week's close and the finish showed 10c decline. Barring the six head 1,508 lbs average at $8.10, the top was $7.75. Best heifers stronger sale and generally steady for other kinds. Cow market dull and weak. Calves and bulls steady. Prices for stockers and feeders unchanged. There was a fairly liberal run of southern cattle, the bulk of which were steers. Market was active at prices 10@15c higher. Best steers made $5.75.

Heavy hogs were but little better sale than Saturday, while other kinds went 10c higher. Top was $9.65, paid for lights. Most of the good mixed lots brought $9.30@9.50 and heavy $9.00@9.20.

Trade in sheep and lambs opened fairly active on the good fat offerings at prices steady to strong with last week's close, but such as lacked desirable flesh were poor sellers at barely steady rates. However, the market closed 15@25c lower than the opening on all grades. Top lambs $8.00 and sheep went at $4.25@4.35. Bucks in main around $3.00.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

W. E. Hammans of Larimar county, Colo., marketed a car of cattle at Denver.

Our South St. Paul house sold a car of hogs for C. L. Prince of Walsh county, N. D.

Ira Rogers of Lenawee county, Mich., writes: "Pastures are very short in this locality."

We sold a shipment of cattle and hogs at South St. Paul for Ole Swenson of Cass county, N. D.

M. C. Struwe of Pierce county, Wis., was represented with a mixed shipment of stock at South St. Paul.

The farmers Elevator Co. of Saint Croix county, Wis., sold a car of cattle and a car of hogs at South St. Paul.

We again had the pleasure of handling a shipment of hogs for L. E. Potter, Brown county, Minn., last week.

J. Ed. Moore, Callaway county, Mo., writes our Kansas City house: "Lambs came O. K. They are satisfactory."

Our long-time friend and patron, L. E. Potter of Brown county, Minn., sold three cars of hogs at South St. Paul.

A car of hogs was marketed at South St. Paul by A. Borgen of Barron county, Wis., a prosperous farmer and stock raiser.

N. Dempsey of Frontier county, Neb., had three cars of beef steers at Denver on June 27, which we sold at satisfactory prices.

Wm. Gustafson, one of our most valued patrons at the South St. Paul market, was represented with a car of hogs at that point.

Henry Herzog of Sheboygan county, Wis., favored us with his first western shipment of cattle at South St. Paul on Friday of last week.

Our South St. Paul house had the pleasure of handling a car of cattle for our true friend and liberal patron, Wm. Gustafson of Kandiyohi county, Minn.

R. A. Moore of Lasalle county, Tex., writes: "Clay, Robinson & Co. are mighty good people. Back in the '80s I shipped them a good many cattle to Chicago."

W. H. Lynes of Callaway county, Mo., writes our Kansas City house: "My sheep received all O. K. They are a nice lot and I hope to make a nice profit on them."

Mr. Ballinger of Walsh county, N. D., sold through our South St. Paul house a shipment of hogs and he expressed himself as very well pleased with our service.

Stuebe Bros. of Brown county, Minn., Green & Beatty of McHenry county, Ill., and J. Seafuse of Wabasha county, Mich., sold calves through our house last week.

F. W. Henkle of Towner county, N. D., who operates 1,900 acres of land there and is heavily interested in the stock raising business, had a car of hogs at South St. Paul.

We handled a mixed load of stock at South St. Paul for Fred Schulte of Pierce county, Wis., representing 28 different owners. Separate account sales and check were rendered to each one.

C. W. Jewell of Big Sandy county, Minn., sold a car of cattle at South St. Paul and stated that the weather has been extremely dry in his section, and also remarked that he was well pleased with the sales of his stock.

Pat Moore of Yuma county, Colo., writes: "The range is in fine shape here. Sheep are doing well. The small grain will be short. Enclosed find 50c to pay a small fraction of what I feel I am indebted to the Report."

H. R. Hall, prominent in law circles in Springfield, Sangamon county, Ill., writes: "Your checks for cattle and hogs sold received. All the sales were very satisfactory. The feeders arrived O. K. and are very satisfactory indeed."

Henderson Bros., prominent in dry goods and gents' furnishing goods circles of Lapeer county, Mich., write: "Cattle arrived all O. K. We are very much pleased with them and wish to thank you. Hope to do more business with you in the future."

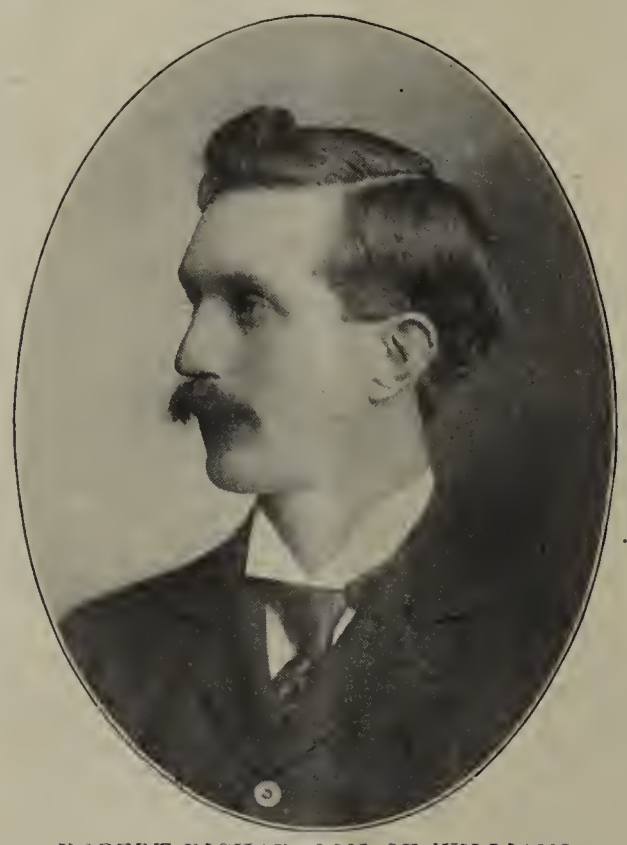
J. C. Merriman, the senior member of the firm of J. C. Merriman & Sons, owners of the Rosewood Farm, Deckerville, Sanilac county, Mich., writes: "Load of cattle came all right. They are better than we expected for the price. Thank you."

On June 29 our South Omaha house received a car of cattle from Eldredge Bros. of Hall county, Neb. In this shipment were fifteen head of very well fatted beeves that sold at $8.00, averaging 1,512 lbs. This price was top there for several days.

J. B. Gislason of Lyon county, Minn., writes our South St. Paul house: "I have been away for some time and on my return found my returns for the sale of sheep, and same was satisfactory in every way. Mr. Josefson was highly pleased with the sale of his sheep also."

Dudley Baker of Marion county, Mo., writes: "I shipped my cattle and hogs to your house at East St. Louis. I was well pleased with the sales. The cattle market was very draggy. The hogs sold well, topping the market. Thank you for keeping me posted on the markets."

John R. Trimble of Montezuma county, Colo., writes: "It has been very dry for some time, but we had some good rains the last few days. Stock of all kinds very fat and will be ready for market soon; in fact, much earlier than usual. I could not do without the Report."



ROBERT RICHARDSON OF WILLIAMSVILLE, ILL.

Barring one load, Mr. Richardson has shipped to Clay, Robinson & Co. every load of cattle fed by him during the past twenty years, as well as most of his hogs. His were the first hogs to go over $9.00 at Chicago this year, the shipment being handled by us. He feeds from 400 to 500 hogs and 150 cattle annually. Besides he farms 550 acres of land worth $200 per acre. He is a member of the famous seed corn firm of Richardson & Richardson, who handle Reid's Yellow Dent.

Philip Hodge of Uvalde county, Tex., writes our Fort Worth house: "Your check arrived. Many thanks for your kindness. I know you did the best you could for us. When I have business up that way you will certainly handle it. Stock is not mending as fast as desired. It is very dry and rain is needed badly."

We are pleased to print the names of the following parties who are prominent either in feeding or shipping circles and for whom we handled hogs last week: Buffalo Creek Farm Co., of Cook county, Ill.; Eyrick & McGowan of Will county, Ill.; John S. Bell of Lee county, Ia.; John Reichard of Fountain county, Ind.; Farney & Voss of Butler county, Ia.; H. R. Hall of Menard county, Ill.; Stuebe Bros. of Brown county, Minn.; L. A. Dobbs of Hendricks county, Ind.; Trabue & Lyons of Rush county, Ind.; D. T. Nicoll of Cedar county, Ia.; J. J. Kennell of Woodford county, Ill.; T. A. Parr of Muscatine county, Ia.; J. E. Rundles of Rock county, Wis.; W. F. Grelman of Hancock county, Ia.

J. H. McGinnis represented Hand county, S. D., on both the cattle and hog markets Wednesday of last week and we are pleased to say that he was delighted with our work.

The limit for aged sheep at Chicago on June 29 was $4.50, which was secured by us for 117 head of 117-lb western wethers from the feed lot of John Jones in Marion county, Ohio.

C. M. Follett of Millo county, Ia., writes: "I had 4 cars of cattle in April on the Chicago market and they were sold satisfactorily by you, and one car of hogs to you last week, which is all I have on feed for this summer. Expect to ship Clay, Robinson & Co. all I feed in the future."

J. M. Warren of Fauquier county, Va., writes: "Enclosed find 50c to renew my subscription to the REPORT. I am a new hand with cattle, but with the REPORT to keep me posted as to when to sell and Clay, Robinson & Co. to buy my feeders for me I feel I can do as well as most of the old traders."

On June 30 our East St. Louis house sold for Gladney & Mitchell of Lincoln county, Mo., one deck of 73-lb lambs at $8.00 straight. This was the extreme top of the native lamb market by 10c per cwt. They also sold a deck of 67-lb lambs for Monsess & Bente of Pettis county, Mo., at $7.90, the next best price.

Last week the following well-known shippers marketed hogs through our house at Denver: A Thurman of Scotts Bluff county, Neb.; A. G. Murchy of Morgan county, Colo.; M. H. Krab of Keith county, Neb.; J. O. Ham of Dundy county, Neb.; J. R. Porter & Son of Dundy county, Neb.; T. T. Plummer of Keith county, Neb.

P. F. Casey, Eaton county, Mich.: "Received cattle and am more than pleased with them. They are a nice bunch and I am surprised at the way you filled my order and also at the price you bought them. When I want cattle, Clay, Robinson & Co. for me. You will hear from me later, as I have been wasting time and money coming down there."

Our South St. Joseph house was favored with hog shipments June 29 from the following successful shippers: Wm. Sutter of Gage county, Neb.; C. E. Noland of Holt county, Mo.; E. H. Woodhouse of Atchison county, Mo.; M. A. Hodgin of Holt county, Mo.; H. Williamson of Jefferson county, Neb.; H. S. Rhoades of Atchison county, Mo.; H. C. Aurand of Nuckolls county, Neb.

We had the honor of handling shipments of hogs for the following parties Wednesday of last week, and, we are glad to state, they were pleased with our service: R. Black of Schuyler county, Ill.; C. C. Dutcher of Scott county, Ia.; Pyle & Hanson of Franklin county, Ia.; W. H. Flanagan of Hancock county, Ia.; W. Craft of Story county, Ia.; P. F. Weidauer of Calhoun county, Ia.; J. A. Simpson, D. B. Simpson and S. Schultz of Kossuth county, Ia.

It was with great satisfaction that we received shipments of beef steers from the following prominent dealers Wednesday of last week: Chas. Turner of Clinton county, Ohio; J. A. Clark of Hancock county, Ill.; R. H. Smith of Vermillion county, Ill.; H. I. Webber of Marshall county, Ill.; H. Hall of Menard county, Ill.; Arthur Chambers of Sioux county, Ia.; Mrs. C. Ullrich of Crawford county, Ia.; H. R. Owens of Iowa county, Ia.; D. L. Pascal of Clinton county, Ia.; A. D. Carothers of Guthrie county, Ia.; J. W. Myers of Grant county, Wis. Stoner, Kelly & Co. of Iowa county, Ia.

Among the shippers and feeders who each had a car of stock to our South St. Joseph house June 28 were: Pearl Logan of Nodaway county, Mo.; Halfred Botkin & Co., Skidmore county, Mo.; E. G. Bahler of Holt county, Mo.; Arthur Whisler of Harrison county, Mo.; C. E. Robinson of Clinton county, Mo.; D. D. Miller of Page county, Ia.; J. W. Routh of Ringgold county, Ia.; C. F. Garrett of Brown county, Kan.; E. G. Bohling of Nuckolls county, Neb.; E. C. Christy of Webster county, Neb.; Jos. Barr of Gage county, Neb.; Spickler & K. of Richard county, Neb.; P. M. Anderson of Gage county, Neb.; Fred Ball of Worth county, Mo.; S. Rybolt of Worth county, Mo. W. B. Porter of Clinton county, Mo.

Robt. E. Cecil of Selby county, Ill., writes: "Fat hogs are scarce."

D. H. Richey of Pettis county, Mo., writes: "I have 160 acres in corn and it looks well. We have good grass and hay."

C. W. Payne of Washington county, Ia., writes: "Your REPORT is surely great. You have a right to be proud of your firm."

William Forell of Jackson county, Colo., was on the Denver market July 5 with a load of grass cows for which our house obtained the top price of $4.80.

Oscar Samson, a prominent cattleman of Bert county, Neb., writes: "Your South Omaha house has done fine work for me, selling 11 carloads this season."

Fremont county, Ia., was represented on both the cattle and hog markets Wednesday of last week with a shipment by W. R. Coward, well-known farmer and feeder.

Wm. Ballew, progressive farmer and feeder of Warrew county, Ill., was in Wednesday with a load each of beef steers and hogs and we rendered him the service that pleases.

The top price for a load of cattle at Kansas City on June 29 was $8.00, obtained by our house for 15 head of 1,296-lb offerings from the feed lot of F. Lawson of Rooks county, Kan.

On July 1 our South Omaha house handled a couple of cars of steers for J. F. Dierker of Hooker county, Neb., that averaged 1,342 lbs and sold at $7.70, the top of the day's trade.

C. Lewison, the frequent and successful shipper of Mower county, Minn., was here Wednesday of last week with both feeding cattle and hogs and he got the returns that helped fatten his bank account.

F. R. Duncan, prominent in Missouri live stock circles, with headquarters in Linn county, was here Wednesday of last week with a consignment of she stock and calves and we obtained for him pleasing prices.

Those who had stocker and feeder cattle to us Wednesday of last week and who got the benefit of the rise in prices were J. Palmer of Livingston county, Ill.; C. Carlin of Jefferson county, Wis.; E. F. Byrne of Brown county, Ill.

Chas. Holdorf, a prominent stockman and farmer of Shelby county, Ia., was on the South Omaha market with a car of steers that we sold at a satisfactory price. Mr. Holdorf is an old-time patron of the South Omaha market and Clay, Robinson & Co.

The following well known shippers and feeders were on the South St. Joseph market June 30 with hogs to our house: R. I. Bilby of Nodaway county, Mo.; H. B. Hunter of Webster county, Neb.; S. S. Crilly of Franklin county, Neb.; J. J. Dillon of Johnson county, Neb.

Colorado Cattle Feeders Show Great Results.

Below is an example of what it is to buy and sell through Clay, Robinson & Co.:

Walker & McCaslin of Longmont, Colo, have been known for a long time as two of the most successful sheep feeders in Northern Colorado, but neither gentleman had ever fed a bunch of cattle until last season. At the outset they warned us that they knew nothing at all about a feeding steer and would entrust the buying of their feedlot supplies entirely to Clay, Robinson & Co. at Denver. During November we bought for this firm 398 steers, averaging 954 lbs, at an average cost of $4.30½ per cwt, or $41.16 per head, laid down in the feed yards at Longmont. These cattle were bought in several different lots at different times as they happened to come in from several different shipping points in Colorado, being of fair to good quality. They were shut up in the lots on a feed of pulp, syrup and alfalfa hay, to which ration corn chop was added later, and when they came to market they were getting 10 lbs of corn chop and 8 lbs of molasses per day. The initial shipment of five cars was marketed in Denver on April 22, averaging 1,259 lbs, and sold at $7.40. The final shipment was disposed of there May 19 at $6.80, averaging 1,130 lbs, with 8 tailend steers at $6 25 and one steer, which would eat no grain, at $5.50. There was a death loss of two head in these cattle, due, Mr. Walker believes, to an over-feed of syrup. The average price realized for these cattle was $7.20 per cwt, or $85.31 per head. The total cost per head for feeding, and allowing for the two head lost, was $24.53 per head. This includes interest on the money hired, help, salt and telephone bills, as follows:

400 tons alfalfa hay	$3,000.00
2,210 tons pulp	1,632.00
246,000 lbs corn chop	3,000 00
110 tons molasses	990.00
1,300 lbs salt	6.50
Labor	500.09
Telephone	12.50
Interest on money	564.00
Total	$9,705 09

The net profit on the 396 head was $20.62 per steer. All of these cattle were bought on the open market in Denver and also sold on the Denver market. Mr. Walker was there when the first shipment was purchased, but the most of the cattle he did not see until they were unloaded at Longmont.

The above parties also fed about 5,000 head of sheep, which were marketed at Denver and South Omaha through Clay, Robinson & Co.

F. P. RUDOLPH OF FORT COLLINS, COLO.

Mr. Rudolph is one of the leading farmers and sheep feeders of Colorado and we are proud to state that he ships all of his stock to Clay, Robinson & Co., either at River markets or Chicago. This year our Chicago house sold 1,230 head of lambs for him which averaged 79 lbs and brought the average price of $10.33. We also handled 2,678 head of his shorn lambs which made the average weight of 79 lbs and the average price of $8.77. These are remarkably high prices and Mr. Rudolph was delighted with the outcome of his season's feeding. Mr. Rudolph migrated to his present home from Tennessee in 1905. He bought 160 acres of farm land, which is now worth $200 per acre. Mr. Rudolph has fed lambs for the past three years, handling from 1,000 to 4,000 head each year. In a letter to us he says: "I wish to thank you for the service rendered me each time, especially last, which was indeed satisfactory. I wish you a prosperous business year."

Included in the representative sales of wool at Boston recently were 25,000 lbs Ohio ¼ blood, 27c; 75,000 lbs Ohio ½ blood, 28@29c; 30,000 lbs Oregon. 18c@20c; 745,000 lbs territory, 17c@22c.

Wool Market Notes.

Thomas Chittick, live stock agent of C. M. & St. P., Miles City, Mont., writes us under date of July 2: "Everything in the wool business remains the same. No sales are being made and nothing to speak of being consigned from this section. At the present time I think there is in the neighborhood of 4,000,000 lbs of wool at Miles City and prevailing opinion is that something will be doing after the Fourth."

The three largest wool clips in the United States, amounting to 10 per cent of Montana's total output, have been sold to a Boston firm. The price received has not been made public, but is supposed to be 21½c per pound. These three clips belong to J. B. Long of Great Falls, C. M. Blair of Billings and Rea Bros. of Forsyth. The Blair clip amounts to 1,900,000 lbs, the Long clip to 1,000,000 lbs, and the Rea Bros. clip to 900,000 lbs.

The first wool sale of the season at Belle Fourche, S. D., was made Thursday when the Latham & Chuning clip was sold at what is said to have been 18⅛c. A. M. Vannette sold his clip for 17½c. The market there is pretty much in the same condition as in other sections. The buyers are not inclined to pay the prices demanded by growers, and as a consequence there will be a great deal of consigning before the season closes unless higher prices are offered.

Last year much wool in the West sold at 22c. This year the buyers are offering 16c. The purchasers are holding out for 20c. It is believed that a compromise can be effected for 18c. At this price the wool will move. In most cases the bankers have extended loans from September to October in the hopes that an agreement may be reached and they are reluctant to force the wool growers to sell at what the producers consider a sacrifice. Just what the final outcome of the proposition will be no one knows, but the bankers believe that an agreement will be reached so that loans may be reduced by Oct. 1.

"There has been practically no change in the wool market from May," says S. Silberman & Sons. "No reaction has been shown towards higher levels, and we see no immediate prospects for a material advance. However, a more active and cheerful market is looked for shortly, and a firm market would certainly reflect in some improvement over the nominal prices of today. Eastern dealers are still occupied in selling their old wool, and until through disposing of this are not likely to take a real interest in the new clip. Manufacturers, however, will give the preference to the new clip."

Secretary MacVeagh has ruled that certain importations containing about 5 per cent merino wool and 90 to 95 per cent goat hair brought to this country on what is commonly called cape skins from South Africa and which are of Persian origin, are properly dutiable at 3c per pound. The decision, in effect, establishes a new sample of wool for the guidance of customs collectors, and the character of importations described are put into what is known as the third class of wool imports. The courts had held that such importations of merino and goats' hair from South Africa in the proportion described are dutiable at 10 cents a pound as merino wool.

Although the feeling that wool values have practically touched bottom is apparently now shared by more people in the trade, there has practically nothing appeared in the situation as yet which would indicate any higher prices for wool in the near future, comments the Wool and Cotton Reporter. In fact, the goods market seems to grow more and more uncertain as time passes and it as yet offers no relief to the present depressed situation. It is a well-known fact that a serious curtailment policy is going on among the woolen and worsted mills. In fact, it has been conservatively estimated that not over one-half of the machinery in mills is now operating. It is needless to say, therefore, that before we see any improvement in the wool situation we will have to witness a material improvement in the mill situation. Usually a line on what is coming can generally be ascertained just after the Fourth of July. It does not look as if this will be the case this year, however, and as a matter of fact most people do not expect to learn anything about what is coming until towards the latter part of next month at the earliest.

Range Sheep at Chicago.

The Fourth fell on Monday and there was no market here that day. On Tuesday there was an excellent demand, the trade was active and prices ruled 15@25c higher. Top lambs made $8.00, we landing 619 of the E. A. Van Sicklen 62-lb offerings from Idaho at the price and the 58-lb offerings on feeding account at $6.60. We also topped the yearling market at $5.35 with 855 of the 89-lb Bicknell & Gemmell stock from Oregon and sold their 94-lb wethers at top figure of $4.75. While both sheep and yearlings of a choice class went steady Wednesday, other kinds lost 10@15c, and lambs declined 25c. It was a dull, draggy deal from start to finish. Prices for breeding and feeding stock were not quotably changed for the week, although demand was good at the current rates.

Western Range Cattle at Chicago.

Sixteen loads of Dana Wyoming range cattle showed Wednesday, the second liberal consignment of rangers this season. They were a disappointment in quality and their condition plainly evidenced the dry state of the range at this time. Steers went to killers at $6.20 and a load of feeders made $5.10, while cows brought $3.35@4.25.

"WHO'S AFRAID?"

Do You Want Breeding or Feeding Sheep and Lambs?

From present prospects it looks as though there is going to be a good demand for all classes of feeding sheep and lambs and breeding ewes this season, and we would not be surprised to see all classes sell relatively high.

There will no doubt be a good run of western range sheep and lambs the next few weeks. Prospectively early purchasers would do well to get their orders placed. If you expect to purchase breeding ewes or feeding sheep and lambs at any time during the season kindly let us know in order that we may keep you posted with our special market letters. : : : : : : :

Attention, Prospective Buyers of Feeding Cattle!

This class of cattle can be bought to good advantage during July, August and September at South Omaha, Kansas City, South St. Joseph, East St. Louis, Sioux City, South St. Paul and Chicago. Offerings include desirable half-fat natives, westerns from the pastures of Oklahoma and Kansas, from the Sand Hills in Nebraska and from the ranges of Wyoming, Montana and the Dakotas. We believe that this will prove a profitable investment where feeding for the above mentioned length of time. We advise buying steers of 1,150 to 1,250 lbs average. The heavier they are the quicker they can be returned to market, and at the same time when finished sell 30 to 40c per cwt higher than if they had weighed around 950 lbs at the start of feeding. : : : : : : : :

Parties wanting such cattle to feed should place their order with Clay, Robinson & Co. at any of the above markets. Give us as much time as possible in which to make a purchase. If this is done we are not compelled to buy the stock the day we receive the order, but can wait and buy them when there is a big run and a lower market. Thus we can save the purchaser anywhere from 10 to 25c per cwt. : : : : : : : : : :

Also along in October and November well-bred thin cattle, averaging 700 to 900 lbs, can be bought to good advantage at the above mentioned markets. Late in the season they are well shrunken out and if carried along on fall pasture and stock fields, and given a little grain during January and February to keep them going ahead, they can be fed out for the May, June and July markets to good advantage. Or if this is not favorable, the cattle can be fed corn on grass for the August and September markets. : : : : :

Remember that it is not necessary for you to come to market, and incur unnecessary expenses and loss of time that are incidental to such a trip. Send us your order, tell us the class of cattle you want, etc., and we will do the rest.

Cattle Singles in Northwestern Show.

The cattle division of the Northwestern Live Stock Show, which will be held at the Union Stock Yards, South St. Paul, Nov. 15 to 18, contains two general classes, one for pure breds and one for grades and cross breds.

The single entries of steers and spayed heifers are grouped according to ages. That is to say, all animals under one year of age are shown in one lot and those under two years and over one are shown in another lot, while those two years old and under three comprise stil another lot.

For each lot there are six prizes, ranging from $25 down to $5, and the champion of the lots is awarded $35. The champions of the two classes are shown in competition for the grand championship, which carries a prize of $50.

In each class may also be shown a herd consisting of one steer or heifer two years old and under three; one steer or heifer under one year and under two, and one steer or heifer under one year of age. The premiums for this competition are $40 for the first, $25 for the second and $15 for the third.

While these premiums which are very liberal, apply to any and all entries in these classes, the aggregate of special premiums makes it possible for the exhibitor under certain conditions to win some valuable prizes.

The American Shorthorn Association will duplicate the regular premiums won by pure bred or grade Shorthorns. The Farm Stock and Home of Minneapolis offers $25 as a special prize for the grand champion steer or heifer. The Live Stock Breeders' Association of Minnesota and North Dakota each offer $35 for the best steer or heifer shown.

The management of the Show particularly desires to encourage amateur exhibitors and for that purpose has offered to those who have never before exhibited at state fairs or fat stock shows four prizes ranging from $20 to $5 in each of the lots for single entries of pure-bred cattle and four prizes ranging from $15 to $5 in each of the lots for grades and cross breds. H. F. Brown, proprietor of the Browndale Farm, Minneapolis, at the last annual banquet given for the exhibitors of this show, strongly urged the necessity for bringing out amateur exhibitors and offered to duplicate any prizes that this association might offer for that purpose, provided such prizes were won by pure bred or grade shorthorns. These same animals are also eligible for entry in the dressed carcass division, where there are four prizes for each lot, from $25 down to $5, with a prize of $50 for the champion carcass. If the grand champion carcass is the same animal that wins the grand championship on foot the Association Harmony Special Premium of $50 will also be awarded that animal. The herdsman who fits the grand champion of the show is not forgotten. A beautiful gold medal will be given to him by The Farmer of St. Paul.

Taking into consideration all the special prizes, it would be possible for the grand champion steer or heifer of this show to win a total purse of $445. This should be an incentive to every farmer in the territory of this show to at least make an attempt to win some of these prizes.

This show is for market types of animals, and carries no classes for breeding stock. It is therefore the hope of the management that the farmers will show their appreciation of the opportunities offered them to win liberal prizes by fitting some animals for competition.

Planting of Another Ear.

Prof. P. G. Holden of Iowa shows what benefit to his state just one more ear of corn to each hill on every corn field would be. He says:

"If one more little ear of corn to each hill were added it would mean a half million dollars more for every one of the ninety-nine counties of the state. Ten bushels more of corn to each acre planted would make $50,000,000 more to be added to the total of Iowa's wealth each year. Our present average yield for Iowa is only 35 bushels to the acre. The cause for this poor yield is barren seed corn, and the remedy is the testing of every ear to be planted and the selection of the best seed corn for planting."

Get Ready for the Show.

The National Western Stock Show at Denver will be held this year during the week of Jan. 21. The value of this show to the stockmen of the West can hardly be over-estimated if he will but avail himself of the opporturnity afforded to line his stuff up with those of his fellow stockmen and compare his efforts with those of others in his line. The lessons learned by such comparison are invaluable and we therefore urge upon every stockman to select at once, where possible, such stock as he deems desirable and prepare it for the Denver show. Of course, in some of the classes selection now is impossible, but have in mind the show next January and resolve to have something on exhibition there.

Grinding Corn for Hogs.

For the past nine years the Wisconsin Experiment Station has been conducting tests to determine whether grinding corn for hogs is desirable. In the tests previous to 1903-4 middlings were fed with the corn. That year corn was fed alone, but the results were so unsatisfactory as regards thrift, appetite, gains and feed consumed per pound of gain that it was not considered desirable to omit the middlings in subsequent years.

The results have varied a little from year to year, but considering the average of all the tests 117 hogs fed dry shelled corn and wheat middlings made an average gain of 96.8 lbs each, while an equal number fed cornmeal and wheat middlings gained 110.9 lbs each, the feed required per pound of gain in the two cases being 5.19 lbs and 4.88 lbs. In other words, for each pound of gain the hogs fed shelled corn required 0.3 pound more grain than those fed the cornmeal. The saving from grinding, therefore, has amounted to 5.7 per cent. Whether it will pay to grind corn in order to effect a saving will necessarily depend on two factors, namely, the price of corn and the cost of grinding. When these two factors are known the possible saving from grinding corn for fattening hogs can be learned from the following:

Value of corn per bushel...	45	50	55	60	65	70	75
Amount saved by grinding.	2.5	2.8	3.1	3.4	3.7	3.9	4.2

When corn is worth only 25c per bushel the saving from grinding amounts to only 1.4c, not enough to pay for the grinding unless cheap power is available. As corn advances in price it will be noticed that the saving per bushel increases practically 0.3 of a cent with each 5c advance in the price of corn. Should the price of corn be as high as 75c per bushel the saving by grinding would amount to a little over 4c per bushel.

Prices for Live Stock are Sliding Downward.

Features of the trade in live stock at this time are uncertainty and irregularity. However, this is seasonable. Prices are being revised downward at a fast rate. The public is protesting at the high cost of meats and besides hot weather is curtailing the outlet greatly. Buyers claim that they have received orders to buy cattle, hogs, sheep and lambs at lower prices or let them alone. This is a good indication of smaller consumptive demand, for this policy would be impossible if meat products were moving promptly. An authority makes the statement that less meat per capita is being eaten in the United States at this time than for many years. If prices are lowered over the retail counter there is no doubt that a larger meat diet would result.

Choice Fat Cattle are Scarce.

The supply of fat yearling or big weight beeves of choice quality is no doubt small in all sections. From such famous feeding states as Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Illinos come reports to this effect. The future market prospects for these kinds are bright. But less encouraging is the outlook for the short-fed offerings. These are now, and will likely continue for the summer and fall months, to comprise a heavy proportion of the native arrivals at all of the markets. This, along with the fact that Kansas and Oklahoma, and also the Northwest, will commence soon to pour their grassers into the market hoppers, does not augur well for the grassy and short-fed natives. In our opinion, where such cattle possess good quality they should be held back for good flesh, if the owners have good pastures and can secure the feed.

Packers Smash the Hog Market Hard.

Price declines for hogs have been on the sensational order during the past two weeks. On one day recently losses were as much as 40c per cwt by the close of the session. Rates this week were lowered to the lowest level since last January. The spread in prices was $1.00, loads of heavy packing sows going down to $8.25 with pieces of loads as low as $8.00, and fancy assorted light up to $9.25 early this week. At the high time in March, when the market was around $2 50 higher than now, the spread was only about 25c per cwt. Of course the summer margin between the lard and bacon hog is expected to be wide, but this summer there is promise that the spread will be the widest in trade history. An unusually heavy supply of big weight hogs are coming and are meeting with marked discrimination.

Packers have shown that they are masters of the situation. They have been just as indifferent bidders under light runs as under heavy ones. They have been favored in their bearish raids by a contracted outlet through eastern shipping channels and liberal liquidation by producers. It is not thought that they are through with their pounding tactics. Also there are more fat hogs than the country was given credit for. The remarkably high prices last winter stimulated breeding as never before and caused every owner to put his old brood sows on a liberal ration of grain.

How much lower prices will go is problematical. To play safe hogs that are in good condition for market and weigh around 225 lbs and heavier should be sent to the shambles. On the other hand it will pay to hold pigs and shotes for maturity. Also do not let go of good, thrifty brood sows. They are and will continue to be valuable assets on the farm.

Buyers Dominate Sheep Market Handily.

At this time packers are experiencing no difficulty in having things pretty much their own way in the sheep and lamb trade. Kentucky is still a price factor in the lamb market, natives are still arriving in liberal numbers and sheep from the western ranges are coming plentiful enough for all trade requirements. Buyers firm hold on the market, it is thought, will be loosened some when the southern and native crop is well out of the way, as western shipments will comprise a larger proportion of feeders than in years because of the drought out there. The best plan for owners to follow in the meantime will be to let the fat lots come right along.

Distillery-Fed Cattle Nearly All In.

Marketing of distillery fed cattle has been at a fast clip during the past month or so, and this has been a factor in the downward trend of the market. A record number of them were fed this year and they also made new high prices, tops making $8.55 only last week. But their force as price factors has about been spent, as the great bulk of them have been marketed. With them out of the way well-fatted corn-fed natives should sell to better advantage.

Hogs Showing Much Heavier Weight.

Condition of the hogs now being received at the western markets has been unusually good the past month or so. Encouraged by a high market, few underweight loads are being sent in and the bulk of the offerings show a liberal corn diet. There has been every incentive to make the hogs heavy, as feeders could undoubtedly realize better prices for their corn through the pork route than in any other way. Following table shows the average weight of the hogs received at five different markets during June, compared with a year ago:

	June 1910.	June 1909.
Chicago	242	219
Kansas City	209	198
South Omaha	249	229
South St. Joseph.....	232	212
Sioux City	244	228

Breeding Ewes Look Very Cheap.

As compared with the way they have sold in recent years, breeding ewes are low in price. This week a very choice class of yearling breeding ewes from Idaho sold at $5.75 and natives of good to choice quality and of yearling to four year old in ages were obtained at $4.25@4.75. There does not seem to be the demand from any section of the country as in late years. The dull and lower market for wool and the droughty condition may have something to do with this. We believe that young ewes of choice quality at the current prices are worth the money and where parties are fixed to handle sheep they should not hesitate to stock up with them.

M. Mullen of Minnesota Passes Away.

M. Mullen of New Ulm, Minn., died in that city Wednesday of last week after suffering for some time with a complication of diseases. He had been prominent in Minnesota business and banking circles for many years and was president of the Citizens State Bank at New Ulm for thirty-five years. He was born in St. Albans, Vt., March 12, 1839. At the age of four years his parents moved to Davis, Ill., and in 1860 Mr. Mullen migrated to Minnesota, settling at St. Peter where he engaged in the hardware business. In the following year he went to New Ulm and embarked in the hardware and farm implement business. In 1875 he assisted in organizing the Citizens National Bank and became its first president, retaining that position when the bank was changed to a private institution in 1883. In 1908 the bank was re-organized as the Citizens State Bank and during all those years he served as president. Mr. Mullen was also president and principal stock holder in the Minnesota and Dakota Cattle Co., which was organized in 1897 and has operated on the Cheyenne River Agency since that time. Owing to the opening of those lands by the Government for homesteaders, the company will go out of business this fall. Clay, Robinson & Co. wish to extend their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved wife and daughter of Mr. Mullen.

Frost Beeves Top Chicago Cattle Market.

F. W. Frost, the well-known farmer and feeder of Shabbona, Ill., was on the Chicago cattle market July 7 with cattle which Clay, Robinson & Co. sold at $8.25, the top that day by 25c per cwt. In the shipment which made this price were 9 head of 1,233 lbs average and 10 head of 1,518 lbs average. The latter offerings were the tail-ends of the cattle which were bought by us at Chicago in November at $4.85. The first cut of these cattle were sold by us about two months ago on a very bad market at $8.00, averaging 1,523 lbs. The chief ration for the above cattle was shelled corn, clover hay, corn fodder and oil meal. Mr. Frost expressed his gratification with both the buying and selling of the cattle.

Dierker Beeves Top South Omaha Market.

J. F. Dierker, a successful stock feeder of Dodge, Neb., was on the South Omaha market July 11 looking after the shipment of 115 head of 1,520-lb beef steers which Clay, Robinson & Co. sold straight at $7.80, the extreme top of the day's trade. These steers were high-grade Herefords and pretty well fatted. Mr. Dierker bought these cattle on the South Omaha market through our house about the middle of January at an average cost of $4.90, averaging 1,025 lbs. Speaking of conditions in his section, Mr. Dierker said they had had good rains throughout his country recenly and the corn crop was in excellent shape. Wheat and oats have also developed in very good shape. Fat cattle are pretty well cleaned out.

Scholerman Beeves Top Sioux City Market.

J. Scholerman, a prominent farmer and feeder of Lester, Ia., was on the Sioux City market July 11 with 31 beef steers of 1,512 lbs average which Clay, Robinson & Co. landed at the top price of $8.00. These cattle were well-bred Shorthorns and in very good flesh condition.

Corn is Very Small in Nebraska.

Edward L. Burke, of the famous cattle feeding firm of Kent & Burke of Genoa, Neb., writes under date of July 4: "I can't even give an approximate estimate of the number of cattle that will be fed this coming season. Corn is very small and the outcome of the crop is very uncertain. In this immediate locality we have had timely rains, but in other large portions it is pretty dry and there is considerable complaint."

Notes from Miles City, Mont.

Miles City, Mont., July 7.—I dropped in here this morning at 4 a. m. and after an hour or two's sleep have been interviewing stockmen at this point. Except a strip of country north of the Yellowstone, feed is reported good in this district. During the past ten days they have had copious showers and grass has made great progress. Sheep are doing well and the cattlemen speak quite hopefully of their prospects for good beef. It is refreshing to come to a part of the range where the accounts are good and rangemen wearing a smile.

The town is full of wool buyers. Not much doing, but it looks as if they and the sellers were getting near a trading basis. At Billings some sales have been made at 18@19c per pound. During the next ten days bankers and others look for wool to move freely from this point of Montana. If you throw a stone in the street you hit either a sheepman or a wool buyer.

There will be a very free movement of all classes of stock from this neighborhood this fall.

MORE WISCONSIN PORK

The following article was awarded first in the competition for cash prizes amounting to $100 given by Mr. John Clay for best articles by students of the Agricultural Journalism Course at the above college.

By F. P. MORRISON

Student of Wisconsin College of Agriculture

Why is it that while Iowa leads all the other states in the Union with approximately eight million hogs in 1909, Wisconsin, a state with about the same area, stands only ninth in pork production, with less than one-fourth as many hogs to her credit? In answer we are informed that Wisconsin is out of the corn belt and produces ess than one-sixth as much of the "pork maker's mainstay" as her sister state. Yet Denmark, only one-quarter the size of Iowa or Wisconsin, grows no corn, but does grow hogs, raising nearly as many every year as Wisconsin. Indeed, this little country exports annually nearly one-fifth as many dollars worth of pork products as the United States. Moreover, Denmark is not primarily a hog raising country, but one devoted first of all to dairying.

This importance of Denmark as a dairy country is in fact the secret of her success in pork production, the profitable raising of hogs being dependent upon the by-products of her numerous creameries and cheese factories. The rise of the pig to his present position in Denmark has been brought about in comparatively recent years and is largely due to the work of Fjord and Friis. Backed by the Danish Government, these men sought to find, through painstaking experiments, the most profitable type of pig, the most economical feeds and the best methods of feeding and marketing. On account of the general adoption of their findings by the enterprising Danes, their country has reached her present rank as the producer of the best bacon on the British market.

How can we grow more hogs in Wisconsin and make more profit on those we do raise? Certainly not by following corn belt methods, but by applying methods suited to our natural advantages, as the Danes have done. We must above all take into account the fact that upon Wisconsin farms are kept one and one-half million dairy cows, nearly as many as in New York or Iowa, our rivals in the dairy industry.

The Hogs to Raise.

Before breeding and fattening hogs, we must decide upon the type and breed from which we can secure the most profit. If a well established market existed for bacon hogs of the highest quality and a satisfactory premium could be obtained for such hogs, undoubtedly it would be wisest for us to follow the example of Denmark and Canada, and market bacon hogs of the best quality. However, under present market conditions, in nearly all sections of the state the production of fat pork rather than of bacon should be undertaken.

As it is advisable to raise lard hogs, we should select those which are long, broad, deep, thick in flesh, even in depth and width, and smooth and symmetrical throughout. Whether to select Poland Chinas, Duroc-Jerseys, Berkshires or Chester Whites depends upon our particular conditions and our individual preference. Trials have not proved that any one of these breeds shows uniform superiority to the others.

No "scrub" boars should be tolerated, for, as we have often heard, the sire is half the herd. The boar should not only be pure bred, but also be well-bred, a good individual backed by good ancestors. The parallelogram shape, with length and depth, should be his most striking characteristic. The boar should also be compact, blocky, and his body supported by rather short, straight limbs. Though having marked masculinity, he should exhibit no undue coarseness.

Of equal importance are the females of the herd. Even with a good boar, the best results can only be secured through the use of good brood sows. These should preferably be grades or pure-breds of the breed selected. The dam should have the same leading characteristics as the sire, but she should be more roomy, not so large in frame, finer in outline and bone. She must, moreover, possess a strong constitution and pronounced vitality to transmit to her offspring. The prospective mothers should be selected from the most thrifty gilts of the large litters and so reared that proper development will be assured. When a sow has proved herself a prolific mother of sturdy, growthy pork makers she should be retained, since her reproductive ability will increase until she reaches maturity.

Care of Breeding Stock.

During just as much of the year as possible both brood sows and boar should be kept on pasture, grazing on succulent grasses, clovers, alfalfa or rape. Even luxuriant pasture does not alone suffice, however, and should be supplemented by a limited amount of concentrates. Some corn or other carbohydrate-rich feed may be supplied, together with muscle and bone forming feeds, such as skim milk, middlings, bran, soybeans, linseed meal. Too large a concentrate allowance will make the hogs fat and lazy, content to lie in the shade instead of eager to forage industriously.

In winter time we should neither force the sow to exist, hungry and unsatisfied, on a meager allowance of high-priced concentrates nor should we stuff her with such feeds and get her fat. She can now no longer graze at will, and hence we must supply proper roughage to distend her digestive tract. Best of all is a liberal supply of fine early cut alfalfa hay fed chaffed or whole. It has been shown that brood sows may be successfully wintered on properly cured alfalfa hay, with a little skim milk, but with no grain until two weeks before farrowing. Thus fed sows carry plenty of flesh, give birth to thifty pigs, and milk like cows. Where alfalfa hay cannot be raised, fine, early cut or second crop clover hay may well take its place. Roots, mangles, sugar beets or turnips, are economical, furnish succulence and variety, and are always in order. Some concentrates may be added to the supply of roughage, and whenever possible skim milk or whey should form part of the ration.

When snow covers the ground it is a problem to get the sow to take enough exercise. But exercise she must have. If she has her way she will do little more than leave her bed to eat and drink. Feeding floors may be provided on which shelled corn or whole oats are scattered, the hungry sow being obliged to pick up one grain at a time. In some cases it may even be necessary to break paths through the snow and entice or drive the sows around the lot. While it may not be wise for the corn-belt sow to bear more than one litter each year, through proper care and the use of skim milk the dairy farmer is enabled to secure both spring and fall litters. April should usually usher in the first crop, while the fall crop should come about September.

The Sow and Her Litter.

For a short time before farrowing the sows should be given sloppy feed, cooling and laxative in character. Properly fed sows will usually experience little difficulty in giving birth to their young, while costive sows supplied with fattening feed will give the herdsman all manner of trouble. Soon after farrowing the allowance of concentrates should be gradually increased, for a good sow is a high power milk machine and must be liberally fed.

It is well said that "when past the weaning period without a stunt or kink in its growth, a hog is half made." The young pig demands careful and regular attention, and failure is the penalty for the careless herdsman. As early as possible the little fellows should be encouraged to drink slop from a low trough which cannot be reached by the mother. First among feeds for the young pig is skim milk or whey, fed in combination with middlings, sieved ground oats, cracked corn or other grains. At seven to eight weeks of age the pigs will be eating ravenously and may be weaned without any set-back.

The Future Dam and Sire.

Immediately after weaning the pigs intended for breeding stock should of course be separated from those which are to be fattened. They require not fat forming corn, but feed which will produce muscle, vigor and a strong skeleton. If in summer keep them on pasture, give them skim milk with a little grain, corn if they are grazing, alfalfa or clover, and feed richer in protein if they are on rape or grass. In winter, just as with the brood sow, legume hay and roots must take the place of pasturage. All pigs, but especially the future mothers and sires of the herd, should receive an abundance of mineral food. We now know that ground rock phosphate is as good for the pig as it is for the field. The pig should be allowed to select at will all he craves of this valuable bone forming material and also of salt, charcoal, clean soil and ashes or cinders. Exercise, and abundance of it, is no less important for the young pig than the mature brood sow. Kept gaining all the time on proper food at breeding time the pig will be vigorous and sturdy, the kind with which to improve the breeding herd.

Growing and Fattening the Pork Maker.

In these years, with the price of feedstuffs nearly out of sight, the pig's journey from his mother to the pork barrel must be more rapid than ever. Until the final fattening period our policy should be to force the pig to rapid growth rather than burden him with fat. Besides dairy by-products at all seasons, pasturage in summer and legume hay and roots in winter, he must receive somewhat more rich concentrates than a pig destined for breeding stock. Much corn need not be fed at this time unless it is more economical than other grains or feeds.

Our aim should be to supply variety and make the ration so palatable that the pig is off feed for not a single day. Thrifty and strong, he should readily gain a pound a day and at six months of age be ready for his finishing coat of fat.

In fattening the lard pig our object should be to put on a thick layer of fat in the shortest time consistent with economical gains. Pigs on pasture should continue on pasture up to marketing time, but toward the close of the period they should not be forced to travel far for feed or drink, or gains will be decreased.

The winter-fed shoate should receive a liberal allowance of legume hay until it is time for the last finishing touches. Nothing is better than skim milk and roots to keep the system of the lard pig in profit-making order. Yet, though skim milk is one of the best of feeds, even it may be abused. Practice teaches that the greatest economy results when not more than three or four pounds of milk are fed the fattening pig to each pound of grain. Factory skim milk and whey should always be sterilized to prevent the spread of tuberculosis.

We need not now supply an abundance of protein in the ration, for we seek fat, not flesh and bone. A moderate protein allowance is necessary, however, in order to secure a good appetite and proper digestion. The young pig, full fed on corn alone, makes unsatisfactory and expensive gains. Hence when the supply of skim milk runs low we must supplement corn by tankage, soy bean meal, linseed oil meal or perhaps middlings.

As the fattening period progresses gains become more and more expensive, and through all possible means the animals must be induced to eat every ounce consistent with economy. Now the skill of the true swine husbandman is evident. He will tempt the cloyed appetite of the pig by a variety of feed stuffs and by soaking and grinding grain when necessary. Yet he will never throw the animal off feed by unwise or improper feeding. Porkers properly cared for should be ready for the market at eight months of age, weighing between 200 and 300 lbs.

Expensive, palatial shelters are not necessary to secure maximum and profitable gains. For Wisconsin perhaps the most convenient is the small portable cabin, with the cracks well battened to keep out the winter gales. All except pigs in the last stage of fattening should be required to exercise vigorously, and every pig should have an abundance of fresh water and free access to a mixture of mineral matter.

Economy in Pork Making.

We should ever be on the watch, ready to avail ourselves of feeds low in price, for a dollar saved in the feed bill means more profit when hogs are high, and may make all the difference between profit and loss when hogs take a slump. Damaged, unsalable grain is often just as valuable for swine or other farm animals as bright kernels of the highest grade. When the potato market goes lower than the growing tubers were, pigs will help convert the crop into cash. A good commission firm for 10c potatoes is found in the drove of hogs, which will make as much pork from four of potatoes, fed boiled, as from a bushel

In Wisconsin we should not guage our pig crop by the amount of corn in field or crib. We should grow the pig largely on pasture, legume hay, roots and dairy by-products, feeding only sufficient concentrates to keep him gaining steadily. Merely during the short finishing period must we feed a liberal ration of corn. This corn required for finishing the pig can be raised on almost every Wisconsin dairy farm. The cows will take care of the stover and some of the corn, while the rest of the corn will put the necessary finish on the porker.

In order that we may produce more and better pork our pigs must have more legumes, both pasture and hay, more rape, more roots, more bone forming mineral matter, more exercise and more skim milk or whey. Hence the rise of the hog in Wisconsin will follow the adoption of a more economical system of feeding and the progress of dairying.

Outlet for Feeders Depends on Corn Crop.

"If the corn crop turns out all right there will be a big demand for feeding cattle and sheep this fall," says one of the most prominent feeders of the Middle West. "Stock feeding is pretty general among the farmers of the Middle West, and as feeders of all classes of live stock made good money on stock fed last fall and winter, good feed crops will put them all in the humor to fill up again this year. Sheep feeding has grown greatly in popularity the last few years, the feeders have made money and they will provide an outlet for a large number of western-bred feeding cattle, sheep and lambs at Chicago and the River markets this summer and fall. The laying in of supplies has not as yet begun, the feeling being pretty general that the market will be lower later on, and then most of them would prefer to wait until they know about how the hay and corn crops are going to pan out. If crops are good, the demand for feeding sheep and lambs will be unprecedented. I believe there will also be a big call for feeding cattle under such conditions, as all who fed cattle last winter did very well, and many who did not feed will want to get into the game this year."

Much Needed Rain Falls in Corn Belt.

The corn crop and pastures are looking up. Some good rains have hit the corn belt during the past two weeks.

The reports show that showers have been pretty well distributed and growing conditions are a little improved. Iowa and Nebraska have good stands of corn and the fields are pretty well cleared of weeds. Illinois corn is a little late, but here, too, there is not much of a weed crop to interfere with speedy growth when the ground is well moistened. The whole crop is in a condition to boom when things are made a little more favorable. Drought has at least been partially broken, and the result is a more cheerful situation generally, which tends to put prospects ahead in a more agreeabble light.

R. M. Hampton is Made President.

At the fifteenth annual meeting of the Western Nebraska stockmen at Alliance it was found that the affairs of the association were in satisfactory shape, but a strong effort will be mde to strengthen the organization both numerically and financially to the end that its efficiency and influence may be increased. The big cow outfits are no longer in control and the smaller cattlemen and ranchers have more to do with the guiding of the destinies of the association than at any previous time.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, R. M. Hampton, Alliance; vice president, Al. H. Metzger, Merriman; secretary-treasurer, Charles C. Jameson, Ellsworth; executive committee, C. H. Tully, Lakeside; E. P. Meyers, Lena; Rube Lisco, Lodgepole; E. E. Lowe, Hyannis; W. M. Fleischman, Bailey; Robert Graham, Alliance; Herman Krause, Long Lake; J. H. Monohan, Whitman; E. M. Searle, Jr., Ogalalla; A. R. Modisett, Rushville; E. M. Eldred, Orlando; A. G. Davis, Hyannis; Dan. E. Hill, Gordon; Robert A. Cook, Lakeside; John Orr, Lewellen.

Corn Acreage is Record.

The report on corn shows the largest acreage ever planted in the United States or any other country. It is 5,312,000 acres, or 4.9 per cent larger than the finally revised area of last year, which was in turn the biggest acreage ever planted. The condition on July 1 was only a trifle above the average of the last ten years at 85.4 as against 85.1.

The condition shows important decreases in the states of largest production. Illinois is off 10 points, Missouri and Indiana each 9 points, Kansas 8 points, Nebraska and Ohio each 5 points and Iowa off 2 points. All these big states, however, show gains in acreage. The increase in Kansas is enormous at 15 per cent, while in the others of the seven large surplus states it is only 2 to 4 per cent.

The average condition of the oat crop on July 1 was 82.2, as compared with 91. last month; 88.3 July 1, 1909; 85.7 July 1, 1908, and 86.6 the ten-year average on July 1.

Comparisons for important oat states follow:

Washington	4.2	68.0	93.0	90.0	91
United States ...	100.0	61.6	92.8	92.7	87

The amount of wheat remaining on farms is estimated at 5.3 per cent of last year's crop, or about 38,739,000 bushels, as compared with 15,062,000 on July 1, 1909, and 38,708,000, the average amount on farms on July 1, for the past ten years.

The average condition of winter wheat on July 1, or when harvested, was 81.5, as compared with 80.0 last month, 82.4 at harvest 1909, 80.6 in 1908, and 81.3 the average at time of harvest for the past ten years.

Hay Crop Shows Lower Acreage.

The condition of clover on July 1 was 82.8, as compared with 83.8 on July 1, 1909; 95.5 on July 1, 1908, and 84.6, the ten-year average on July 1.

The average condition of the hay crop on July 1 was 80.2, as compared with 86.1 last month; 87.8 on July 1, 1909, and 92.6 on July 1, 1908.

The condition of timothy on July 1 was 79.2, as compared with 87.1 on July 1, 1909; 90.2 on July 1, 1908, and 85.4, the ten-year average on July 1.

Run Thursday of last week 11,762. It was a peddling deal from start to finish, with prices mostly 10@15c lower than the Wednesday average. As compared with best time that day some of the medium to choice lots showed 25c decline. The run was above all expectations and the demand at low ebb. The total supply included 67 loads of Texas cattle, 46 loads of which were on the market. There was also a liberal consignment of distillers. The beeves which averaged 1,233 lbs and 1,518 lbs and sold at the top price of $8.25 were handled by us. The next best price was $8.00. Marketing Friday 2,575. There was freer tone in the trade, but prices were not quotably higher. There were 16 loads of Texas cattle included in the arrivals. Best native beeves at hand brought $7.70 for 14 head of 1,426 lbs average. As compared with the close of the previous week prices showed 15@25c loss.

At the start of this week arrivals totaled 25,388. The offerings included a big proportion of short-fed and grassy kinds, forced in by droughty conditions. All classes of offerings were hit a hard blow, the decline being anywhere from 10@25c, more sales showing 10@15c loss than otherwise. The run was several thousand above all expectations and the demand weak and indifferent from all sources. The run included about 20 loads of Texans on sale, a liberal number of distillers and a five-car consignment of Dakota grass rangers. The top was $8.50, paid for 17 head of 1,587-lb Herefords from Missouri. However, there were very few sales above $7.85 and bulk of trading was at $6.35@7.75. Supplies Tuesday 5,904. Trade was slow, but prices steady. Run included 1,800 Texans, most of which were direct to packers. Best beeves offered included 18 head of 1,348 lbs average at $7.60. Supply Wednesday 16,000. All desirable offerings sold 10@15c higher and other kinds went merely steady. Top $8.60.

COWS AND HEIFERS.

Last week's trade in choice grades closed 30@40c higher than the finish of the previous week and 15@25c higher on other kinds. The only exception was for canners and cutters, which were not quotably higher. The key to the bullish situation was lighter supplies and a good demand. Prime heifers reached $6.60 and a similar class of cows $6.00.

There was a liberal supply of common to pretty good grades at the start of this week and these sold mostly 10@15c lower, although there were instances where greater decline was made. On the other hand strictly good to choice kinds were relatively scarce and most of the early trading was steady, although all price changes later on tended toward a lower basis. Market dull Tuesday and prices mostly 10@15c lower. Included was a liberal proportion of dairy offerings and these were poor sale. The big supply of Texas cattle was a bearish factor in the market. On Wednesday the better grades made a stronger range and other kinds went steady.

BULLS.

Prices at the close of last week showed mostly 25c advance for all desirable offerings, although poor light kinds did not show any advance. An occasional prime bull sold up to $6.00 during the week.

On Monday of this week the supply was liberal, demand indifferent and market uneven. Some of the better grades might have gone at steady rates early, but it was generally a 10@15c lower deal for other kinds. All price changes for bulls tended downward Tuesday. On Wednesday the plain and light weights sold lower and other kinds steady.

CHICAGO MARKET REVIEW, AND OUTSIDE MARKETS BY WIRE

CALVES.

The light run last week enabled sellers to boost prices accordingly and at the close they showed 75c @$1.00 advance over the previous week's close. Prime vealers reached $9.00.

In spite of the light run at the start of this week, buyers were indifferent bidders and succeeded in forcing a decline of 25@50c. There were few sales of vealers above $8.50, although one fancy assorted lot went at the outside price of $8.85. A good demand Tuesday enabled sellers to hold prices within 25c of last week's close. The practicable top was $9.00. The Wednesday trade was mostly 25c lower.

STOCKERS AND FEEDERS.

Top price and bulk sales of stockers and feeders this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Top Feeders.	Bulk Feeders.	Bulk Stockers.
This week	$6.10	$4.85@5.75	$4.00@4.85
Previous week	6.25	4.65 5.35	3.75 4.75
Year ago	5.25	4.00 4.85	3.60 4.25

As compared with the previous week's finish prices for good to choice offerings showed 10@15c advance at the close of last week, but the advance for the less desirable kinds was lost later in the week. During the week buyers were in liberal numbers, the sharp decline in previous weeks and additional showers stimulating them to greater action. Quality was lacking in most cases, there being a liberal proportion of common and medium steers.

There was an excessive supply at the start of this week and prices fell 15@25c. The demand from all sources seemed to be limited and trade ruled dull. Quality of arrivals did not show any improvement over the previous week, which was evidence of the fact that the country was dry and pasturage short. The increased supply of offerings met with an indifferent demand Tuesday and market had weak undertone. It was a dull deal on Wednesday and all price changes tended toward a weaker basis.

Good to choice feeders	$5 25 @	5 75
Poor to medium feeders	4 25	5 00
Good to choice stockers	4 50	5 00
Plain to medium stockers	3 75	4 25
Inferior to common stockers	3 25	3 65
Good to choice stock heifers	3 85	4 25
Common to medium stock heifers	3 40	3 65
Plain to good thin young cows	3 40	3 80

Hogs.

Bulk sales of hogs of respective weights this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Bulk 200 to 250 lbs.	Bulk 260 lbs and heavier.	Bulk 135 to 195 lbs.
This week	$8.65@9.00	$8.35@8.75	$9.00@9.15
Previous week	8.85 9.35	8.65 9.25	9.25 9.45
Year ago	7.55 8.30	7.70 8.35	7.45 8.15

On Thursday of last week receipts totaled 14,498. It was a hard market to quote, but prices were generally 10@20c under the previous day's average, or 25@35c lower than the good time early that day. A top of $9.45 was made for fancy light. However, there was little done over $9.30, that being strictly a market for light offerings. A little shipping trade in butchers was done early at $9.00@9.10, but local buyers bought similar offerings at $8.90@9.00 later. Good loads of heavy sows could not find outlet at $8.50 and 280 to 300-lb shippers sold at $8.90@9.00. Pieces of loads of big weight packers were hard to move at $8.00@8.25. Friday supply 14,759. Market was 10@20c lower. Bulk of offerings went under $9.00. A $9.30 top was made for assorted light. Most sales were at $8.50@9.00. such as went above $9.00 being lights and mediums. Marketing Saturday 6,687. Lights and mediums went anywhere from 5@15c higher, but heavy packers did not participate in the advance. As compared with the close of the previous week light and medium weights sold mostly 5@10c higher, while the weighty grades showed 15@25c loss.

Arrivals of hogs on Monday of this week were 36,128. The market was anywhere from 25@40c lower. The bulk sold at $8.40@8.70 and there was a sprinkling of rough offerings in pieces of loads down to $8.00. Fancy light sold up to $9.25, but the number of offerings which made $9.00 or even better did not cut much figure in the general market. Offerings weighing 280 lbs and up bore the brunt of the slump, regardless of quality. The average weight of hogs received at Chicago last week was 244 lbs, against 240 lbs the previous week and 225 lbs the corresponding week of last year. This is good evidence that big sows have been fed a liberal ration of corn. Supply Tuesday 11,694. Light and mixed weights sold to better advantage. Heavy grades opened 5@10c lower, but the whole market closed firm. Bulk of lights went at $8.90@9.20, with top at $9.25. Packing mixed ranged from $8.00@8.50 and to get into the $8.50 notch they had to weigh 240 to 260 lbs and show a good end. Choice 280 to 290-lb lots went at $8.60@8.65. Heavy packers sold at $8.25 down, according to the degree of coarseness they displayed. Run Wednesday 18,000. Opening 5@10c higher, market closed with advance lost. Top $9.30, but bulk sold at $8.45@8.90.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of hogs:

Sheep and Lambs.

Following shows top prices and bulk of sheep and lamb sales this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Sheep Top.	Sheep Bulk.	Lambs Top.	Lambs Bulk.
This week	$4.35	$4.00@4.30	$7.25	$6.50@7.00
Last week	5.00	4.25 4.65	8.60	7.60 8.15
Year ago	5.30	4.50 5.15	8.90	7.50 8.40
2 years ago	4.60	4.00 4.50	7.00	5.75 6.75

Receipts Thursday 23,178. It was mostly a 10@25c lower deal in sheep and a 25c lower one for lambs. Market was very uneven and got worse as the day advanced. Native lambs topped at $8.15, but $7.50 $7.75 bought a good to choice kind. Idaho range lambs of a fair class went at $7.20, with the feeders at $6.60. The practicable top for native ewes was $4.25. Prime fed-western wethers reached $5.00 and Idaho grassers $4.70. Friday run 18,418. The lamb trade was near demoralization and further declines of 25@50c were recorded. Choice assorted lots had to sell at $7.50, although one fancy lot of 70 lbs average went early at $8.00. Bulk of sheep showed 10c loss. An extra class of fed-western ewes reached $4.25. Oregon yearlings went steady, with the feeding end at $5.00 and the heavier weights for slaughter at $4.80. Idaho yearling breeding ewes brought $5.80. Compared with the close of last week the bulk of the lambs went 75c@$1.00 lower. While some of the choice sheep sold steady, other kinds went 15@25c lower. Feeding sheep and lambs held steady for the week, but breeding ewes sold 15@25c lower.

At the start of this week receipts were 34,693. This was the heaviest supply since last October. Lambs sold largely at a 25c decline from last Friday and $1.25@1.50 lower than high day of last week, which was Tuesday. Top for both natives and range lambs was $7.25. Sheep went 10@25c lower. A speculator paid $4.35 for a short deck of prime western wethers and the next best price was $4.30. Western yearling breeding ewes sold at $5.75, feeding yearling wethers at $4.90 and good to choice native breeding ewes at $4.00@4.25. Supply Tuesday 25,537. Good demand for good to choice offerings at firm prices. Common and medium lots were hard to move. Both native and western lambs reached $7.25, choice western wethers went at $4.30 and feeders up to $4.25. Feeder buyers went above the killers' limit for western yearlings, paying as high as $5.15. Marketing Wednesday 18,000. Opening steady the market pretty soon weakened and prices ruled 15@25c lower. The late trade was very dull and weak.

South St. Joseph Markets.

[Special telegram from Clav, Robinson & Co.]

South St. Joseph, Mo., July 12.—Best cattle sold steady with the close of last week, but other kinds went 10@20c lower. Grass westerns lost 10@15c. She stock as well as stockers and feeders held steady. We topped today's market 50c per cwt by landing a load of 1,260-lb Nebraska fed beeves at $8.00. We also topped the calf market with two loads of 171 lbs average at $8.50.

Prices for hogs fell 40c under last Saturday, with top $8.75 and bulk $8.25@8.55.

Sheep and lambs sold 25@35c lower than last week's close. Top native lambs $7.25. Idaho wethers made $4.00.

East St. Louis Markets.

National Stock Yards, Ill., July 12.—Good to choice steers sold about steady with last week's close, while the fair to fairly good kinds lost 10@15c and common to good grades 25@35c. Trade was very irregular. Heifers declined 20@30c and cows 15@25c. Best beeves brought $8.25, heifers $7.25 and cows $5.50. There was a liberal supply of quarantine cattle. On Monday prices fell 15@25c and today's market was about steady.

Prices for hogs were lowered 25@35c from last Saturday. Hogs weighing 200 lbs or heavier sold around $8.80, butchers and shippers at $9.15, light weight shippers at $9.45 and pigs and throw-outs at $8.00@8.40.

Compared with last week's close lambs went $1.00 lower and sheep 25@50c lower. Best lambs early today at $7.00, although on the late market $6.50 obtained similar grades, with a good class as low as $6.00. Very few sheep going over $4.00. Best breeding ewes at $4.75 and stockers at $2.50@3.00.

Assurance of Strong Beef Demand.

During the last two years there has been a very decided increase in the value of meats in the market centers and in the local butcher shops. Within the last ten months this increase has been phenomenal. Incident to this remarkable appreciation in values of food products a wave of protest swept over the country that in some sections became a perfect hysteria, resulting in the ill-advised and futile "meat boycott." As a result of this popular outcry against high prices of food products investigations were inaugurated by mayors of cities, judges of courts, and by state and national authority. In the public discussion of this question the "beef trust," the "farmer trust," the tariff and the over-production of gold were given as the cause of these high prices. The chief cause, however, was generally overlooked, viz: The continued high price of grain and the consequent scarcity of fat stock. The number of cattle in the United States has been steadily decreasing for several years, and to those in a position to know this fact, the shortage in cattle is appreciable. According to the report of James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, we had 2,186,000 fewer cattle Jan. 1, 1909, than we had Jan. 1, 1907, while our population has rapidly increased. In 1840 the proportion of cattle to population in the United States was such that we had .88 of an animal to each person, .81 in 1860, .79 in 1880 and .69 in 1900. At present it is quite probable that this ratio has fallen to .50 to each inhabitant, owing to the rapid decrease in our cattle caused very largely by the breaking up of the large cattle ranches of the West. If this ratio of decrease should continue for a few decades the United States may cease to be a beef exporting nation. The earliest obtainable data of our exports of beef products are for the five years, from 1851 to 1855, during which we exported an average of 32,000,000 lbs annually. This export trade increased rapidly and reached its climax in 1906, when we sent abroad 733,000,000 lbs. Since then there has been a rapid decline in this trade, our total exports in 1909 being only 419,000,000 lbs, a loss of at least 40 per cent from total of 1906. A corresponding decrease was shown also in other meat products than beef.

This constant decrease of cattle and rapid increase of population certainly presages a continued strong demand for beef at remunerative prices, and assuredly affords a bright outlook for men who are breeding good cattle.—R. G. Groves.

Attention, Western Range Cattlemen.

Undoubtedly you will be closely interested in the range market at Chicago as at other points from now on. To keep you in touch with the trade it will be our pleasure to send you the Weekly Live Stock Report, which we publish, as also other market information, and we hope that you will let us know at any time we can serve you in any capacity. We want your business and are prepared to give you the very best of service. Our method of handling range cattle is fully described as follows:

Without a doubt there is going to be liberal movement of range cattle to market this season on account of dry weather, and it is our advice to begin shipping just as soon as the condition of the cattle will allow. By August 1 we believe the movement will be in full swing, and we think it well to keep the better and fatter cattle coming right along.

With a prospect of only moderate supplies of good corn-fed cattle we believe the better grades of rangers will find ready outlet, but we are bound to have a large lot of cattle in just fair to medium flesh, and will probably see some recession of values on that class. The corn crop promises well, so that we ought to see a good outlet for feeders, more particularly anything of desirable type.

A few sales of range cattle at Chicago thus far this season follow:

Very Warm and Dry in Montana.

David G. Browne, president of the Stockmen's National Bank at Fort Benton, Mont., writes under date of July 5: "This is the worst year so far as moisture is concerned that I ever witnessed in Montana. We have not had even a decent shower until yesterday, when we had a local rain. I am told, however, that on account of the abundance of feed last year that cattle are in pretty fair shape. I think shipments will commence the latter part of this month. It has been very warm and dry all spring and summer."

Conditions in Colorado Show Improvement.

Our Denver house writes us as follows: The northern portion of Colorado has recently had heavy rains and the outlook for crops is considerably improved. The first cutting of alfalfa was very light, but the second cutting should be an average crop. Beets are coming along fine, although the acreage is considerably lighter than last season. The potato crop is good at the present time, while the wheat crop will be fully an average with last year.

The general crops throughout Arkansas Valley are good, although rain is needed at the present time. Reports from the San Luis Valley indicate that the prospects for a pea crop were never better, and their grains in equally good shape, while the alfalfa stand is heavy, although they need rain at the present time.

While there have been a few scattered shipments of range cattle on the market, which sold at very satisfactory prices, the indications are that the season will open up about the middle of this month, and from the first on we look for liberal supplies, as grass throughout the Western Slope is curing up in good shape and cattle are putting on flesh fast.

Sheep Feeding Stations Around Chicago.

Professor W. C. Coffey of the Illinois Experiment station writes of the great sheep feeding stations adjacent to Chicago as follows: With respect to control of receipts so that violent fluctuations in prices do not occur within a very short space of time, the Chicago market has greatly improved during the last twenty years. Until the sheepmen of the West became fully recognized as specialists in mutton production, treacherous and violent fluctuations were matters of almost daily occurrence. There are records of declines of 50c per cwt in prices within an hour. The large western shipper was obliged to forestall such ruinous conditions. This was done by establishing feeding stations on the railway lines tributary to Chicago from the West. Most of these are owned and controlled by the railroad companies, although a few are owend by private parties. The large shipper consigns his sheep to some of these feeding stations and then awaits the advice of his commission firm as to the number of sheep and the time he shall send them to market. A shipment of say 20,000 sheep is thus distributed over a period of a week or ten days instead of all being dumped on the market on the same day. Since from 60 to 75 per cent of the sheep reaching the Chicago market are consigned first to the feeding stations, it can readily be seen how much they aid in preventing market glutting. The record run of sheep on the Chicago market for one day is little less than 60,000 and a run of 40,000 is considered very heavy, but were it not for the feeding stations it is claimed that there would frequently be days when the run would be from 60,000 to 100,000 head.

Western Shipments will be Unusually Heavy.

C. A. Cull of Buffalo, Wyo., writes under date of July 8: "I have just returned from a 100-mile trip down the Powder River into Montana and found the entire country burned out with the exception of narrow strips where they had local showers. It will be a case of shipping out an unusual number of cattle and sheep. Range conditions in this country are worse than they have been before for years. There is no feed and a very light hay crop is in sight."

Bear in Mind South St. Paul Market.

With the opening of the western range grass cattle and sheep season it is well for shippers who route their stock via South St. Paul to bear in mind that that market is not without importance. We would advise shipping direct to Chicago with the privilege of stopping at South St. Paul. In this way the South St. Paul market can be tried and if the owners feel that their stock is not bringing market value the shipment can come on to Chicago on a through rate. If sold at South St. Paul freight of course will be charged proportionately. Another strong point in favor of stopping at South St. Paul is that not only can the stock be fed and watered, but such sorting done as may enable the shipment to be more expeditiously handled upon arrival at Chicago by our staff of sales and yardmen. They are at all times on hand to care for shipments and to see that they are handled in such manner that the owners' interests are best served.

Packers Take Serious View of Situation.

In explaining the decreased dividends of Swift & Company, an eastern writer presents the following: There is no question that, partly from necessity and partly because it has become something of a popular fad, the meat consumption of the United States during the past year has decreased between 6 and 8 per cent, and some authorities place the drop at as high as 10 per cent. This letting-down in demand has in one way been a blessing in disguise, as with a shortage in supply, which at one time promised to become acute, higher prices would otherwise have been inevitable. There is no doubt that some of the Chicago packers have been taking a serious view of the cattle situation in the West. One authority, citing the case of Montana, states that several of the grazing states will next year have less than 50 per cent of the cattle herded a few years ago. In Montana 20,000 to 40,000 herds have this year been cut down to a few thousands, and thousands of acres of grazing lands have been thrown into grain.

Looks Good to Mr. Clay.

John Clay of Chicago, president of the Butte County Bank, arrived in the city last Friday and remained over until Tuesday of this week. While here he attended a meeting of the board of directors of the institution, at which time he was shown a statement of the condition of the bank made at the close of business on June 30, the day previous to his arrival. This statement shows that the total deposits on that date foot up to the neat sum of $570,422.03, against $443,138.23 as shown by a statement of a corresponding date of one year ago, an increase of $127,283.80 in the deposits of the bank in one year. In consequence of this Mr. Clay can hardly be blamed for expressing himself as being well pleased with the increased business, showing, as it does, that the people have confidence in the institution.

Mr. Clay visited the Belle Fourche Valley Bank at Vale, of which he is also president; the Reclamation State Bank at Newell and the Irrigator State Bank at Nisland, in both of which, as well as the other two named, and the Little Missouri Bank at Camp Crook, he is one of the heaviest stockholders, and he also expressed himself as being well satisfied with the volume of business that the country banks are handling. He looks forward to largely increased business in the banking institutions located in the irrigated section of the county.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

O. Malberg, one of our worthy and active South St. Paul friends, had two cars of stock there.

Frank Dovey of Branch county, Mich., writes: "Every stockman should take the REPORT."

J. R. Washburn, whose headquarters are in Mc Lean county, N. D., had a load of cattle at South St. Paul.

Our esteemed patron, J. R. Jones of Richland county, N. D., had in a mixed shipment at South St. Paul.

R. Q. Duncan of Louisa county, Ia., writes: "Regarding my load of sheep, I was well pleased with the sale."

W. E. Stevens of Douglas county, Minn., was represented on the South St. Paul market with a mixed consignment.

Our valued customer, the Farmers Elevator Co. of St. Croix county, Wis., marketed at South St. Paul a load of cattle.

O. G. Greeno, a keen and active buyer of Marshall county, S. D., was represented at South St. Paul with a mixed load.

E. C. Decock of Lyon county, Minn., prominent breeder of Shorthorn cattle, disposed of a load of cattle at South St. Paul.

Atkinson Bros., the well-known sheepmen of Tom Green county, Tex., had a large string of wethers on the Kansas City market.

J. K. Russell, owner of a section of land in Brown county, S. D., was at South St. Paul with two cars of cattle and one of hogs.

Bruvier & Jones, who do a very large cattle business in Maricopa county, Ariz., had a consignment to our Kansas City house.

H. I. Emmitt of Taylor county, Ia., was on the South St. Joseph market July 7 with a car of lambs which our house sold at $7.75.

M. M. Winter of Beadle county, S. D., had feeder cattle here this week and E. Witham of Adair county, Ia., marketed a load of steers.

J. Liddle, who farms three quarter sections of land in Walsh county, N. D., helped swell the South St. Paul receipts with a shipment of cattle.

Skoog & Anderson, extensive shippers and located in Kandiyohi county, Minn., patronized the South St. Paul market with a shipment of hogs.

H. Weide of Woodson county, Kan., had a shipment of cattle at Kansas City and Hugh McMillan of Marshall county, Kan., marketed hogs.

Wm. Hill of Republic county, Kan., one of the old-time and valued patrons of our Kansas City house, had a shipment of hogs to them last week.

July 2 our house at South St. Joseph topped the hog market with 84 head, averaging 187 lbs, at $9.12½, shipped by Stitt & Co. of Page county, Ia.

E. L. Lerance of Laclede county, Mo., had a deck of 65-lb lambs on the East St. Louis market July 7 for which our house obtained $7.50, top for Southwestern lambs.

Wiconsin was represented on the cattle market at Chicago on Tuesday of this week with a mixed shipment from J. D. Hatch of Grant county and C. Earley of Polk county.

A. J. Williamson of Harrison county, Mo., favored our South St. Joseph house on July 5, 6, 7 and 8 with shipments of native sheep and lambs which sold at satisfactory prices.

J. R. Parkinson, vice president of the Central Investment Co., with headquarters in Wabash county, Ill., writes: "Sheep arrived in good condition. They are what I was after. This is my first venture in sheep. I am after information and do not know of a better place to get it than from you. We have the best prospect for corn we ever had in this part of the state."

T. S. Cartwright of Marshalltown, Ia.

Mr. Cartwright is well-known in farming and feeding circles of the Middle West. He feeds 600 to 1,000 hogs annually and finishes 150 cattle a year for the markets. Besides he owns and supervises the farming of 700 acres of farming land that is worth from $125 to $150 per acre. His cattle, as well as his hogs, very frequently top the Chicago market. "I have found the feeding of cattle and hogs very profitable," remarked Mr. Cartwright. My faith in raising and fattening hogs as a money making proposition is great. I breed from 125 to 150 sows every year and raise from 700 to 800 pigs The breeding of gilts in preference to old sows that are known to be good mothers is a poor policy. I make a business of keeping my sows as long as they breed well regardless of market conditions. It costs but little to keep them on grass during the summer. As to re-breeding for a second litter the same year, I find this not very advisable where one has a larg bunch of hogs and has to depend on hired help to do most of the work. In my opinion prices for hogs will continue on a level that will make their production very profitable for the breeder and feeder. Iowa is raising very few cattle and unless supplies are laid in later feeding and grazing of cattle will be much shorter than that of late years. I have had no cholera among my hogs for twenty-five years. I furnish good, clean quarters for them, give them ground charcoal, copperas and salt and dip every sixty days during the warm weather. Thus they are kept clean both internally and externally." Mr. Cartwright has sold his cattle and hogs through Clay, Robinson & Co. for a great many years and he says there is no firm like C., R. & Co.

Gladney & Mitchell of Lincoln county, Mo., were represented on the East St. Louis market July 6 with a deck of 70-lb lambs for which we obtained $8.00, the top for natives.

Alfred W. Walker of Cascade county, Mont., writes: "Enclosed please find 50c for the REPORT, which is a great help in keeping one posted on values of wool and mutton."

Jacob Weiss, the famous farmer and feeder of Crawford county, Ia., was on the Chicago market July 6 with 33 head of 1,462-lb beef steers which we landed at the very pleasing price of $8.25.

The pinnacle for feeder lambs at Chicago last week was $6.65, being secured by us for 447 head, averaging 58 lbs. They were from the E. A. Van Sicklin range in Washington county, Idaho.

J. M. Summerville of Redwillow county, Neb., was represented on the East St. Louis market July 7 with eight cars of cattle which averaged 1,324 lbs and were sold by our house at $7.10. These cattle were of good quality, pretty-fat but very green.

Under date of July 8, Edward Reineke of Pottawattamie county, Ia., writes: "We are having fine weather. It is a little dry for pasture, but the corn is fine for this time of year and most all laid by."

M. G. Robinson of Cottonwood county, Minn., writes: "Please find enclosed 50c to pay for the REPORT. I cannot get along without your paper and consider it a most reliable report on the stock markets."

J. Abplamalt of Worth county, Mo.; J. W. Gibson of Buchanan county, Mo.; J. A. Deakins and W. B. Porter of Clinton county, Mo., were among the prominent sheep shippers who had stock at South St. Joseph.

Gus Borg, the large live stock dealer of Riley county, Kan., writes our Kansas City house: "Your letter enclosing account sales received. Thank you for the same. I am more than pleased with the sale you made."

Peter Hopley & Son, fanciers of fine cattle and highly successful feeders, had on the Chicago market July 6 from Cass county, Ia., 94 head of 1,475-lb beef steers for which we obtained the satisfactory price of $8.25.

F. F. Faber of Carroll county, Ohio, had 80 wethers on the East St. Louis sheep market July 7. They averaged 95 lbs and were sold by our house at $5.40, which price was 15c per cwt higher than any other wethers made.

Thomas McGirl of Yellowstone county, Mont., writes: "I have sold the remains of my old A herd to G. E. Berg and advised him to ship to your firm. So after twenty years' business I bid you good-by and God speed."

Benj. Fenstermaker of Muscatine county, Ia., writes our South Omaha house: "Yearlings arrived O. K. and are satisfactory in every respect. Thank you for your good judgment. Will be in the market for some lambs later on."

The highest price paid for yearling breeder ewes at Chicago thus far this season is $6.00. We obtained this figure at Chicago on July 6 for 762 head of 83 lbs average, they belonging to H. L. Mitchell & Co. of Washington county, Idaho.

H. B. Cobb, a pioneer and highly successful farmer and feeder of Ogle county, Ill., was on the Chicago market July 6 with 27 head of 1,435-lb beef steers which we sold at $8.40. We also obtained the same price for 16 head of 1,509 lbs average belonging to G. A. Roberts, a prominent farmer and feeder of Boone county, Ind.

Among our patrons at South St. Paul on Friday and Saturday of last week were Fred Schulte of Pierce county, Wis.; M. Burns of Pierce county, Wis.; J. R. Jones of Richland county, N. D.; I. O. Hull of Richland county, N. D.; Merricks Bros. of Watonwan county, Minn.; P. A. Johnson of Kandiyohi county, Minn.; Chas. Struve of Pierce county, Wis.; Thompson & Sons of Todd county, Minn.

Dupage county, Ill., was represented on the Chicago cattle market July 6 with quite a shipment by the well-known and successful feeder, M. C. Van Norman. The sales were made by us and follow: Twenty-eight head of 1,362 lbs average at $8.35 and 79 head of 1,290 lbs at $8.20. These cattle were natives and westerns mixed and were bought last fall at $4.25. They made an excellent account of themselves in the feed lot and showed the excellent selling margin of $4.00 per cwt over first cost.

W. C. Brown of Lucas county, Ia., was on the Chicago market with three loads of cattle and one of hogs for which we obtained very pleasing prices. Mr. Brown with his son, David Brown, comprise one of the most enterprising farming and feeding firms in that part of the state. They farm 800 acres of fine land and expect to feed cattle and hogs extensively from now on. The senior Mr. Brown started shipping to J. M. Robinson & Co. and when that firm was succeeded by Clay, Robinson & Co. he continued to send his stock our way.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

Our Kansas City house topped the veal calf market on July 11 by selling a load of Kansas offerings, averaging 173 lbs. at $8.50 for J. W. Osborn of Marion county, Kan., and also a bunch of 159 lbs average for E. Maple of Butler county, Kan., at the same price.

J. M. Enochs of Sheridan county, Wyo., writes our South Omaha house: "Am in receipt of account sales of my cattle, which exceeded my expectations by a long shot, taking into consideration the poor condition of the stuff. I am well pleased indeed."

Top for range lambs at Chicago on July 5 was $8.00. This price was secured by us for 619 head of 62 lbs average, they belonging to E. A. Van Sicklin of Washington county, Idaho. We also sold his 304 feeding lambs of 58 lbs average at the top price of $6.60.

Following shippers and feeders were on the South St. Joseph market with hogs July 8: F. M. Haines of Nodaway county, Mo.; H. S. Rhoades of Atchison county, Mo.; J. R. Ray and J. W. Oliver of Platte county, Mo.; Rothenberger & R. of Richardson county, Neb.

Bicknell Gemmell, extensive shippers of sheep and cattle from the Northwest, had five cars of their yearling wethers on the South St. Joseph market July 5 from Morrow county, Ore., which our house sold at $5.15, averaging 90 lbs, and also a car of feeders at $4.95.

Isaac W. Hanthorn represented Henry county, Mo., on the East St. Louis market July 7 with 21 head of 1,300-lb beef steers which our house landed at $7.35. These cattle were of good quality, but were very green and not as fat as they should have been to bring out strong competition.

Stuebe Bros., one of the heaviest shipping firms to South St. Paul and Chicago, with headquarters in Brown county, Minn., marketed a shipment of calves and hogs at Chicago on Friday of last week through our house at pleasing prices, considering the condition of the trade at that time.

Bicknell & Gemmell had on the Chicago market July 5 from their range in Baker county, Ore., a string of sheep. We handled the same and landed their 855 yearlings of 89 lbs average at $5.00 and their wethers of 94 lbs average at $4.75. These prices were the tops for the respective classes.

Among the prominent dealers who disposed of butcher stock through our Chicago house lately were: G. N. Patterson of Kossuth county, Ia.; P. Brendt of Grant county, Wis,; J. Leibee of McDonough county, Ill.; Langie Bros. of Clayton county, Ia.; J. A. Lutz of Wood county, Wis.

The following shippers and feeders were on the South St. Joseph market July 7 with hogs: A. J. Williamson of Harrison county, Mo.; H. S. Rhoades and E. H. White of Atchison county, Mo.; Wm. Stahl of Ringgold county, Ia.; Stitt & Co. of Page county, Ia.; C. R. Brown of Mitchell county, Kan.

Among the well and favorably known shippers of hogs for whom we had the pleasure of handling shipments last week were: T. Lawler and O. Curtis of Warren county, Ill.: C. I. Stark and F. L. Berger of Dupage county, Ill.; O. Olsen of Kossuth county, Ia.; J. Weiss of Crawford county, Ia.; M. Schoonmaker of Will county, Ill.; J. H. Charlton of Pocahontas county, Ia.; Blakely Bros. of Mercer county, Ill.; C. F. McParland of Delaware county, Ia.; J. H. Greene of Beadle county, S. D.; J. H. Latta of Harrison county, Ia.; Paullina Live Stock Co. of O'Brien county, Ia.; Paine & McDonald and S. Schultz of Kossuth county, Ia.; Chas. Baskin of Hardin county, Ia.

We desire to make mention of the following parties who are well known in feeding or shipping circles and who sold cattle at satisfactory prices through our Chicago house last week: W. H. Brooks, O. A. Curtis, Philip Cadle and Ira Curtis of Warren county, Ill.; W. J. Boyd of Mahaska county, Ia.; W. McKeevee of Ford county, Ill.; W. E. Tallman of Jones county, Ia.; Ira Smith of Menard county, Ill.; J. M. May of Lucas county, Ia.; J. H. Chariton of Pocahontas county, Ia.; R. Spire of Tama county, Ia.; H. F. Dayton of Adams county, Ill.; J. Foley of Mercer county, Ill.; Miller & Highmore of Sangamon county, Ill.; L. Watson of Dekalb county, Ill.; C. D. Kingman of Coles county, Ill.; R. W. Simpson of Dupage county, Ill.; P. P. Staver of Stephenson county, Ill.; M. G. Van Horn of Will county, Ill.

H. B. Cobb of Compton, Ill.

Mr. Cobb is one of the most successful farmers and feeders of the Middle West. He has fed cattle every year for 47 years, commencing in 1863. In that year he sold his cattle at home at $7.00 per cwt and the same class of cattle would not bring much more than that figure at this time. He proudly states that he has not sold one bushel of corn off his farm in forty-five years, marketing the same by the beef and the pork route. He says that during all that period he has made money in feeding cattle and hogs every year. He migrated from Massachusetts to Illinois fifty-eight years ago. At that time he homesteaded 160 acres and paid $1.00 an acre for the same. Mr. Cobb started out without a cent. His backing was ambition, good health and willingness to work. He is now one of the largest tax payers in that country. His first tax was 60c, and now amounts to around $1,000. Two years ago it reached $1,500 or around $4.00 per day. He owns 1,000 acres of land in Illinois, besides very fine farm holdings in Iowa, and would refuse an offer of $200 per acre for the land. At the time he started to feed he stated that good to choice feeding cattle of good weights could be had at $3.00@3.50, corn was worth 40c per bushel then and hay had a feeding value of $4.00 per ton. Mr. Cobb has shipped to Clay, Robinson & Co. for the past twelve years, as well as buying cattle through our firm for many years. He was one of the first shippers to the Union Stock Yards and is one of the oldest continuous feeders in the country. "The firm of Clay, Robinson & Co. consists of very nice fellows," remarked Mr. Cobb, "and is one of the best liev stock commission firms in the business. It is quite difficult to say which of their business features are the best, as all are so very fine."

Timely Rains Fall in Wyoming.

A message from Cheyenne, Wyo., reads: "Wyoming stockmen are taking a more hopeful view of range conditions and the possibility of having some feed for fall and winter. The rains of the last few days were not only welcome, but will undoubtedly do the ranges a vast amount of good, although coming too late to insure a supply of good feed for fall and winter.

"FROM CHUTE TO COUNTER"

This Is How Your Range Cattle Will Be Handled If Consigned to Clay, Robinson & Co.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s range cattle section of the yards is entirely removed from its native consignments. Here we have a broad area of pens, these being of every size, from one car capacity to twenty. Receiving the cattle from the chutes they are brought over to this section, where after being penned they are sorted under the salesmen's supervision "for quality." We sort our cattle when necessary for tops, seconds and tailends, the object being to get the most dollars out of them for the shipper. We have been criticized (though only twice) by owners for sorting their cattle, but they really had no grounds for complaint, as it would be much easier for us to sell cattle all together, thereby saving the time, labor and trouble necessary in sorting, but where a drove of cattle consists of several different grades, some of which suit one class of buyers and some another, it is absolutely essential that we classify them or else sell them at a sacrifice to one buyer for less than they are worth and let him do the sorting. Then the work of selling is done. Meantime the cattle are fed and watered. Pens are hayed in advanced, that there may be no delay in waiting for the wagon. Men are assigned to the task of watering, the plan being to allow a efew head only at a time at the trough. With the cattle sorted and yarded accordingly, and in many cases sold, the inspectors do their work. It is easy work until a doubt or disagreement arises concerning the "holding" brand. Then the "critter" must be roped, thrown or tied and clipped. Frequently the animal is marked "hold" on their books, for Texas has to be reckoned with occasionally, in the case of a steer shipped north by mistake or bearing no northern brand to fully determine its Montana or Dakota ownership. Nothing escapes these keen-eyed inspectors, and woe unto the man that has the temerity to put a bunch of cattle over the scales before these autocrats of the brands have inspected them. Thus it is that on a busy day cow stuff—the last to be inspected—has to go unweighed until the following day. The buyers understand this and there is but little "kicking." With the cattle sold and inspected comes really the most important part of the work, and that is weighing each and every brand separately and then seeing that the scale tickets are marked with the proper brand. It requires the services of a man who must be able to read brands accurately. The method is as follows: Here is a pen of forty cattle. There are, say, twenty different owners. The one or more cattle of each brand are cut out and passed over the scale, then of another brand, and so on. The man superintending the weighing has a blank card in his hand; upon this he puts the pen number, then as each brand goes over the scales he marks his card 1, 2, 3, etc., putting the figure opposite the brand in the order in which the cattle passed over the scales. As the scale tickets come from the weigher they are marked in the same numerical order by the man who receives them and who at the same time notes if the weight shown on the beam agrees with the ticket, and enters it upon his manifold accordingly. This latter is a triplicate record, and for the use of the office—the day's transactions being thus recorded and made easily available for wiring, letter writing and reportorial purposes. A special carrier takes the tickets to the office and the clerical part of the work commences. The tickets are figured, the duplicate being sent to the buyer, the original to the account sales clerk. He must of necessity await the inspector's tally, but as in most cases his tickets are already marked, a great deal of billing can be done. A strenuous effort is made to get as many bills away the same day as possible, the clerks working long after a great many people have retired to effect this. In any event it is completed the next day, unless some unusual circumstance arises.

Such is the modus operandi. The watchword is "system." Each man knows exactly what is expected of him. One would think that in the handling of a hundred cars of range cattle, representing twice as many owners, probably, the utmost confusion would reign. But method is the guiding star, and it is to this star that the "CLAY-R." boys "fix their wagon." Thus it is that at the final summing up it is found that each man's cattle have been handled and sold properly, weighed separately, and can be accounted to the owner promptly. Surely in the hands of a firm whose business is so systematized and at once so flexible to provide for changing conditions the interests of both the large shipper and the small are beyond question safe.

South Dakota Calf Crop is Short.

Veteran forecasters are busy people nowadays and the range run is naturally claiming a large portion of their atention. Most of the old-timers assert that grass shipments this fall will carry a larger feeder end than last year, but there are evidently a few growers who are in shape to plump up their cattle properly.

Samuel Morris of Rapid City, S. D., who is a prominent ranchman and a stanch friend of Clay, Robinson & Co., says that recent rains have given grass a new start in that part of the country and that there will be few feeders in the South Dakota run.

"The beef crop will not be very large, however," he said to a representative of the South Omaha Journal-Stockman, "as prices were too tempting last year and growers marketed closely. I should judge that there are hardly more than half as many cattle around Rapid City as there were at the opening of the range season last year.

"Calf crop was rather poor this spring and the number branded was only about 50 or 75 per cent as large as last year. The winter was a hard one on all kinds of stock and breeding stock did not come through in very good shape."

Mr. Morris says that the speculative demand for cows in the Belle Fourche and Rapid City country is very broad. One of the permanent buyers who covers Pennington and adjoining counties offers $30 per head for all the cows he can buy, herd count and herd quality.

All's Well in Sand Hill Country.

Bruce McCullough, editor of the South Omaha Journal-Stockman, was in the Sand Hills country of Nebraska recently, and in part says: "Nebraska certainly looks good to the eye. There may have been some fear of drouth, but the country does not look it now. Corn is a good color and clean and the present hot weather is just what is needs at this time.

Along about this time of the year the Sand Hills country usually looks dry and withered. This year it is as green as it generally is in the early spring and the hills are green clear to the tops. The impression one gets from the car windows is that there are not enough cattle in the country to keep the grass down. As a matter of fact, however, the country adjoining the railroad is generally reserved for the winter range and the cattle are grazing further back. I talked to a great many stockmen both on the train and in Alliance and the concensus of opinion is that there are fully as many cattle to come out of the Sand Hills this fall as usual and they will be in excellent condition as a rule.

"After an unusually severe winter that used up about all the hay in the country, spring opened out earlier than usual the latter part of February. Grass got a good start and while it was later checked by cold, dry weather, it never lost its greenness and hay feeding was unnecessary. In spite of the green appearance of the grass, the growth was not at all rank and it looks very much as if the hay crop was going to be short and this is a serious matter inasmuch as there is little or no old hay in the country. It was all used up last winter.

"I hear a good deal of complaint of a short calf crop. There was no loss to speak of; the cows simply did not have the calves and fewer calves were branded in the Sand Hills this spring than for several seasons past. This means a liberal run of dry cows in the fall."

Northwest will Ship Sheep Early.

J. E. Butterfield, one of the largest range sheepmen in the vicinity of Murray, Idaho, and a patron of Clay, Robinson & Co., was at South St. Joseph looking over the situation in general. Mr. Butterfield had charge of about fourteen cars of sheep. Eleven cars of them belong to a syndicate of sheepmen who have ranges in the vicinity of Murray, and three to him individually. These sheep are now at Stouts, Kan., and will probably be shipped to the local market some time soon. He reports a good many sheep on the ranges, but not doing as well as was expected, the result of the drouth, whih is the worst experienced in years, not a drop of rain falling in four months. Everything is drying up and many stockmen all over the states of Oregon, Idaho, Wyoming, and Montana are shipping their sheep before they are in good marketable condition.

Rains Fine For Growing Corn.

[illegible] have fallen in the northern half of [illegible] Western Missouri and portions of Oklahoma, [illegible] needed moisture to the growing crops. These rains, together with last week's scattered showers, have been sufficient to put the corn in good condition. Dry weather in some sections was beginning to cause anxiety. Within a week nearly all of Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Missouri have received fair to good rains, putting the soil in fine condition for the rapid growth of corn. The wheat harvest is finished, so that the rains will not do any harm to wheat.

Nebraska Cattle Feeder Made a Handsome Profit.

G. W. Henry, the well-known feeder of McCool Junction, Neb., writes our Denver house under date of July 1: "In regard to the corn crop, I should say it is looking fine, but is about a week later than usual. The hay crop is exceptionally fine. Weather conditions are excellent for hay, corn and harvest. It is a little too early to give a definite answer as to who will feed here.

"Those fifty steers you (our Denver house) bought for me last November made a gain of 2½ lbs per head per day until they gained 16,000 lbs. They sold for $7.80 on the South Omaha market. The corn cost 50c bushel and alfalfa hay $7.00 per ton. You can see by these figures there was a handsome profit."

Hay a Light Crop and Pastures Short in Iowa.

Frank Raymond, the well-known cattle feeder of Farragut, Ia., writes under date of July 3: "The prospects for the corn crop are not very flattering. A very large percentage of the crop had to be planted two and three times. Consequently the plant is small, but in fairly good shape. Hay is a light crop and pastures short. Oats and timothy look like an average crop. Heavy hogs are pretty well cleaned up, and there is an average crop of spring pigs. No cattle eating corn to speak of and there are not many on grass. The price must change more before I care to load up with cattle. Plenty of others feel as I do."

Much Iowa Corn Laid By.

"Corn has made rapid progress, and is now up to the normal stage of growth for this time of the year," says the Iowa weather crop report. "Much of it has been laid by with the fields clean, the soil in good condition. Hay making is in progress and the crop, though lighter than for the past few years, is being secured in good condition. Small grain is holding its own against the droughty conditions, and with the exception of a few localities where showers have not occurred, is in very good condition and gives promise of good yields. Pastures have been seriously injured by the dry weather."

Using Lake Water at Chicago Now.

Filtered water taken from the Chicago river is no longer used for watering live stock at the Chicago Stock Yards, Lake Michigan extract being substituted, owing to a demand formulated by the shipping interest and the Live Stock Exchange. It was claimed that the filteration process purified the river water, but neither shippers nor the trade was satisfied and Lake Michigan water has an enviable reputation. Until a few years ago the Stock Yard Company had what was supposed to be an unlimited artesian supply, water spouting 30 feet into the air, but the flow gradually subsided until pumping is now out of the question. Resumption of use of lake water is giving shippers satisfaction.

Old Way and New Way.

"Raising hogs on corn and water the old way, as was the custom years ago, before we got to raising alfalfa, was slow and very expensive compared with more modern hog raising out where I am now," said a wealthy farmer of Ottawa county, Kan., who marketed a carload of 8-month-old hogs at Kansas City recently that weighed 200 lbs and sold at $9.45. "I often recall how we used to keep hogs until they were sometimes two years old before they were considered large enough to sell. In the meantime we would keep right on feeding them on corn. But up along the Solomon Valley in Kansas they do not raise hogs that way. If we did there would be no money in them. We have the alfalfa pastures for them, and raise the pigs that way, and then about the time they are six months old we begin to feed them on corn. At seven to nine months of age they are ready to market, and weigh around 200 to 250 lbs. The hog nine months old that weighs 250 lbs makes much better meat than the hog two years old that has been eating corn ever since it was a little pig. In producing hogs ready for market in this way, the farmer can make a great deal more money for the reason that he sells two crops of hogs now where but one was raised the old way. Farmers up along the Solomon Valley have found hog raising very profitable."

Wool Market Notes.

From Fort Benton, Mont., comes the news that 100,000 lbs of wool have been sold at 20c straight. The clip was from 15,000 wethers recently purchased from the Benton Sheep Co. by Utah parties.

Recent representative sales of wool at Boston follow: 5,000 lbs washed delaine, 35c; 10,000 lbs unwashed delaine, 24@26c; 25,000 lbs Ohio ¼ blood, 26@27c; 25,000 lbs Oregon wools, 18½@20c; 505,000 lbs territory wools, 17@23c.

It is thought that nearly 300,000 lbs of wool will be shipped east from Hugo, Colo. Wool buyers are few and far between and it looks as though sales will have to be made at a reduction of several cents under prices obtained last year.

There are now 1,500,000 lbs of wool in storage in three warehouses at Roswell, N. M., according to an exchange. Except for the sale of two small clips contracted for last winter at 17½c and 19½c, no sales have been made in Roswell this season.

It is expected that the sale of a large part of the spring wool clip of Western Texas will soon be made to eastern buyers. Large stocks of wool are now stored in the warehouses at the various concentrating points in the sheep raising territory.

A report from Sheridan, Wyo., is to the effect that Aber Bros. were offered 18c for their wool and were asked if 19c would buy the clip. The same is true of the Bell-Roberts Sheep Co. and Burns & Naylor. All of these firms reduced the offer of the eastern buyers.

A short time ago there were imports of cotton into this country from England, and now England is importing wool from the United States. The United States has always been a buyer at the London auction sales of wool, so the exporting to that country is quite a reversal.

Some of the more optimistic wool traders are of the belief that activity will develop before long. They base their conclusions on the fact that millmen, who are thereatening to keep out of the market until September, will be heavy buyers before that time unless they close down.

According to advices from Billings, Mont., very few sales of wool have been reported in that country, although shearing is in full blast all over Eastern Montana. It is stated that the Snidow Sheep Co. was offered 20⅝c for its clip, which will likely total around 500,000 lbs. The offer was turned down. Also it is claimed the Big Horn Sheep Co. was offered 21c for its clip, but so far no deal has been closed. Other reports tell of the Bert Shorey clip of around 50,000 lbs selling at 22c and of the G. R. Jameson clip of about 150,000 lbs at 20c. A few weeks ago buyers were offered 16@18c, and the higher offers lately would indicate that prospective buyers are willing to make concessions.

President George K. Reed of the Montana Wool Growers' Association, with headquarters at Helena, has issued an open letter to all of the wool growers of the state in which they are advised not to consign their wool. In part, he says: "From information gathered from many different sources it is deemed almost certain that by fall wool will be as high as last year, if not higher. During the last few days the conditions look much better than at any time prior. A sale of even a small clip at a low rate is unfortunate at this time and a grower accepting such prices as are now offered is showing exceedingly poor judgment. The buyers are now coming into the state in greater numbers and this is practically as early as they generally arrive, last year being a marked exception to this rule. There is absolutely no need for any wool grower to become panicky or to attempt to unduly hasten the sale of his clip. As far as our observations extended there has been no disposition on the part of any of the banking institutions of the state to hurry the grower into a sale and the only reasonable and business-like procedure at this time is to reject any and all offers at present prices."

BEST FOR THE WEST THEREFORE BEST FOR THE EAST

To successfully handle the enormous number of Western or so-called "range" cattle and sheep marketed during the short "season" of only twelve to sixteen weeks requires a large and perfect organization. For that reason you can count on the fingers of one hand the commission firms who figure in the Western trade. Of these few CLAY, ROBINSON & CO. stand head and shoulders above the rest—in volume of business handled, in representation at ten different markets, and in size, efficiency and perfection of organization. The same reasons which have made us the leading firm so far as the West is concerned also hold good as regards any part of the country. During the Western shipping season our native trade is handled by separate salesmen, and in every particular given equal consideration. Remember, that if you consign to CLAY, ROBINSON & CO., at any market, any class of stock, or any season of the year, you get absolutely the best service obtainable.

MARKETING THE CORN CROP THROUGH CATTLE

Shifting, changing, adjusting itself to the latest phases of our agriculture, the cattle business has assumed a variety of forms, some experimental, some forced by relentless circumstances. There is ever the fascination of the old-time plan of handling many cattle with little work, of fattening by the superabundance of feed lavishly offered through many months. Such a business smacks of plenty from the time the yields of many acres are thrown before the cattle until by one check the income of a year is received in a lump. Between the purchase and sale of the cattle many a dollar is accustomed to slip through the feeder's fingers, but until recent years men neither knew nor cared. Money accumulated for the purchase of more land and the ultimate expansion of the business. What more was needed?

But feeding cattle are scarcer and dearer and corn and land are high, so men have been driven reluctantly to seek new ways of turning the old trick of making money with a steer. Some have taken him in charge from birth and eliminated every superfluous item of expense; others are revising and improving the old system. There is a constant demand for some finished cattle of medium weight. Short feeding does not get the finish, and baby beeves do not have the weight. It is in producing these steers, just the kind which are scarce and highest priced now, that we find a suitable way of marketing the corn crop..

In Du Page county, Ill, M. C. Van Norman is working out a successful plan of feeding out the corn crop of his farm at Naperville, within thirty miles of Chicago. This may seem strange to those who think of farms gradually shrinking and being transformed into dairy barnyards and truck patches as they near the city, but Mr. Van Norman does a profitable feeding business almost at the outskirts of Chicago, operating on a plan which is merely a modernization of the old style. His success with steers where others have given it up and where neighbors go every day to the great city to work at various professions, is at once a tribute to his business ability and a vindication of the inherent stability of the cattle business under wise management.

Wednesday, July 6, he sold (through Clay, Robinson & Co.) in Chicago 110 steers, which represented his corn crop and some additional feed. The steers were bought Oct. 20, 1909, in Iowa and put right into his feedlot. At that time they

[illegible] and two years old and averaged 864 [illegible] cost was $4.25 per cwt. They were ev[illegible] high grades and about half of them were [illegible], one-third of them Angus and one-sixth of them Shorthorns, all dehorned, smooth and lowset. They were wintered in a feedlot of about a quarter of an acre protected on the north and east by a shed open toward the lot, and on the northwest by the barn and other farm buildings. Well water was supplied in a large tank in which a tank heater was kept burning enough of the time in winter to prevent the water from freezing.

Throughout the winter they were given eight shocks a day, nearly half an acre, of whole corn fodder with the ears. This was fed in open rack with perpendicular sides and about five feet wide, boarded up tight for about 30 inches. The steers were kept from jumping into it by a half-inch wire cable stretched two feet above the edge. This [illegible]dder barely furnished what roughage the steers [illegible] and they ate it up so clean that there was [illegible] of the stalks to be thrown out under [illegible] addition they had 3 lbs daily per [illegible] cottonseed meal to furnish the protein [illegible] shock corn. This was fed separately [illegible] This was not considered a heavy feed [illegible] though the best of the corn would hav[illegible] per acre. Probably the average [illegible] up to March 15, when the shock corn ran [illegible] peck a day. The steers were fo[illegible] to clean up the waste and coin it into money.

The winter feeding was done by one man along with other work. Fed so that the steers could not trample it under foot, shock corn offers a splendid combination of grain and forage. It is cheaply prepared, easily fed, palatable, and it provides for the utilization of the entire corn crop. The silo would use the crop more fully, but that will probably come in time. The present plan allows no waste of feed or damage to fields from pasturing standing stalks. Hay and grain are raised on the same ground and fed in the same package. The cattle like it that way and with the aid of cottonseed meal, a protected feed lot, a dry shed and water of moderate temperature, they thrive. In this small lot the cattle and hogs rapidly transform the corn crop into meat and manure.

When the supply of shock corn ran low in March, the steers were gradually changed to ground ear corn and alfalfa hay and, with about ten days in the transition, they were put on full feed of this March 15. The cottonseed meal ration was then slowly increased up to 5 lbs daily per steer. When they were on full feed they were turned to self-feeders in which the ground corn and the cottonseed meal were fed mixed. One car load of cold pressed cottonseed cake was fed and was liked by the steers as well as the regular meal. The alfalfa hay was of good quality, grown on the farm as a part of the scheme to make the 130-acre homestead yield its maximum of feed and income. The cattle put on flesh rapidly now and with the start made during the winter were in shape by May 1 to tempt most feeders to order cars. But they were gaining steadily and still had room for more fat and the market ahead looked inviting, so they were turned on a timothy pasture of 16 acres and the grain and hay supplied as before. Every day they lined up at the rack and took a fill of alfalfa hay as regularly as they visited the self-feeders and the pasture. In the self-feeders were daily mixed 35 bushels of ground corn and 500 lbs of cottonseed meal. During the last month some oats were mixed with the corn, amounting finally to 6 lbs daily per steer, and of course less corn was eaten then. The oats were fed to tempt the appetites of the cattle and overcome the laxativeness of the pasture. The pasture outgrew the cattle and so about the middle of June they were restricted to 8 acres, which proved enough for them and the rest were allowed to grow up for hay.

June 6 the steers were sold (by Clay, Robinson & Co.) in Chicago, 28 head of reds, averaging 1,362 lbs, at $8.35, only 20c below the extreme top, and the rest, averaging 1,290 lbs, at $8.20. The average weight of the entire lot was thus 1,308 lbs and the gain from Iowa to Chicago weights was 444 lbs per head. Considering the shipping shrink these steers made about 2 lbs gain per day for the 257 days they were in the feed lot, although they were not on full feed quite half of the time. It is not known how much gain the hogs made after the cattle, but they did well and were sold about six weeks ago.

The steers made money. With a $4.00 margin between buying and selling prices, reinforced by $9.25 hogs, cheap winter feed and good care, they could not help it. They left behind them a feed lot paved from two to three inches deep with manure, which Mr. Van Norman considers will be worth $1,000 to his farm. It will make it raise more feed for more cattle. And he has been steadily increasing his feeding operations. The plan of marketing the corn crop through young medium weight steers and supplying such other feed as is necessary to make a suitable ration for economical use of the feed has worked well, as has the plan of a light winter feed and a finish on grass for a summer market.—E. T. Robbins in Breeder's Gazette.

Very Wide Spread in Beef Steer Prices.

There is an unusually wide price margin between the poor and best beef steers. It is $4.05, against $2.55 a year ago. The top price is $1.10 and the bottom price 25c higher than one year ago. The bulk of sales this week at $6.15@7.85 compared with $6.00@7.10 a year ago. The wide price spread tells the story of an abundance of common and medium grades and a scarcity of choice to prime lots. It is believed that the margin will widen still more. The feed lots contain relatively few really choice [illegible] beeves, but there is an avalanche of half-fa[illegible] [illegible]sy natives, southwesterns pastured in Okla[illegible] and Kansas and northwest rangers appearing on the [illegible] make their presence felt very [illegible] pull on.

Rains Benefit Corn Crop Greatly.

The big corn crop is not yet made. This leaves the whole question of prices of live stock and meats of all kinds yet to be settled by the success or failure of the drought sections of last month to recover from the adverse weather effects.

The past two weeks brought general and heavy rains over the entire corn belt. They were of great benefit in preparing the big surplus corn states to withstand any period of hot dry weather during August.

While there has been less attention given to this feature of the year's production than to the partial calamity to the wheat crop of the Northwest, it is by far the more important. On "king corn" more than on any other crops in this country does general prosperity depend.

Corn furnishes the railroads east and west with their greatest tonnage in the shape of live stock, packing house products, lumber to build cribs, merchandise for prosperous producers, and a great carrying business in the grain itself.

So the good rains which spread over the whole central region south of the Chicago and Omaha line and from Colorado to the Ohio River brought great prospective benefit to every industry from the great industrial concerns down to the small shopkeeper.

Meat Exports at Low Ebb.

According to preliminary figures announced by the Government Bureau of Statistics, exports of meat and dairy products for June were the lowest for any one month in many years. They aggregated in value $8,844,186, compared to $12,393,600 for June, 1909. For the twelve months ending with June the total value of such exports is given as $109,836,528, compared to $146,280,220 for the preceding twelve months.

Exports of meat animals for June are valued at $223,009, compared to $1,158,469 a year ago. For the twelve months the totals for meat animal exports are given at $11,880,343, compared to $17,936,055 a year previous.

This is a loss in meat exports of 33 per cent for the month and over 20 per cent for the twelve months. It comes as startling official confirmation of the statement of J. Ogden Armour that "Meat export business from the United States to Europe is dead," comments the National Provisioner. The cheap live stock of our countries apparently is crowding our high-cost and high-grade meat out of European markets.

South Dakota Steers Bring Top Prices.

The South Dakota Agricultural College, Brookings, S. D., had 18 head of steers on the Chicago market July 13. They were hadled by Clay, Robinson & Co. The sales follow: Six head of 1,273 lbs average at $8.25; 6 head, 1,081 lbs, $7.85; 6 head, 896 lbs, $7.75. All three sales were the top for their respective weights. Barring the Illinois cattle at $8.15, which were also handled by Clay, Robinson & Co., the sale at $8.25 was 15c per cwt higher than any other corn-fed cattle brought that day.

Ohio-Texas Yearling Cattle at $7.90.

H. Gerlaugh, a noted feeder of Ohio, marketed at Chicago on July 13 from his feed lot at Osborn 22 head of 1,228-lb [illegible] of steers which Clay, Robinson & Co. sold at [illegible] sale was 15c per cwt higher than an[illegible] for yearling cattle that da[illegible] They [illegible] Swenson Bros. herd of [illegible] ing the S M S brand.

Through the Big Horn Basin.

It is sixteen years since I we[illegible] Basin. What a change! A[illegible]. Now with a few scattering [illegible] the granger, the [illegible] and the rich flockmaster are [illegible] the waters of the Big Horn [illegible] utilized and every valley is [illegible] alfalfa and grain. Where will [illegible] the question you ask yourself. [illegible] to calculate the undiscovered [illegible], for the soil is rich and the sun shines [illegible]re. This year it has shone more than usual. Away from the irrigated lands the range is short and brown as the clay buttes and rimrock that guard the great basin. The train passes swiftly through the country. Every now and again are prosperous towns. Basin and Worland are good representative burgs, with all the signs of the frontier about them. Some day they will equal places like Greeley and Fort Collins. The dwellers in them expect even greater things, and they may come. Meantime the rangeman, who has to depend on grass alone, is in a bad way this season. The whole country is dry and no prospect of relief. The man who has hay to sell is on top this season and will reap a harvest. Away up in the mountains grass is good, but when winter snows come and the cattlemen and flockmasters have to depend on the valley, with its endless little divides and draws that intersect and drain this great stretch of country that from a distance looks as flat as a pancake, then will come the rub. So it is a constant talk of shipping. Every one you meet asks about the prospect. "What will the fall market be?" is steadily fired at you. Ah, for the foresigns of some ancient seer, some prophet's vision to see into the future! The key to that sealed box would be a fortune to its holder, and more especially to the commission man. For with a hard winter that brought much loss and a feed bill that leaves many of the sheepmen at least in debt to their bank, there is a natural feeling of unrest and the wish to ship is forced by stern facts upon owners, and then to cap this unfortunate climax is short feed on the winter ranges. They say misfortunes never come singly, and this saying is verified this summer in the West. The one hope is in the corn crop, the golden grain that has saved many a serious situation. Once it is assured that the granger states can absorb through their feed lots the vastly increased volume of live stock which must be forwarded to market this season, the situation will be more reassuring. The East wants them and the West has them to send.

Thermopolis is a beautiful little place. It lies cradled among the mountains. Here the victims of rheumatism and other ills congregate and get relief. The Emery hotel is, so far as I have seen, the best in the state of Wyoming. The rooms are excellent and the cuisine of the best. After a long, warm ride in the cars it is a haven of rest and will be appreciated by any traveler who sojourns in this delightful place. Then if you want further pleasure, go and see Joe Snider, the livery man, and he will drive you around. It was a pleasure to renew his acquaintance. We had many talks of old days spent on the Sweetwater, of Tom Sun, the Durbins, and the Jacksons, and of the many strange characters one meets on the frontier. He drove me over the mountains from Thermopolis to Shoshoni, the last part of the ride dusty and hot, and as we crossed Badwater, we struck the Burlington grade, and ere long the little gap that separates Seattle from Galveston will be filled in. Another link from ocean to ocean, another dream realized. The dwellers by the Powder River will be in easy touch of the ozone of the Pacific and the soft air of the Gulf of Mexico.

Very Dry in Central Wyoming.

In all my travels through the West, and I have covered many miles these last two weeks, the dryest spot I have struck is Central Wyoming. Some days ago I came over the mountains from Thermopolis to Shoshoni and dropped to Bad water. It was one of the dustiest rides I ever experienced. The wagon wheels were from six inches to a foot in sand. The big freighting wagons that are hauling stuff to the Burlington grade have cut up the roads and they remind me of the hog-wallow in California. Joe Snider's team are tiring and we make slow progress, but at last we reach Shoshoni. This town is dry; it is liquor dry on Sunday and water dry all of the week, except for a pittance supplied from the Northwestern railroad well. But Shoshoni is coming to its own shortly, for a system of waterworks is just about completed. Among many prominent citizens at this place two stand out, Bill Madden, the sheepman, and Shaad, the banker. The former is away, so the latter takes me in hand. While Shaad is mighty in finance, he is also good at ordering supper, and Joe Snider and I came out of the rear end of Aronson's saloon feeling like a mosquito who had just tapped a fresh-run Scotchman.

Away up in the mountains are signs of green, but the plain is a sort of white-brown. A big electric storm comes up and you are nearly blown away. It rains a few drops and passes over. Next morning it is clear, not a sign of a cloud. In the summer of 1886 I was working over this same country, but I cannot say how the two summers compare. In those days it was overstocked with cattle. The sheepman was scarcely in evidence. But the same conditions prevail climatically. This difference, however. In 1886 you could not control your cattle. There was no hay and they had to take their chance. The nearest railroad point was Rawlins. Nowadays the Northwestern pierces this part of the country and both hay and grain can be brought in, and this year it will need to be shipped in abundance. Corn will save the situation. Quarter of a century, and what a change has taken place! Capt. Torrey was on the west side of the Wind river, and on Badwater, Poison Creek, the Rattlesnake Mountains and the great valley of the Sweetwater were the Seventy-One Quarter Circuit outfit, the Durbin Bros., A. M. Jackson & Co., Sun & Johnson, Bothwell, Bob Connors, Seabright Bros. at the Goose Egg, and many others. Now not one. It is all history. In their place are the Scotch and Irish brigades who have sheep by the thousand.

At Casper you find a busy place. It is preparing for the Burlington, and Aleck Cunningham is busier than two bees. Fine houses have been built of late years and the place looks as if it would be the metropolis of Central Wyoming. The folks of Shoshoni will tell you that is a pipe dream, still I am going to stick to my opinion. I may say I have not consulted Dr. Wilson, John Williams, John Morton or Metcalfe of Douglas on this proposition. At Casper during June only .70 of an inch of rain fell. That fact tells its own story. It means short range and less than half a crop of hay. The latter crop is gone, but rains this month and next can freshen up the range and make fair winter feed. But the great talk is of shipping, and every sheepman has his ear to the ground in hope of catching some favorable echo from the market.

This morning I am writing from Chugwater. Dear old Chug, redolent with golden memories. As I sit at the desk I see great cottonwood trees across the road, their leaves glittering like bunches of silver in the morning sunshine. Twenty-two years ago Ed Banks brought a wagonload of young slips across from the Sybille. Along with Duncan Grant and some of the other boys they stuck them into a little hollow that catches more or less water when it rains, and now there is a good sized forest. That same year Andrew Nelson painted the house at Chug and last night I met him. "What are you after, Andrew," said I. "Painting the hoose, sir," was the reply. In some directions in these parts the mills of the Gods grind slowly. This applies not only to the painting this season, but to the rainfall. Since the first of April but four inches of precipitation has fallen, and while grass is better than further north, it is short, and winter prospects only fair. Hay is but half a crop and many of the splendid meadows on the Chug will not be cut this season.

Last night I said to Banks: "How are the dry farmers getting along on the Fox Creek Divide this year?" "Well, sir, this is the year they are living on hope." J. C.

CATTLE WHICH BROUGHT NEW HIGH PRICE.

They were sold at South Omaha on July 5 at $8.25, a record price on that market for a carload. There were 54 head in the lot and they averaged 1,555 lbs. They were fed and marketed by E. T. Graham of Creston, Neb., who is one of Nebraska's most noted and successful feeders.

Nebraska Cattle Top Chicago Trade 35c Per Cwt.

George Friederich, the well-known farmer and feeder of Plainview, Neb., was on the Chicago market July 13 with 29 head of yearling steers and heifers mixed which averaged 896 lbs and were sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. at $8.00. Included in the shipment were 10 heifers. These offerings were good quality Shorthorns. The next best price that day for yearling cattle was $7.65, also obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co. for 69 head of grade Hereford branded western steers of 862-lbs average. They were from the feed lot of Thomas Mortimer of Madison, Neb., one of the most noted feeders in the Middle West.

Old-Time Ranchman Sells Holdings.

C. K. Howard, one of the old-time stockmen of Western South Dakota, has sold his holdings to C. J. Macbeth of Mankato, Minn, the deal including twenty-four quarter sections of deeded land and about 2,600 head of cattle, the consideration being about $150,000. The Howard ranch, known as the "Pot Hook," is one of the finest in Western South Dakota. The ranch home, twenty miles north of Wasta, is lighted with gas and electric lights and has hot and cold running water. Possession will be given Sept. 1, when it is understood that Mr. and Mrs. Howard will move to Rapid City. C. K. Howard has been a familiar figure in Western South Dakota for many years, he having served four terms as president of the Western South Dakota Stock Growers' Association. In the latter 70s and early 80s Mr. Howard ran a large store in Sioux Falls, but credit and the grasshoppers wiped out his large fortune and he went West to recuperate his financial losses, in which he has been successful. He was one of the early settlers at Sioux Falls and many times is spoken of as the "Father of Minnehaha county."

Gain in Live Stock Sales.

A gain of $6,000,000 in the amount of money paid to the farmers of the Northwest by packers and other buyers of live stock at South St. Paul this year is indicated by the South St. Paul bank clearings made public recently. From January to July, 1910, the total was $24,340,696 as compared with $18,342,401 during the same period last year.

Range Stock in Very Good Condition.

From Belle Fourche, S. D., comes the news that in spite of the scarcity of range feed the condition of stock was never better than at present The very condition that has made grazing scant has operated by the law of compensation to put range stock in better condition than they have been for years at this time of the year. When there is abundant rain during May and June, as has been the case for six or eight years until this season, the grass grows long and ripens late and cattle could not take on their best flesh in green grass. Comparative freedom from flies has been of great advantage to cattle this year also.

Stockmen who make Belle Fourche their shipping point are preparing to get their cattle and sheep on the market as soon as possible. Five hundred cars have been ordered for that point in one week, with big strings needed continually thereafter. The fear that food supply will be disastrously light in the winter on account of the drought has prompted this, and although the market is down they prefer to take the best the market will offer rather than attempt to carry them through.

RANGE CATTLE AND SHEEP AT CHICAGO AND SOUTH OMAHA

Western Range Cattle.

Receipts of western range cattle at Chicago this week and for year to date, with comparison, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

Year ago	1,700
Receipts for season of 1910 to date	8,000
Corresponding period of 1909	2,000

Range of prices and bulk of sales for western range steers, and bulk of cows and heifers this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Steers— Range.		Steers— Bulk.		Cows and Heifers Bulk.
This week	$4.50	[illegible]	$5.35	6.10	$3.70	[illegible]
Last week	5.00	6.25	5.25	6.00	3.75	4.25
Year ago	4.70	5.50	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	5.35

Six loads of the J. S. Phillips [illegible] cattle largely she stock, landed here Wednesday of last week. This was the third shipment of range steers to arrive here this season. Condition of the arrivals was rather ordinary, showing effects of dry range. The beef steers sold at $5.00@6.25, with feeders at $4.65 and cows mostly at $3.25@4.85, one head of 1,440 lbs weight going at $6.25.

Thirty loads of Montanas and nine loads of Dakotas comprised range arrivals Monday. A trainload of Dakota beef steers was expected, but was delayed en route. The beef steers were from the Murphy Cattle Co. ranch in Montana. They did not show any improvement in flesh condition over those of the Danas from Wyoming that were here recently. Yet they were fairly fat, but coarse. Sales were chiefly at $6.00@6.10, with tailends down to $5.00, while the cows brought $3.70@4.75.

Receipts of rangers Tuesday totaled 73 loads, part of which arrived too late for the market. The great bulk of arrivals were the Keeline steers from Wyoming, tops of which went at $5.80 and bulk at $5.35@5.50. She stock went in main at $3.70@4.40. Beef steers sold 15@20c lower than Monday and cows and heifers 10@15c lower. Condition of steer offerings showed no improvement. Both killer and feeder buyers showed interest in all desirable offerings, but when it came to the plainer flesh offerings slaughterers took their time about bidding, and where thin offerings lacked quality the outside buyers did not display much interest.

Including the 22 loads held over from the previous day, there were around 1,700 head on sale Wednesday. The market was dull and generally 10c lower. The Brown Wyoming steers were handled by us and sold up to $6.00 and bulk at $5.50@5.70, most of latter being horned. The Driskill Montana steers sold at $4.80@5.35, with bulk at $5.25@5.35, and the cows and heifers ranged at $4.40@5.10.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of western range cattle:

Choice to prime steers	$6 10 @	6 60
Medium to good steers	5 70	6 00
Plain to fair steers	5 40	5 80
Canning steers	4 80	5 15
Good to choice cows and heifers	5 00	5 75
Fair to medium cows and heifers	4 25	4 75
Medium to good cutters	3 70	4 00
Common to good canners	3 25	3 60
Medium to good bulls	3 75	4 25
Common to fair bulls	3 40	3 60
Good to choice feeders	5 25	5 50
Fair to medium feeders	4 75	5 10
Poor to common feeders	4 00	4 65

*Obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co.

A very brisk trade for fat lambs this week. The Monday trade was 25@50c higher, the Tuesday market 10@25c higher and the Wednesday trade 25@35c higher. Top for the week was $7.30, obtained by us for the Vader offerings from Idaho on Wednesday, being 15c per cwt higher than any other rangers made and 80c above low time last week. Sheep went 10@25c lower Monday and yearlings held steady. There was no quotable change in the market Tuesday. Prices were 15@25c higher Wednesday, a prime lot of Montana wethers reaching $4.35 and choice Idaho ewes went at $4.00, latter price being obtained by us.

Feeder Sheep and Lambs.

Below will be found bulk sales of feeder sheep, yearlings and lambs this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Bulk Sheep.		Bulk Yearlings.		Bulk Lambs.

Year ago	3.00	4.25	4.75	5.00	6.60	6.70

Additional rains and the relatively low prices stimulated the demand for feeder sheep and lambs, and breeder ewes, this week considerably. While the supplies were sufficiently liberal enough to enable buyers to hold prices on a level with last week's close, it was evident that a smaller run would have resulted in higher prices. The outlet for feeder lambs and breeder ewes was much broader than last week. Most of the latter went at $5.00@5.50 for western yearlings and $4.25@4.75 for natives. Top feeder lambs cost $6.25, yearlings $5.00 and wethers $4.10.

Montana and Dakota Cattle Shippers.

We call the attention of Montana and Dakota cattle shippers to the advantage of consigning to Clay, Robinson & Co., in that having our own houses at South St. Paul and Sioux City shipments coming via these markets consigned to us (if not sold there) are sorted and shaped up before reloading, so that they come on the Chicago market all ready for inspection of the buyers. This is often a very great advantage, as it enables the salesmen to offer the cattle on the early market, being not necessary to do any sorting upon arrival at Chicago. It frequently happens that cattle coming through to Chicago, consigned to firms that do not possess the above advantage, have to be held over until next day, as by the time they are sorted up, classified, etc., ready for the buyers, it is too late to offer them on the day of arrival.

Prospective Montana and Dakota shippers will do well to make a mental note of this matter, and if any further information is desired, address Clay, Robinson & Co., either at Chicago, or South St Paul or Sioux City

NATIVE BEEF STEERS

Range of prices and bulk sales of native beef steers this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Range.	Bulk.
This week.....	$4.50@8.55	$6.10@7.85
Previous week.....	5.00 8.60	6.35 7.75
Year ago.....	4.25 7.65	5.80 7.00
Two years ago.....	4.25 8.15	5.40 7.00

Receipts Thursday of last week 5,936. General demand was good and prices were mostly 10c higher. Both eastern shippers and local packers were lively bidders, which, along with the run being under expectations, enabled sellers to have better control of the situation. Top steers went at $8.40, paid for 68 distillers of 1,528 to 1,600 lbs average. Best corn-fed offerings at hand went at $8.10 for 1,362 to 1,563 lbs average. Run Friday 1,826. General market was steady. Distillers, numbering 20 head and averaging 1,390 lbs, topped the market at $8.40, while the best corn-feds numbered 20 head, averaged 1,227 lbs and brought $7.30. The week closed with good to prime offerings showing a firm price basis with the finish of the previous week, but there was no particular strength noted in the trade for the less desirable lots.

Receipts Monday of this week, 26,392. A decline of 10@15c in prices for all excepting heavy grades and yearlings of choice to prime class from the finish of last week was logical. However, the market was not especially dull for any classes. A liberal quota of light and medium fleshed steers from pastures was here, owing to short grass and dry weather. These were the slowest sellers, meeting competition from both Texas and western rangers. Yearlings in partly fat condition were also slow sale. Top beeves went at $8.50, paid for 23 head of 1,656 lbs average and 22 head of 1,164 lbs average, both lots being from Indiana. The top for yearling cattle was $8.00, Clay, Robinson & Co. landing 24 head of 947-lb Nebraskans at this figure. Bulk of sales were at $6.25@7.85. There were six loads of Texas steers on the market and they sold at $6.25@6.50, sales being 10c lower than late last week.

Run Tuesday, 6,000. Market was dull, but not quotably lower. Arrivals were mostly grassers and light, trashy stock for which demand was very indifferent because of more numerous receipts of western rangers and Texans. Best natives at hand went at $7.85 for 18 head of 1,261 lbs average. There were 73 loads of western rangers and 17 loads of Texas cattle on the market.

Marketing Wednesday 22,000. Prices were 10@25c lower, such as went under $7.50 bearing the brunt of the break. Yearlings were in very heavy proportion and many of these sold 15@25c lower. Top was $8.55, paid for prime 1,594-lb Angus from Illinois.

COWS AND HEIFERS.

The better grades went 15@25c higher Thursday of last week and plain and medium lots showed 10@15c advance. Offerings good enough to go above $4.50 sold to best advantage. It was a steady to strong deal on Friday. The week closed with all the break of early in the week repaired and prices showed a strong basis with the close of the previous week. Fancy heifers reached $6.65 during the week and prime cows went up to $6.25.

At the start of this week there was a reduced proportion of these offerings in total marketing, and most of the good grades sold steady with last week's close, while the plain and medium classes went mostly 10c lower. Fifty-nine head of prime 685-lb Hereford yearling heifers reached $7.10, while some prime heavy cows made $6.00.

The good to choice offerings were in scant supply and sold steady Tuesday, but other grades went mostly 10c lower. Thirty head of prime 730-lb yearling Hereford heifers landed up to $7.30. This was the best price in some time, but they were of an exceptional grade and such as are rarely seen at market.

Barring the good to choice kinds which sold steady, prices were lowered 10@15c Wednesday.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of cows and heifers:

BULLS.

The general demand was more limited Thursday of last week and prices were merely steady. There was a very narrow outlet Friday and rates were lowered 10@15c. As compared with the close of the previous week prices were 15@25c lower.

There were no material price changes at the start of this week. Supply was moderate and demand fair

The Tuesday trade in bulls was steady for the best kinds and weak to 10c lower for others.

It was mostly a 10@15c lower deal on Wednesday.

CALVES.

A steady to strong market prevailed for calves on Thursday of last week. The Friday market was unchanged. As compared with the close of the previous week prices showed mostly 25c loss.

A decline of mostly 25c at the start of this week. Buyers were not active bidders.

Tuesday buyers endeavored to make their purchases at yesterday's prices, but sellers landed the bulk of their arrivals at rates in force last Thursday. One fancy lot of 128-lb vealers reached $9.00, but the practical top was $8.75.

Aside from some prime lots, the market was generally 25c lower Wednesday.

being principally for offerings of common and medium quality and tipping the beam under 850 lbs.

There was a steady to strong trade at the start of this week, good to choice heavy steers showing the strength. The general run was light, with desirable quality steers possessing weight being in very small numbers. The decreased run was likely due to the recent rains in Iowa and Illinois, owners figuring that they are worth more in the country than on the market at this time.

There was a healthy market Tuesday and prices ruled fully steady. Demand was good from all [illegible]rces.

Bulk sales of hogs of respective weights this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Bulk 200 to 250 lbs.	Bulk 260 lbs and heavier.	Bulk 135 to 195 lbs.
This week	$8.35@8.80	$8.15@8.60	$8.75@8.90
Previous week	8.50 9.10	8.25 8.80	8.90 9.20
Year ago	7.65 8.20	7.70 8.25	7.65 8.15

Marketing Thursday 14,198. A 10c higher market on the lower-priced offerings and a 10c lower on the good kinds. The practicable top was $9.15. Very little business was done above $9.00. The price spread was narrowed 20c. Light offerings sold mostly at $8.75@9.00, with choice heavy at $8.70 and the 240 to 280-lb butcher lights largely at $8.65@8.75. For the up-and-down mixed it was an $8.60@8.70 market, according to weight and quality. Straight heavy packers sold at $8.40@8.60, according to weight and coarseness, with pieces of loads at $8.00@8.35. Supply Friday 11,375. It was a mean market. When the trade got into full action prices were 5@10c lower. A top of $9.15 was made early for severely sorted light, but $8.40@8.75 took the bulk. Receipts Saturday 9,833. Opening was 10@15c lower and the market got worse as the day advanced. The $9.00 hog disappeared and the big bulk went at $8.25@8.70, with the practicable top at $8.85. As compared with the close of the previous week rates showed 45@60c decline.

Supply hogs Monday of this week, 22,767. It was a very uneven market, but generally 10@15c higher than the last half of the Saturday session. Fancy light hogs sold up to $9.00 and $8.40@8.70 took a good share of all arrivals. The light supply was due to country buyers suffering such severe monetary losses last week that they decided to lay off for a while.

Arrivals Tuesday, 13,000. Market had a bad close on heavy, mixed and packing grades and a clearance could not be effected at prices 25c lower. Straight loads had to go at $7.15@8.20. The early market was strong to 5c higher for desirable light and handy weight butchers, but the close was 5@10c lower than the start. From $8.60 down the trade was anywhere from 10@20c lower. A top at $9.10 was realized for a fancy lot of assorted light weights. Straight loads of good 300-lb sows were difficult sale even at $8.25. A good many of the best arrivals went at $8.30@8.60, with butchers largely at $8.50@8.75.

Wednesday supply 19,000. Opening 5@10c lower, the market closed 15@20c lower. Top $9.00 and bulk trading $8.25@8.75.

Receipts Thursday 17,025. The market was in demoralized condition. Most lambs sold 25c under the previous day's early market. The limit was $7.00 and the in-between kinds were almost unsalable late in the day. Sheep and yearlings lost 15@25c. Top sheep went at $4.15, paid for rangers, while feeders secured at $4.00 a good class of Idaho wethers, such as sold to the packers the previous day at $4.25. Western lambs were all feeders and went in main at $5.85@6.00. Run Friday 5,141. The market went from bad to worse. Lambs sold 25@50c down from the previous day. Sheep were generally 25c lower. No range offerings were available. Prime native lambs had to go at $6.50 and the top on native ewes was $3.75. Some good fed-western wethers had to go at $4.00, against $4.35 the previous day. As compared with the close of the previous week lambs showed $1.25@1.50 decline, sheep lost 35@50c, feeding lambs declined 35@50c and sheep 15@25c. The run for the week at 101,545 was the largest ever recorded for any week in July.

Marketing on Monday of this week, 34,099. The lamb market had a good boost from the demoralized trade at the close of last week, selling 25@50c higher than Friday, best grades showing most advance. On the other hand the sheep market was dull and very uneven, with most sales at 10@25c decline. Top lambs made $7.00, paid for rangers, and choice range wethers had to go at $4.00, with some good fed westerns at $3.85, against $4.50 a week ago. Yearlings at $4.75@5.00 were steady. The demand for feeding lambs was very dull, best going at $6.25, while there was a brisk demand for feeding sheep, bulk of wethers going at $3.90@4.00 and yearlings at $5.00. Washington yearling breeding ewes sold up to $5.50.

The Tuesday marketing, 20,000. Lambs advanced 10@25c, with prime rangers up to $7.15 and best natives at $7.00. Common native lambs and western feeders were little changed. Sheep and yearlings sold steady, with feeder buyers active bidders. Best range wethers brought $4.00 and range yearlings topped at $4.85. A lot of feeding wethers sold at $3.75@3.90. Montana ewes reached $3.75.

Run Wednesday 22,000. Sheep and yearlings sold 15@25c higher and lambs 25@35c higher. Top sheep $4.35 and lambs $7.30, latter sale being made by us. Feeders strong sale.

South Omaha Markets.

[Special telegram from Clay, Robinson & Co.]

South Omaha, Neb., July 19.—Monday's run of 300 cars practically opened the range season here, as supplies included mostly this class. While the better grades were not much lower, the trade, including today's slump, made a decline of 15@25c since late last week. Stockers and feeders are also 20@30c lower. We sold 67 corn-fed beeves, averaging 1,396 lbs, at $7.60 for John Charles of Farwell, Neb., top for the week. Good western beeves sold mostly at $5.00@5.40, with choice at $5.75@6.00, and good cows at $4.00@4.50.

Prices for hogs today strong to 5c higher, with top at $8.65 and bulk $8.20@8.45.

Seventeen thousand sheep arrived today, mostly wethers and ewes. Top wethers $3.55, with bulk $3.25@3.50. Best ewes $3.40, with bulk of good kinds at $2.75@3.00. Killer yearlings sold at $4.40@4.75 and feeders $4.15@4.50 Good lambs scarce, selling up to $7.00. Feeder demand a little better than last week. We sold three cars of Wyoming wethers for the Slaughter & Patzold Sheep Co. at $3.50, averaging 109 lbs, one car of Wyoming yearlings for T. W. Clark, averaging 75 lbs, at $4.75, the top, and one car feeders, averaging 75 lbs, at $4.50.

Light run of sheep and lambs today and prices 10@15c higher for all kinds.

East St. Louis Markets.

National Stock Yards, Ill., July 19—There has been a scarcity of choice beeves on the market this week. Trading has been slow. Best steers made $8.25, being Angus and averaging 1,407 lbs. Bulk offerings cleared late in the day at 10@15c decline. Heifer trade opened steady and closed 15@25c lower. Cow market steady to strong. Calves firm. Small supply of stockers and demand strong. Movement of cattle in the quarantine division was active at prices strong to 10c higher. Best beeves today at $5.50.

Today's hog market opened steady, but as the day advanced trading became slow and the late market was 10@15c lower than the opening. Early top on light weights around 130 lbs was $9.10. Bulk medium and heavy hogs generally at $8.60@8.80.

Lambs made up bulk of arrivals in this department this week. Prices advanced 15@25c. Best natives made $6.75@6.90. Mutton sheep were scarce and trade active, best selling at $4.00, with a few heavy wethers at $4.15@4.25. Very few feeding or breeding sheep were available.

Denver Markets.

[Special telegram from Clay, Robinson & Co.]

Denver, Colo., July 16—Since Monday receipts of cattle have been rather light and confined largely to range stuff from the Western Slope and Wyoming. Thursday some Wyoming spayed heifers from Chugwater sold at $5.85, averaging 1,083 lbs, with steers at $5.70, averaging 1,105 lbs, while some Eastern Colorado steers sold at $5.15, with fair to good cows at $4.00@4.50.

The feeder market was rather dull, outlet depending largely on local traders.

Denver, Colo., July 18—There was close to 1,400 cattle here today, all being grass stuff with exception of three loads. Market ruled 15@25c lower than last week, butcher stuff showing most decline.

Denver, Colo., July 19.—Two days' cattle arrivals 2,500, bulk of which were rangers. Prices declined 35@50c from last week's close. Top range beeves $6.35 and bulk $5.00@5.50. Top cows $5.25, with bulk at $4.00@4.60. Stockers and feeders dull sale.

Nineteen hundred hogs arrived Monday and Tuesday. Market strong with last Saturday. Top $8.50 and bulk $8.40@8.45.

Sheep and lamb arrivals first two market days 5,200. Market dull with prices 25c lower than last week's close in instances. Top lambs $7.00, yearlings $4.50, wethers $4.00 and ewes $3.25.

Formation of Poland-China Breed.

"The truth is, no one man can say he had more to do with the formation of the Poland-China breed than another. It was the result of the labors of many. It grew out of the introduction of the China hogs by the Shakers of Union Village, Ohio, their crossing with the Russian and Byfield, and the subsequent crossing with the Berkshires and with the Irish Grazers. After 1841 or 1842, these breeds ceased to exist in either Butler or Warren counties and have had nothing whatever to do with the Poland-China breed for the last 34 years." Controversies as to the precise crosses and by whom and under what particular circumstances they were made, prior to the middle of the last century, to form the breed, may interest a few; but what is vastly more important to the practical swine breeder is the fact that there was produced a race of swine now bearing the name of Poland-China that has been able to hold its own for three-fifths of a century as the most popular and most widely distributed pork-making machine in the foremost pork-producing region of the world.—From Coburn's "Swine in America."

Corn Looking Very Fine in Nebraska.

Chas. C. McEndree, vice president of the Farmers' State Bank of Central City, Neb., writes under date of July 13 regarding the conditions in Merrick county: "Wheat is an average crop a[illegible] all cut in the shock. Oats will be a good [illegible] cutting is now progressing. Hay [illegible] quality, but will not make [illegible] crop. Corn is looking [illegible] very fast. Laramie Plains in Wyoming Look Well.

The country from Cheyenne to Rawlins is in somewhat better condition so far as feed is concerned than other parts of Wyoming. Round Cheyenne the country has a tinge of green. Upon Sherman hill there is considerable grass, while the Laramie plains look well. The hay crop is nearly up to an average and while the grass is short it is still growing, and a few showers will make a fair amount of feed. By Rock River and Medicine Bow feed is short. Good rains would still save the situation. The ranchmen, however, feel blue, and it is the same old story, ship, ship.

We tarried at Laramie City half a day. How it has grown and improved! Wm. Holliday is building a great business block that would not disgrace places like Denver or Omaha. The whole air of the place breathes of progress and prosperity. For many a year this place stood still, the plains were dormant, the people sleepy, but the intrinsic worth was there. A butterfly must go through the chrysalis stage, and this applies to places and people as in animal life. At the depot we meet Colonel E. I. Bell and Mr. Augsburger. It is useless to say that the former has been the very center of the wondrous improvements round about this city. Then the latter gentleman has come in with his power of organization and detail work. Bell is broad, with a wide sweep of vision peering into the future; Augsburger is close, keen, watching every inch of water, scouring every item of expense. Both, in separate ways, attain results. All of this speculative talk counts with me for nothing, except the bottom figure is satisfactory. This is the end of all things. Most people call Bell a booster, but, as he says, this is a misnomer. "I am a demonstrator," he says. And a 62-mile ride in an automobile yesterday afternoon proved that. At the farm managed by Mr. Augsburger we saw some splendid crops, incidentally 300 acres of field peas and a drove of 300 or 400 hogs of all ages, sorts and sizes, ready to turn upon them when they are ripe. In passing it may be said that half of the above peas were planted for seed and are contracted to the Epsom Packing Co. of Colorado. Mr. Epsom, who was with us, pronounced the stand as almost perfect.

After dinner we met that grand old warrior, Edward Ivingson, who, although tinged with gray, is still an evergreen in nature and spirits and has a touch of optimism in his big heart. There is a vivid glow in the sunset.

Relief for Western Range Stockmen.

A dispatch from Washington, D. C., announces that drought in the Northwest is seriously affecting the cattlemen, threatening them with great losses and possibly with financial ruin. The lack of rain and a scourge of grasshoppers have goaded a number of sheep growers of Montana to make an urgent telegraphic appeal to the forest service that the Beartooth and Absaroka national forest reserves be thrown open to the flocks. Associate Forester Potter telegraphed the district forester at Missoula, Mont., instructing him to offer all the relief possible without injury to the forests.

The Beartooth reserve already accommodates 24,000 head of sheep and 110,000 are being grazed in the Absaroka. The cattlemen living adjacent to the reserves claim that 100,000 additional head can be installed on the ranges. Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture recently appealed to the railroad companies to give the sheepmen in Montana special rates in order to permit of the movement of starving sheep to better ranges. He also authorized an increase of 14,700 head of sheep in the Colville forest in Washington.

Cattle and sheep are not perishing on the Colorado ranges as the result of drouth and the grasshopper scourge, according to the Colorado State Board of Live Stock Inspection. District Forester Seth Riley has gone to Wyoming in response to an appeal from stockmen of that state to open the Black Hills forest reserve to live stock.

Idaho's Lamb Output is Large.

"Rainfall or lack of it in Idaho does not affect sheepmen or farmers in maturing their crops to any extent," remarked W. E. Adams of Weiser, Idaho, to a South Omaha Journal-Stockman reporter. "Irrigation has put farming on a secure basis and summer ranging in the mountains does away with the greatest bugbear of the western mutton grower—the question of plenty of water and grass for flocks. There has not been a summer in the past two decades when there was no plenty of grass among the foothills and it follows of course that the output consists largely of fat stock.

"Old sheep are rather scarce at present in our part of the country and, excepting a few bunches of wethers, the crop from now on will consist almost wholly of lambs. The hilly regions are full of them and in all probability shipments will be larger than last year. They are not quite as fat as they were at this time last year, but a few weeks of good grass will put them in fine shape."

Mr. Adams also states that the past winter was very hard on breeding stock and many of the larger growers shipped in corn as a supplement to their hay ration. Ten loads of the grass yearlings and wethers that were included in the week's run at South Omaha were consigned by Mr. Adams to Clay, Robinson & Co., who sold them to very good advantage, considering the slumpy condition of the trade last week.

Wyoming Cattle to Come Earlier Than Usual.

Henry T. Gray & Son were at South Omaha July 13 from Lusk, Wyo., looking after the shipment of five cars of cattle. Mr. Gray is a veteran in the cattle business in the Lusk territory, having located there twenty-five years ago. His operations have always been toward a high class of stock and his Hereford calves have taken numerous premiums at the Chicago International Live Stock Show. In speaking of conditions in his territory Mr. Gray stated to a representative of the Journal-Stockman that the extremely dry weather in his section has worked a very great hardship on the live stock industry and shipments will have to come considerably earlier than in previous years on this account. Mr. Gray's cattle were sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. at very good prices, even better than he had expected.

Nebraska Yearling Cattle Bring $8.00 at Chicago.

Wheeler Bros. of Giltner, Neb., among the largest raisers and feeders of cattle in the Middle West, had a string of cattle on the Chicago market July 18, the same being handled by Clay, Robinson & Co. Included in the shipment were 24 head of 949-lb yearlings which brought $8.00, this price being 25c per cwt higher than any other yearling cattle brought that day and 50c per cwt higher than any other cattle of as light weight made. Their other sales follow: 98 head of 1,253 lbs average at $8.25 and 34 of 1,161 lbs at $7.65.

The Charles Cattle Make $7.60 at Omaha.

John Charles of Farwell, Neb., was on the South Omaha market July 19 with 67 head of 1,390-lb beef steers which Clay, Robinson & Co. sold at $7.60. This price was the top for cattle on that market for the week. Mr. Charles is prominent in both farming and feeding circles in his part of the country.

The West Has a Short Hay Crop.

Weather conditions have been unfavorable for hay and grasses during a considerable part of the present season, and in important districts of the Central West were very radically unfavorable during June. Grasses started rather early on account of very warm weather in March but recurrence of continued freezing during April and May checked growth and on June 1 the promise was below normal. The month of June was very unfavorable to the grass crop over the greater part o fthe Central West and the result is a low average of condition at this time.

The acreage devoted to hay this year is smaller than that of 1909. This decrease in breadth comes in part from the winter killing of clover and tim- of the Central West and the result is a low aver- result of the plowing up of old meadows on account of their failure to show good recovery following the drouth of 1908-9.

The following statement shows the estimated acreage and condition on July 1 by states:

States.	Acres 1910.	Condition.
New England	4,069,000	92
New York	4,998,000	91
Pennsylvania	3,131,000	92
Texas	426,000	80
Arkansas	82,000	90
Tennessee	380,000	94

Illinois	2,423,000	83
Wisconsin	1,919,000	60
Minnesota	900,000	48
Iowa	2,986,000	67
Missouri	2,710,000	86
Kansas	1,277,000	85
Nebraska	586,000	75
North Dakota	135,000	58
South Dakota	215,000	56
California	592,000	93
Oregon	390,000	96
Washington	371,000	85
Oklahoma	194,000	82
Other	4,212,000	90
Total	39,690,000	83.4

The preliminary estimate of the total acreage devoted to the hay crop this year is 39,690,000, as against 40,326,000 last year. The average condition of the crop is only 83.4, which is decidedly below an average. It will be noted that in the Northwest, from Wisconsin to the Dakotas, the promise for hay of all kinds, both tame and wild, is the poorest for many years.

Wool Market Notes

In Ohio buyers have been offering up to 23c for choice fine medium wool and 16@20c for fines.

It is thought that considerably more than 50 per cent of the wool has passed from the hands of growers by consignment or outright sale.

The foreign markets for wool have an easier tone. The fourth series of London sales opened [illegible] cross breds from par to 5 per cent lower, al[illegible] merinos were strong.

A [illegible] deal of buying is being done in Oregon and [illegible] eastern mills, as well as by dealers. The [illegible] Utah, Arizona, Nevada and New Mexico ha[illegible] cleaned up, principally through consignm[illegible]

Encouraged by the belief that [illegible] lively light weight season, eastern [illegible] viewing the near future market for wo[illegible] more optimism. They anticipate a consider[illegible] movement of wool to manufacturers within a month or so.

The first wool sale at Shoshoni, Wyo., was [illegible] when the Joslyn clip, which is a part of the J[illegible]son clip, was bought by Sillerman Bros. for [illegible] This is considered a good price in view of the f[illegible] that other offers so far have been around 14c. However, this clip is conceded to be one of the best in Central Wyoming.

Representative sales of wool at Boston recently were: 10,000 lbs washed delaine, 34@35c;c 10,000 lbs unwashed delaine, 25@26c; 75,000 lbs Ohio XX, 29@30c; 30,000 lbs Ohio ⅜ and ½ blood, 27@28c; 50,000 Ohio ¼ blood, 26@27c; 25,000 Michigan ¼ blood, 25@26c; 15,000 Ohio fine unwashed, 21@23½c; 720,000 territory, 15@23c.

Tom Chittick, live stock agent of the Milwaukee Railroad at Miles City, Mont., and also manager of the Milwaukee Wool Warehouse at that point, was in Chicago this week and stated that there were about twenty wool buyers in that city. The market is a very lively one and recent sales have been at 17@20⅝c. Mr. Chittick looks for the wool crop in that section to be cleaned up during the next two weeks.

Buyers have paid relatively more for new wools in Montana recently than manufacturers have bid on the new clips at Boston. For instance, 55c. on a clean basis, was offered in Boston and the bid refused, while during the same week 20⅝c was paid for choice clips in Montana. During the past week or so 5,000,000 lbs have been sold in Montana, some going as low as 16c. It would seem that dealers are confident of higher prices later on.

Wool sales reported from Southern Montana are decidedly encouraging to wool growers of the Northwest. The Lehfeldt clip at Billings sold for 20c. This clip amounted to 50,000 lbs. Joe Guthrie of Miles City sold to Silberman Bros. at the same price. Other clips aggregating over 75,000 lbs sold at 18@20c. Billings reports wool as moving fast and Miles City sends out a similar report. At the last named place some choice wool has sold as high as 22c, and the regular price is hanging close to the 20c mark.

There is more activity in the wool market at Belle Fourche, S. D., than at any time since the season opened there. While a great deal of the wool has been consigned from there, a few clips have been sold. Recent sales were: I. M. Humphrey clip of 20,000 lbs at 18¾c; A. M. Blackford and Roberts Bros., 17,000 lbs clip each, at 19c; Dick Selway, clip of 80,000 lbs, at 18½c; Coffman & Thomas, 17,000 lbs at 17½c. In all about 1,000,000 lbs of wool has been purchased by one Chicago firm thus far this season.

The deadlock in the wool market, so far as Northern Wyoming is concerned, has been broken by the sale of several large clips, says the Sheridan Post. Close to 250,000 lbs have been sold, and the price paid was 18c. Two other clips are reported sold at 19c. These are the only large sales so far reported, and by far the largest proportion of the wool has gone East on consignment. The orders which generally accompanied the shipments was to report all offers, but to make no sales without orders from the owners. Most of the wool growers are holding for 20c, and the impression seems to prevail that this price will be reached in the near future.

Sentiment in favor of western woolen mills to manufacture western wools into cloth is rapidly growing and taking definite form in several sections of the country. The scheme is entirely feasible and the only wonder is that the matter had not been taken up long ago. For many years the south sent all its cotton to old England or New England to be worked up into the finish[illegible] duct but now uses the bulk of its cotton [illegible] home, thereby effecting a great saving in [illegible] charges and incidental expenses. N[illegible] has lost its monopoly on cotton m[illegible]uring and its hold on the wool manufact[illegible]dustry [illegible] threatened.—Journal-Stockm[illegible]

"Statements to the contrary notwithstanding, the Chicago National Wool Warehouse is a successful institution and one of the most important auxiliaries to the wool growing industry ever established," said Charles B. Power, a well-known sheepman of Helena, Mont. "The Chicago warehouse is operating at full capacity this season, and the sheepmen who own stock in the institution are shipping all the wool to Chicago that their share in the enterprise permits. The Chicago warehouse will handle 25,000,000 lbs of wool this year, I understand. The enterprise is still young and the men who are managing it do not want to endanger its success by operations on too large a scale at the start." Asked why the market was so slow this year, Mr. Power replied: "The financial uncertainty, the tariff legislation and the adjournment of Congress account in a large degree for the conditions which obtain at present."

Now that dealers have begun to offer a little more for their wools, it is entirely likely that before long we will witness better prices for wools in the eastern markets, says the Boston Wool and Cotton Reporter. Certainly it is about time we should look for such a state of affairs. For about eight months conditions have been depressed in the worsted and woolen industry, resulting in the poorest kind of conditions in the wool business. People are not born with clothes on, and it is only reasonable to believe that the 80,000,000 people of our own great country have used up considerable of the surplus of clothing which must have accumulated even though it is all very true that they have economized to a much larger extent than with normal conditions prevailing. Moreover, it is reported that much better light weight worsteds carried over from the last season have been quietly absorbed, so that if any demand crops out during the light weight season, which will open up during the last of the month, it will have to be supplied from new goods. This in time would result in a better movement in wool. It would appear, therefore, that the time has been reached when the dealer can really afford to be slightly more optimistic than he had recently been.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

H. O. Thompson, Freeborn county, Minn., had two cars of hogs on the South St. Paul market.

P. P. Klick of Todd county, Minn., favored our South St. Paul house with two cars of stock.

W. Eckert, prominent farmer and stockman of Cass county, N. D., had a shipment of cattle at South St. Paul.

L. G. Wallace of Dunn county, Wis., had a car of hogs at South St. Paul, as did also Wm. H. Burghart of Renville county, Minn.

H. E. Hershey, prominent hog raiser [illegible] feeder of Buffalo county, Neb[illegible] at South Omaha mar[illegible]

Geo. F. K[illegible] prominent farmers [illegible] county, Minn., marketed [illegible] at South St. Paul.

A. Michant of York county, Neb., writes our South Omaha house: "We are well pleased with the sale of our hogs. Thank you for your past service."

Irvin Scott, progressive farmer and stock dealer of Sullivan county, Ind.: "Hogs are scarcer here than they have been in thirty years for this time of the year."

The following parties had consignments at South St. Paul Saturday: O. G. Greeno of Marshall county, S. D.; J. H. McPike and F. W. Henkle of Towner county, N. D.

J. C. Chenoweth, prominent dealer in live stock of Franklin county, Ohio, writes: "Load of heifers arrived in good shape. Am well pleased with the cattle, the price and your efforts in my behalf."

J. P. Campbell, the very extensive cattle feeder and shipper of Sedgwick county, Kan., writes our South St. Joseph house: "I am more than pleased with the sale. They were well sold and brought lots of money."

The Farmers Elevator Co. of Saint Croix county, Wis., was represented at South St. Paul with its usual weekly consignment and Stuebe Bros. of Brown county, Minn., helped swell the hog receipts there with a shipment.

Edward Merricks of Watonwan county, Minn., who was at South St. Paul with a shipment of hogs, stated that the hay crop was in bad shape in his section and the yield would be only about one half of that of a year ago, while corn was looking excellent.

Williamson county, Tenn., was represented on the East St. Louis Market July 15 by Sandy Brown with a deck of 65-lb lambs at $7.00 and a double deck of 62-lbs average at $6.65. These sales were consummated by our house and the prices stood 35@40c per cwt higher than any other firm obtained.

Mrs. M. M. Hughes of Missoula county, Mont.: "There is very little stock in this part of the country, as nearly all of the range is forest reserve and stock has disappeared from the range. Within a radius of thirty miles there is not enough stock of all kinds to load a dozen cars. We have had plenty of rain in some places and none inothers. The range is fairly good. If this range was stocked with Angora goats and properly handled it would be one of the best paying ranges in Montana."

Peter Olson, the well-known stockman of Pierce county, N. D., writes under date of July 15: "Our crop is gone on account of drought and hot winds. It is so short that neither binder nor mower can take it in most places. But it would make the very best sheep feed, as there is a lot of pig weeds and other weeds grown, and there will be a lot of grain which if sheep were turned on while green they would soon learn to eat. I think sheep would be a great benefit to the land. It is so dry now that I don't like to plow this fall. Please send me your REPORT for one year for which I enclose you 50c."

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

C. S. Miles of Carroll county, Mo., had in six cars of cattle and two cars of hogs at East St. Louis July 12.

Mitchell & Walsh, heavy shippers from Edwards county, Ill., marketed a car of sheep at East St. Louis.

The Converse Sheep Co. of Converse county, Wyo., were represented on the South Omaha market the first of the week with a train of sheep.

The Slaughter Patzold Shep Co., running a large number of sheep in Converse county, Wyo., had a shipment of sheep on the South Omaha market July 18.

Chas. L. Bartley of Cedar county, Ia., writes our South Omaha house: "Sheep arrived in good condition; no dead ones. We drove right out two and one-half miles. Am well pleased."

On July 18 our South Omaha house handled a car of cattle for F. M. Baxter of Crook county, Wyo., 16 steers in this shipment selling at $5.15, averaging 1,210 lbs, a very satisfactory price to Mr. Baxter, who was there in person.

Thomas Black, a very prominent cattleman of Converse county, Wyo., had five cars of cattle on the South Omaha market July 18. In this shipment were 51 steers that sold at $5.10, averaging 1,102 lbs, and 50 heifers at $4.25, averaging 994 lbs.

Allen Carlisle of Saint Joseph county, Mich., writes: "Received car of cattle O. K. and we are well pleased with the same. They were just what we wanted and the price was right. You did beter than we would have done if we had been on the market. Thank you for the effort you made in our behalf."

Our Chicago house had the pleasure of handling hogs for the following parties July 15: Hale Bros. of Mower county, Minn.; F. H. Hesly of Pottawattamie county, Ia.; J. W. Dewitt of Bonhomme county, S. D.; L. E. Miller of Butler county, Ia.; C. L. Cole of Franklin county, Ia.; J. L. Comis of Bremer county, Ia.

W. P. Ricketts and Watson & Johnson, big cattle raisers of Crook county, Wyo., had a train of twenty-three cars of cattle on the South Omaha market July 18. In this consignment were about two cars of steers belonging to Mr. Ricketts that sold at $5.25, averaging 1,194 lbs, and 108 heifers at $4.85, averaging 995 lbs.

J. L. Kay, a prominent stockman of Dawes county, Neb., was at South Omaha July 18 with a car of his choice heifers. These were Whitefaces and sold at the high price of $5.25 per cwt, averaging 719 lbs. Mr. Kay can well be proud of the class of stock he is raising, and the price is an outside one for this kind of stock.

Wm. Charles of Custer county, S. D., for thirty-five years in the cattle business in the Black Hills, was on the South Omaha market July 14 with two cars of very good steers, averaging 1,204 lbs, that were sold by us at $5.85, well up toward the top of the week's trade, in western beef steers, and a very satisfactory price to him. Conditions are not in very satisfactory shape in Mr. Charles' vicinity, and he stated shipments would necessarily be early on this account.

Included in those who had cattle on the East St. Louis market July 15 were: Stroud & Roff of Pontotoc county, Okla., 2 cars; Colorado Stock Feeding Co. of Denver county, Colo., 7 cars; H. A. Bauer of Pittsburg county, Okla, 1 car. Hogs were marketed by the following shippers on the same date: Wilcox & Littrell of Randolph county, Mo., 1 car; John E. Yowell of Macoupin county, Ill., 1 car; Hill & Co. of Scotland county, Mo., 1 car; Street & Johnson of Linn county, Mo., 1 car.

R. L. Mabon, an old resident of the Hamilton county, Neb., country, was on the South Omaha market looking after the shipment of a car of hogs. Conditions in that part of the country are very satisfactory, according to Mr. Mabon. Recent rains have been of considerable benefit to the corn crop, and, taken as a whole, they will have a very good crop of all kinds of grain. The early season was a little dry, but all early corn is beyond the plowing stage, and all cultivation will soon be past in the late planting.

It was July 12 that the following shippers were represented on the East St. Louis market with hogs: T. W. Blackwood of Shelby county, Mo., 2 cars; W. E. Green of Linn county, Mo., 1 car; P. O. Short of Greene county, Ill., 1 car; P. W. Patton and J. R. Sweat & Son of Gentry county, Mo., 1 car each; E. P. Harned of Mercer county, Mo., 1 car; Wilcox & Littrell of Randolph county, Mo., 1 car; C. C. Jones of Cooper county, Mo., 1 car; J. M. Mayfield of Cooper county, Mo., 1 car; Austin & Ferguson of Cooper county, Mo., 1 car; Davis & Lorton of Greene county, Ill., 1 car.

Herman Holsten of Dodge, Neb.

Mr. Holsten is cashier of the Farmers' State Bank, Dodge, Neb. He came to Nebraska with his father in 1874, at that time locating in the Scribner territory. In 1889 Mr. Holsten started in the banking business, together with his farming and feeding operations. These lines he has followed quite extensively during the past twenty-one years, at this time owning 1,600 acres of land in Dodge, Cuming and Boone counties, Neb. Mr. Holsten is thoroughly progressive and, although numerous hard knocks have been suffered, his fight has gradually shown reward. At this time, though still a young man, he is counted one of the most influential men in the banking, farming and live stock interests of Nebraska.

Mr. Holsten has just marketed nine cars of cattle at the very satisfactory figure of $8.00 at South Omaha, through Clay, Robinson & Co. After a feed of seven months they showed an average gain of 1,439 lbs. The price and gain were both very gratifying to Mr. Holsten, who has been a very liberal patron of Clay, Robinson & Co. since he has been feeding stock.

Among the well-known shippers who had cattle on the East St. Louis market July 14 were: Stroud & Roff of Pontotoc county, Okla., 3 cars; R. H. Utley & Son of Johnson county, Mo., 4 cars; E. T. Woody of Howell county, Mo., 1 car. Following shippers marketed hogs on the same date: R. H. Farrett of Henry county, Mo., 2 cars; Lane & Wood of Howell county, Mo., 1 car; F. W. Hobbs of Greene county, Mo., 1 car; Monticello Poultry Co. of Drew county, Ark., 1 car; Knox Everett of Obion county, Tenn., 1 car; E. P. Harned of Cooper county, Mo., 1 car.

Following shipments of cattle were received by our house at East St. Louis on July 13: J. V. Griffith of Webster county, Mo., 1 car; Darby Bros. of Cooper county, Mo., 2 cars; Wilcox & Littrell of Randolph county, Mo., 2 cars. On the same date the following shippers marketed hogs through our house: C. C. Clawson of Cedar county, Mo., 2 cars; N. J. Kirkback of Carroll county, Mo., 1 car; I. N. Elkins of Johnson county, Ill., 1 car; S. M. Boner of Franklin county, Ill., 1 car; George Preston of Chariton county, Mo., 1 car; Oswald & Robien of Cooper county, Mo., 1 car; J. W. King of Marion county, Mo., 1 car; W. R. Benson of Monroe county, Mo., 1 car; E. L. Story of Cedar county, Mo., 1 car.

On July 11 the following well-known shippers were represented on the East St. Louis market with cattle: Burden & Collun of Johnston county, Okla., 1 car; R. I. Bilby of Tulsa county, Okla., 2 cars; W. C. Duke of Yalobusha county, Miss., 1 car; L. M. Boyd of Montgomery county, Miss., 1 car; Young & Ledford of Adair county, Mo., 1 car; R. W. Belt of Carroll county, Mo., 1 car; Wilcox & Littrell of Randolph county, Mo., 1 car; Stroud & Roff of Pontotoc county, Okla., 4 cars. On the same day the following shippers marketed hogs: J. F. Kennick of Noble county, Okla., 2 cars; J. W. Crane of Noble county, Okla., 1 car; L. Vineyard of Greene county, Ill., 1 car; R. W. Belt of Carroll county, Mo., 1 car; Wilcox & Littrell of Randolph county, Mo., 1 car.

Montana shipments to the South Omaha market July 18 included four cars from W. Suddith and H. B. Drum each, old-time cattlemen of Montana. Mr. Suddith's shipment included a car of steers, averaging 1,067 lbs, at $5.40, while Mr. Drum had a car of 1,127-lb steers that sold at $5.10. In speaking of conditions in his section of the country, Mr. Drum stated dry weather had had bad effect on the grass and hay crop, and shipments would necessarily have to be made early. Some very good wheat was raised in his section the past season, his yield of wheat being on an average of 25 bushels per acre. The Judith Basin is in very good shape and the grain yield quite satisfactory. Most of the large cattle outfits had given place to the smaller men and people who would do more or less farming.

Included in the many progressive feeders of regular dealers who sold beef steers through our Chicago house last week and for whom we are proud to say we obtained pleasing prices for their stock considering the condition of the trade were: L. H. Durley of Pettis county, Mo.; A. T. Land & C. Co., Greeley county, Neb.; Geo. Gray of Blue Earth county, Minn.; C. J. Searle of Muscatine county, Ia.; E. P. Myers of Grant county, Neb.; Irvin & Duncan of Pike county, Mo.; J. D. Lawson of Dawson county, Neb.; J. F. Allgaier of Shelby county, Mo.; F. H. Brockway of Saline county, Mo.; A. J. Baker of Fremont county, Ia.; E. H. Vankirk of Mills county, Ia.; Murray Bros. of Humboldt county, Ia.; E. J. McCaffrey of Crawford county, Ia.; S. Washburn of Guthrie county, Ia; E. Biggins of Peoria county, Ill.; Wm. Rehse, Jr., of Ida county, Ia.; S. S. Bartley of Pocahontas county, Ia.; Ben May of Sullivan county, Mo.; A. R. Campbell of Buchanan county, Ia.

We had the pleasure of handling shipments of hogs for the following parties who are prominent in feeding or shipping circles in their respective localities: First State Bank of Brown county, S. D.; Furney & Wilson of Chariton county, Mo.; F. Belz of Warren county, Ia.; McCandless Bros. and R. J. Twist of Sangamon county, Ill.; S. O. Students' Judging at Northwestern Show.

One of the features of the Northwestern Livestock Show, which is to be held at South St. Paul, on Nov. 15 to 18, is the students' judging contest. These contests have been held each year during the past three years, and never failed to draw a large enthusiastic attendance of students from the various agricultural colleges in the territory of this show. The young men take keen interest in these competitions and appreciate very much the prizes which are offered. The contest is open to regularly enrolled under-graduate students from the agricultural colleges of Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Manitoba. Entries from each college are limited to five men and each student competing must have been in attendance at the college which he represents all or part of the year 1910.

The association offers $100 for the students' judging contest, to be divided into eight premiums, based on relative aggregate standing in the horse, cattle, sheep and swine classes. In addition to this the Minnesota Livestock Breeders' Association offers on the same conditions the additional sum of $50 so that the prizes are attractive to the students for competition.

Contestants in this class must send in their names not later than Nov. 12, and are required to pay an entry fee of $1.00. It is expected that this year this feature of the show will attract a larger number of students than it has heretofore, because the show is so much better known and the students' judging contests in the past have been conducted in a manner to reflect credit on the show and encourage these young men in their desire to enter into the competition another year.

I have some more three-year-old wethers, old ewes, Blackfaced yearlings and a lot of splendid Blackfaced lambs that I will ship you about the first of October."

Feeder Problem and Its Solution

THIS article is printed for the purpose of showing you just how and why Clay, Robinson & Co. can render you money-saving service in the purchase of your feeding cattle, feeding sheep and lambs, and breeding ewes. In other words, WHY we can secure for you better stock for less money than you can obtain in any other way. To render the best and most efficient service in any line a man must be a specialist; that is to say, an expert. We are specialists and experts in all that pertains to the handling of live stock upon commission, whether in the selling of fat live stock consignments or the purchasing of feeders on order. In twenty-four years we have built up from a very small beginning the greatest business of its kind in the world. It is not our purpose to enlarge herein upon the selling end of our work, but rather to set forth some of the reasons why it will pay you to buy your feeding cattle and sheep through our firm.

To commence with, we have houses at the leading feeding markets, thus placing us in close personal touch with the principal sources of supply. Each of our houses is in daily—indeed, almost hourly—communication by mail and wire with all the others, and nothing in any way affecting live stock values can transpire without our being promptly apprised of it.

Our feeder buyers are on the market every day, constantly watching for opportunities to fill their orders to the best advantage possible, and it goes without saying that they pick up many a bargain which would never fall in the way of the individual country buyer. In this, as in other lines, you must "know the ropes," and skilled, experienced service pays.

The manager of one of the largest cattle concerns in the West, for whom we bought hundreds of feeders, said: "A strong point in favor of buying through a commission house, if the house is one that can be implicitly trusted, is that the identity of the buyer need not be known to the seller; whereas if a buyer goes in person on the market there may be a tendency to mark the cattle up before he bids on them."

Most of our orders for feeders are received by mail, and in the majority of cases the customer does not see the stock until it is received at his home station. Of course he can come to market and assist in or supervise his purchase if he wishes, but this is not at all necessary, provided his order is placed with a thoroughly responsible and trustworthy house. Thus you save railroad fare, hotel bills and time. We fill your order just as carefully as though you were on the market in person. In fact, we could not afford to do otherwise.

For this service you pay the regular fixed charge of $10 per car load of cattle, $6.00 per single deck for sheep and lambs and $6.00 per single deck for western breeding ewes and $10 per single deck for native breeding ewes. This covers the entire buying expense, except that it is often necessary to feed some hay while the order is being completed, in which case you are charged the actual cost of same. The stock is weighed by official weighmasters of the Stock Yards Company. We, ourselves, attend to loading and shipping, and customers are always promptly advised by mail or wire when the stock is loaded out.

From a business standpoint we are deeply interested in filling your orders to the best possible advantage, because, if our selection and service please, the stock, when fattened, will naturally be consigned to us for sale. Thus we have a double motive for doing our best to please you. The axiom "well bought is half sold" explains our position. A well selected lot of cattle or sheep, properly handled, are bound to be easy sellers at satisfactory figures, hence we are personally interested in securing for our customers the best stock for the least money.

That our service is satisfactory is best shown by the testimonial letters printed in the Live Stock Report from week to week. These could be multiplied by scores if space permitted. Your banker can tell you as to our responsibility. Correspond with us. Take us into your confidence and let us know not only what kind of stock you want, but also how you intend to handle it. Our advice is worth much to you. If we cannot fill your order right and in accordance with your wishes, we will not fill it at all, and will tell you so.

Nebraska Will Have Good Corn Crop.

[illegible] Johnson was on the South Omaha market July [illegible] with a car of cattle from his feed lots at Kearney, Neb. This shipment was a car of short-fed steers that averaged 1,078 lbs and were sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. at the very satisfactory price of $7.00. In conversation with Mr. Johnson he stated conditions were in very fair shape in his neighborhood. While farmers had suffered from dry weather to some extent, rain has been plentiful the past few days and the corn would no doubt make a good crop. Wheat had done very well in his locality, about 20 bushels to the acre; in fact, they had little complaint to make, considering conditions existing in a greater part of the state at this time.

North Central Iowa Corn in Good Shape.

William Johnson, hog salesman for Clay, Robinson & Co. at Sioux City, was a caller at our office Friday of last week. He, along with two other gentlemen, made the overland trip from Sioux City to Chicago in an automobile. "The corn crop in North Central Iowa is in good shape," said Mr. Johnson, "and weedy fields are the exception. However, some parts have had no rain for six or seven weeks and others only local showers. Farmers are busy putting up hay and cutting small grain. The hay crop is short. There are a few big bunches of cattle on feed, but not many small lots. The pig crop was good and they are in healthy condition. There are not many matured hogs outside of old sows and many of these are being fattened for market. We struck the northwestern line of Illinois at Clinton and came straight across. From Dwight, Ia., to Clinton, Ill., the corn crop is very spotted and the average is not good. From Clinton to Chicago, however, the outlook is very promising."

L. E. Potter of Brown county, Minn., had his second shipment of hogs for the week on the South St. Paul market last Friday.

Hay Crop is Short.

[illegible]ing reports from various parts of [illegible] in regard to the hay crop are re[illegible] the Experiment Station at St. Anthony Pa[illegible] These reports show a probable sho[illegible]y owing to the drought. Althe[illegible] may come during this month it [illegible]ble that the hay crop can catch [illegible] demand for winter fodder. M[illegible] be sown if no time be lost in [illegible] and even sorghum and fodder corn may be planted with hope of a fair crop of fodder before frost. This sort of feed may also be needed to supplement pastures for the dairy herds, for pastures are now reported to be short. The Experiment Station advises activity immediately in raising a crop for winter roughage, and to make the most possible out of millet, sorghum and fodder corn. Thorough tillage will enable one to produce a fair crop of fodder corn with a comparatively small rainfall.

Cheap Way of Breeding.

The cheapest way for a poor man to obtain the use of a pure bred sire is to induce a dozen of his neighbors to cooperate with him in the purchase of such a sire of merit as may be desirable. The Minnesota Experiment Station believes this a feasible plan for poor or well-to-do farmers. The poor man can hardly afford to own such a sire for his exclusive use. The more fortunate neighbor doesn't want to waste money in exclusive ownership, so the practical way is to own a bull in neighborhood partnership and all use him until his usefulness to the partnership is exhausted by reason of relationship to the cows of the community. Then he may be disposed of to some other equally wise neighborhood, when the first purchaser should procure another.

Hogging Off Corn.

"Hogging off" corn is most advantageous when the weather is dry. It is not judicious to keep hogs in the fields after heavy rains. If the season is a wet one it will be better to keep them out of the corn field, as turning them in is likely to waste the corn and do injury to the hogs and to the land. On dry ground, however, the droppings by the hogs amount to a distribution of valuable manure. In case this is liable to be washed off the land by rains after the corn has been harvested it will be well to go over the field with a sharp disk or spike-toothed disk harrow to loosen the surface soil so that the manure will be the better retained and absorbed.—Coburn's "Swine in America."

RECOMMENDED BY AGRICULTURAL COLLEGES.

This calf meal is made from a formula recommended by an agricultural college and is made from ingredients which are recommended by nearly every agricultural college in the land for calves, pigs, lambs and young animals at the milk age. The reason you cannot make a substitute for milk out of home-grown feed or mill feed is because the young animals cannot digest starch, and when they are fed on mixed with skim milk it will generally cause indigestion and scours. In the manufacture of Smith's calf meal the starch is changed to a form of dextrose that is easily digested by young animals. It will prevent scouring and keep the calves and pigs in a fat growing condition.

WEANS PIGS IN LESS THAN TWO MONTHS.

We print herewith a letter from F. H. Smith, farmer and feeder of Somerset township, Hillsdale county, Michigan:

George B. Smith & Company,
842 Exchange Avenue,
Union Stock Yards, Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

I have had so much success with your calf meal that I have purchased a number of calves in this neighborhood besides those of my own raising. These calves were three or four days old on an average when I brought them home and I fed them milk for a few days, gradually changing them to calf meal. They are all good thrifty calves, and some of them I expect to sell for veal.

Last November one of my Duroc-Jersey sows had a litter of seventeen pigs, a very large litter to be raised in winter. I at once partitioned off one corner of the pen and fixed a small trough so that the little pigs could crawl through the partition and eat a warm slop which I made from the calf meal. This was kept before them until they were old enough to be fed the calf meal regularly, when they would all scurry through the partition at feeding time and clean up their feed like older hogs. These pigs actually weaned themselves before they were two months old. They liked the calf meal better than their mother's milk, and they thrived better after weaning than before. I would not take $300.00 for the seventeen shoats today. I figure that $50 would cover the cost of the calf meal and what other feed I have given them to date.

In feeding calves I use the calf meal mixed with cottonseed meal or blood flour dry mixed with oats and cold pressed cottonseed cake, giving them plenty of water to drink. As soon as they [illegible] the dry feed readily I prefe[illegible] them that way entirely, as I think they do better on the dry feed than they do when it is mixed with [illegible] drink.

For pigs I use the calf meal mixed with tankage, as a slop.

Yours truly,
F. H. SMITH,
Somerset, Michigan.

COTTON SEED MEAL FOR CALVES.

R. B. G., Indiana.—Is cotton seed meal a good feed for calves?

Ans.—There is a difference of opinion. Some prefer linseed meal. We are selling cotton seed meal to manufacturers of the best grades of calf meals, from which we infer that it is a good feed. However, we do not use cotton seed meal in our own preparation which is listed in the Feed Stuff Market of the Live Stock Report as our calf meal is used for feeding large litters of pigs. In that case linseed meal or feeding tankage would be better by far for them than cottonseed meal. Besides, our calf meal is used extensively with skim milk, in which case no protein supplement is necessary at all, as it is contained in the milk. We used cold pressed cotton seed cake last winter, mixed with the dry calf meal for our young calves, with the best results we ever obtained from any seed for calves less than six months old.

Blood flour is also used for protein and a sack should be kept on hand as a tablespoonful mixed in the feed will cure a case of scours. On the other hand, linseed meal is a trifle laxative. Where each is used as needed and the calves are watched closely there will be no trouble either from scours or binding up, and the calves can be kept in a thrifty, growing condition at all times.

CALF RAISING.

G. S. F., Indiana: "Please send me information about raising thrifty calves without milk."

Answer: In a "nut shell," keep from feeding starchy feeds until they are 5 or 6 minths old. There is no starch in milk and the stomach of the young calf does not become fully adjusted to digest starchy feeds before the calf is 6 or 8 months old. During this time a change is gradually taking place and the grain ration may be increased. At Glenwood farm we have a bunch of 20 spring calves on dry feed, i. e., we have taken away their liquid food, giving them nothing but water to drink. They are all thrifty and doing better as a whole than calves formerly raised on a ration of skim milk continuing during the summer months.

Their dry feed consists of one-half oats, one-tenth cold pressed cottonseed cake and two-fifths calf meal. The calf meal is prepared by parching the grain which converts the starch into grape sugar. Toasted bread is an illustration. Grape sugar or dextrine is soluble and easily digested. That is why a physician will recommend toasted bread for a person with a weak stomach.

It is best to feed the young calf 2 or 3 quarts of milk to a feed for two weeks from birth. After the calf is a week old the milk can be diluted with warm water mixed with calf meal and linseed meal or blood flour, 6 parts calf meal to 4 parts linseed meal, dividing a cupful of the mixture between 4 calves.

The calf meal is of light, bulky character, but dissolves readily in warm water, as it contains no fiber. We first began grinding the calf meal but found that in the absence of starch granules it dissolved as readily without grinding and is much more preferrable as a dry feed than the fine ground meal, as it keeps the animal from bolting it down without mastication, producing some action of the saliva glands before swallowing.

The calf can be taught to eat dry meal by putting some in the bucket after the feed.

Clay, Robinson & Company's LIVE STOCK REPORT

Vol. 20 | Chicago, Friday, July 29. 1910 | No. 30

Rangers in Plainer Flesh Than Usual.

Arrivals of cattle from the Northwestern ranges, both at Chicago and South Omaha, are in larger numbers than usual for this time of year, and the great bulk of them are in very plain flesh. Steers that grade as choice have been conspicuous by their absence. A big proportion of the arrivals have comprised steers which were more suitable to take out and finish than for the shambles. Condition of the cattle is indicative of the burned condition of the ranges and the goodly supplies reflect the necessity of shipping.

At this time the common and medium range steers are meeting with a very indifferent demand. This is due in no small measure to the heavy receipts of natives of similar grades, which are being forced to market by dry weather and short pastures. To make bad matters worse, the outlet through feeding channels is rather narrow, due to the same causes. The outlook for range cattle of poor to plain average is not very promising for the time being, as signs point to liberal runs of these kinds. However, just as soon as the distillery feeders get ready to buy, no doubt they will lift a big weight off the market by buying liberally of the thin kinds. The outlook for the strictly good to prime fat steers is quite promising, as there will no doubt be a relatively short number of these to come forward from the ranges, and there is no promise of liberal supplies to be sent in fr m the corn belt states at any time this season. Range cows and heifers are meeting with good demand at current prices, both local slaughterers and outside buyers taking hold of these very readily.

Drought Sending in Nebraska Cattle.

"Dry weather and short pastures in certain parts of Western Nebraska will hasten the marketward movement of cattle and with other range districts sending in drouth reports I would not be surprised to see the grass crop show up earlier and show up thinner than usual," declared J. L. Kay of Marsland, Neb., to the Journal-Stockman. "Conditions around Marsland are anything but promising at present and growers are feeling a little blue over the outlook." Mr. Kay was represented on the South Omaha beef market July 18 with a shipment of spayed heifers, the tops of which were sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. at $5.25. They were almost pure-blood Herefords. Very little spaying is being done in that part of the country, owing to the broad demand for good breeding stock.

Long Time Between Rains in Wyoming.

Ambrose Hemingway, president of the Nine H Six Sheep Co., with headquarters at Bucknum, Wyo., writes under date of July 18: "The drought still continues here. It is 395 days since we have had a rain on this range that would make water run in a wagon track. We just finished cutting our Turkey Red Winter wheat today, which will yield about twelve to fifteen bushels to the acre."

Will Delay Advancing Rates.

Representatives of western railroads have had a conference with Chairman Knapp of the Interstate Commerce Commission and voluntarily proposed to suspend all increases of rates until Nov. 1 in order that the commission might in the meantime give consideration to the question of the reasonableness of the proposed increases.

—How About Feeders?—

Good rains in many parts of the corn belt, coupled with splendid growing weather, have put a decidedly cheerful aspect upon the corn crop outlook, and feeders are facing the question of feed-lot supplies for the coming fall and winter. Western cattle and sheep are coming to Chicago and the River markets in fair numbers, and within another week or two the movement will be well under way, solving the feeder's problem by laying down almost at his door an ample supply and assortment of feeding stock of every kind and class. The connecting link between demand and supply is formed by the efficient feeder-buying departments of Clay, Robinson & Co. at all markets. Let us know your wants in the above line and we will "deliver the goods" and save you money, time and trouble. Our feeder-buying departments at all points report active business, showing that our facilities are appreciated and utilized.

No matter what market you are tributary to, if you place your order with Clay, Robinson & Co. it will be handled and filled by our expert buyers who are on the market every day looking for bargains for customers.

Persons wanting feeding sheep, lambs or breeding ewes are invited to write our Chicago office for an interesting booklet just issued, entitled "Pointers for Buyers of Feeding Sheep, Lambs or Breeding Ewes." It contains many valuable hints for prospective purchasers of any of above classes of sheep.

Notes from Rawlins, Wyo.

Rawlins is a unique town. It stands in the desert and in winter is the windiest place on the map. And yet with all these natural disadvantages it is a busy, progressive place. It is a great railroad point, an important division terminal on the U. P. R. R. Fifty thousand dollars a month is paid out here by the road. Northward is the great valley of the Sweetwater, southward the Snake River, westward the Red Desert and eastward the Platte Valley. They all pay tribute to Rawlins, and in the course of years the old timers and many new comers have gotten rich. But the great hold the Rawlinites have is their sticking together. They will jangle among themselves, but to the outsider they are a united front, a British square before cavalry. Take a walk through the town and you will see among other buildings a Masonic Temple and an Elks Lodge that are worthy of a place many times the size of Rawlins. When the Masons built their home there Bill Daley superintended it, and it is as massive and solid as himself. It was a labor of love, and he looks with pride at its shapely architecture. If you spend a day at this place be sure and shake hands with the following, among many others: Homer France, Rumsey Cullen, Tierney, John Donell, John Mahoney, Homer Merrill, Judge Craig and Ike Miller, if you find him at home.

Round about there are sheep in thousands. The past winter was favorable in this region, but they are complaining of dry weather and short grass, and they talk of shipments just as at neighboring places.

Denver Prize Cattle are Doing Fine.

P. R. Low of Tarkio, Mo., who is a famous cattle feeder, writes: "Most of the fat cattle are shipped out of this part of Missouri. The Denver prize cattle, which I am feeding for the Chicago Fat Stock Show, are doing fine. I am feeding them Champion Molasses Feed, which we manufacture at Tarkio, ground and ear corn, and they are running on grass. Pastures are very short here on account of dry weather. I am also feeding four loads of cattle for the St. Joseph and Kansas City stock shows. Inclosed please find 50c for the Report. I consider it a first-class live stock market report, condensed and to the point."

What a Beef Animal Means.

Did you ever stop to think what a beef animal means? It means at least tow tons of forage (dried hay basis) and two and a quarter tons of ear corn. The beef-animal "population"—to use statistical technicalities of language—is increasing say 1½ per cent a year compounded, whereas the beef consumption is growing at an average rate of 2½ per cent compounded. These averages exclude the last two yaars of excessive meat prices and the breakfast cereal recrudescence. But the population of the country—all fond of porterhouse steaks is growing at a geometrical rate of about 1.9 per cent.

A. B. Langlie, prominent in business and live stock circles of Clayton county, Ia., writes: "I have returns for cattle and think you sold them very good, considering their quality. Thank you very much."

The English Royal Show.

(From Special Correspondent.)

The Royal Agricultural Society of England held its Seventieth annual show June 21 to 25 inclusive at Wavertree playground, Liverpool, under very favorable conditions. Showers the last two days checked the attendance, somewhat, although the 108-acre show ground was kept in firm condition, due to the excellent turf. An average paid attendance for the five days would be about 30,000. This is somewhat less than the figures from last year at Gloucester, where over 40,000 attended each day. Some 15,000 members and others were also admitted each day. Entries were well up to the average, some 2,800 head of live stock being entered, besides 2,000 entries of poultry and produce.

The live stock formed the principal feature of the show, although a decided interest was taken in the excellent displays of machinery and educational exhibits. Each day immense crowds filled the grandstands to witness the stock parades, jumping contests and harness horse judging. The breeding classes were all judged the first day by the 100 odd judges, who consisted mostly of breeders and seemed to give excellent satisfaction. Following the judging, a colored placard was placed on each winner's stall so that all might readily know which had won the prizes. Each day the animals were paraded by classes with the winners at the head of each, another feature which made it possible for all to compare the winners.

There were 690 horses entered, which figure broke all previous records. These comprised 10 breeds and each breed was represented by very typical specimens. There were classes for foals, yearlings, two year olds and three year olds in each breed. Besides this there was a class for brood mares with foals at side, which was well filled in all instances, in the shires this class having 16 entries and in the hunters 20. Such a class is very educamtional in that one can see the transmission of type from parent to offspring. On the last afternoon 200 choice cart horses were paraded in harness by the large firms of Liverpool and it is doubtful if ever a better collection of geldings was assembled before a crowd. They were nearly all shires and would average close to a ton in weight.

Nine hundred and forty cattle, consisting of representatives of 17 distinct breeds, formed a very strong show in that department. The sheep display was also strong, some 800 being exhibited, while in the pig department six breeds were shown, with strong classes of Berkshires and large Blacks.

The total prize money amounted to $50,000 and it is doubtful if it could have gone to a better cause as its results will be felt for years to come.

Australia Leads in Sheep.

That Australia leads the world in sheep farming is the report of Vice Consul General Henry D. Baker of Sydney. The estimated value of flocks in Australia is placed at $220,352,400, and their annual gross output is 75 per cent of their value.

The number of sheep in the countries leading in the sheep industry are given in Mr. Baker's report as follows: Australia, 87,043,266; Argentina, 77,581,100; Russia, 58,510,523; United Stattes, 54,631,000; United Kingdom, 30,011,833.

R. R. Lucore Buys a Fine Bull.

R. R. Lucore of Arriba, Colo., has purchased the great show and breeding Angus bull, Star of Denison 82426, from W. A. McHenry of Denison, Ia Mr. McHenry's cattle have taken more prizes than any other Aberdeen-Angus herd in America. Last fall his herd took thirty-six champions and 105 first prizes. Star of Denison has been one of Mr McHenry's most active herd bulls. He is only five years old and should do much for the improvement of Mr. Lucore's stock. Mr. Star himself was exhibited as a calf yearling and two-year-old. Mr. Lucore is a famous breeder and a good friend of Clay, Robinson & Co.

A Big Sheep Show Coming.

Arrangements have been made to pull off an International Sheep Show and Auction Sale in Ogden, Utah, during the Big Four State Fair in that city Sept. 23 to 29. The sheep show given there last January was a great success, and the sale will be on a much larger scale this year. It is proposed to bring together the breeder and buyer who can trade among themselves in either private or auction sale. To show what volume of business this would mean is reflected in the fact that 140,000 rams change hands there each year among the various sheepmen of the Intermountain Empire. The management will leave no stone unturned in making the sheep show and auction sale the biggest, grandest and best ever. The first four days of the festivities will be given over to exhibiting and selling at private sale. The last two days will be devoted to the grand auction sale, which will be conducted by an expert live stock auctioneer.

We are in receipt of the revised prize list of the International Sheep Show and it is seen at a glance that the list conforms to that of all other high-class shows. This is a large event and of great importance both to eastern and western sheepmen and all who are interested should make arrangements to attend the show if possible.

A Feeder Buying Pointer.

Did it ever occur to you that the plain quality cattle will make money? They certainly will, if you get the good-doing kind and they are bought right. We know people who are very successful with them, and never fail to make good money. There is a big difference in the "doing" qualities of the plain cattle, just as there is with all other kinds. If you will give the right kind of plain, lower-priced cattle same good care and feed that that you would the higher-priced class they will respond quickly to it, make good gains and get fat. Fat is what counts, and fat is what the packers pay the money for.

For one thing, you have less money invested to start with and your risk is therefore not so great. Further, you do not have to get the extreme top price to make good money. There is nearly always a good supply of the plain quality feeding cattle on the market, and by careful sorting we can get you good-doing cattle that never fail to make good gains and get fat when properly cared for.

Think this over very seriously. It merits your consideration. Tell us how you want to handle the cattle, then leave it to us to send you some money makers. We can of course buy any kind you want and will gladly give you information relative to the market at all times. We have competent buyers who give this part of the business their exclusive attention at each of the ten markets where we have houses. If your order is placed with Clay, Robinson & Co. at any market their skill and experience is immediately enlisted in your behalf.

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

Inter-State Show Notes.

Announcement is made that the railroads centering in St. Joseph will make favorable round trip rates for the Inter-State Live Stock Show which is to be held there Sept. 26 to Oct. 1. The rates will be in effect the entire week and will apply to all points within a radius of 200 miles of St. Joseph.

In a look over the premium lists it is found that this show recognizes more breeds of beef cattle and hogs than some of the older shows. The Inter-State recognizes Red Polled cattle among the beef breeds and takes in five breeds of hogs. The Inter-State is the farmers' show.

Native Cattle.

BEEF STEERS

Range of prices and bulk sales of native beef steers this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Range.	Bulk.
This week.....	$4.50@8.35	$6.00@7.60
Previous week.....	4.30 8.55	6.10 7.85
Year ago.....	4.00 7.45	6.00 7.00
Two years ago.....	3.65 7.85	5.35 6.90

Marketing Thursday of last week 7,706. It was generally a steady deal. Best steers available sold at $7.85, paid for 18 head of 1,336 lbs average. Supply included a few hundred western rangers and a train load of Texas cattle which packers showed relatively better favor than the lower-priced native offerings for the reason that the western and Texans are relatively lower on the hooks than above natives at current prices. Run Friday 3,271. Market was slow, although prices were not quotably lower. Best steers offered included 20 head of 1,278 lbs average at $7.75. As compared with the close of previous week prices were 20@30c lower for offerings of value below $7.65 and 10@15c lower for those of value above that figure.

Marketing of 29,613 at the start of this week was many thousand above trade requirements. Result was the dullest market in some time and prices slipped back 15@25c. The common and medium lots showed most decline, being generally 25c lower. Not many offerings had gone over the scales until near the noon hour. There were upwards of 71,000 at the six leading western markets. The top was $8.35, paid for 67 head of 1,565 and 1,636 lbs average. There were very few sales as high as $8.00 and bulk of trading was at $6.00@7.65. There was a big showing of offerings in plain and medium flesh, forced in by dry pastures. These were very difficult sale, as buyers showed western rangers and Texans first favor, outside of the good to choice corn-fed lots. Arrivals Tuesday 5,882. Where there were any price changes they showed a weaker basis. Demand was dull from all sources and not a few of the offerings were locked up for the Wednesday trade. About half of the total supply comprised western range and Texas cattle, which buyers showed preference over the plainer classes of natives. Best offerings available were 23 head of 1,282 lbs average at $6.00. Supply Wednesday 22,000. A very dull market from start to finish at prices 10@25c lower, mostly 10@15c lower. Top was $8.20, paid for two loads of 1,632 lbs average.

COWS AND HEIFERS.

The moderate receipts Thursday of last week prevented buyers from pounding the market further. However, there was dull tone throughout the session. Grass-fed stuff comprised most of the Friday arrivals and these wen 10c lower. As the western range cows come more freely some severe bearish pressure is looked for in the native cow and heifer trade. To make matters worse dry pastures are driving in many natives. As compared with the close of the previous week prices showed 15@25c decline.

Under a liberal supply at the start of this week prices broke 10@25c. The market got worse as the day advanced. Common and medium grades were in liberal proportion and sold to least advantage. Packers claim that they can buy the lower-priced steers at relatively lower rates than the better grades of she stock and this exerted a bearish influence on these classes. It was a dull and weak deal Tuesday. Outlet was narrow through outside and local channels. A lot of riff-raff dairy cows out of dry pastures are coming now, while strictly good beef grades of eows and heifers are the exception. Slaughterers say that they are getting too many of the low-price offerings and as a result the trade in these is on the weakest basis of the season. Very uneven trade Wednesday at mostly 10@15c lower prices.

BULLS.

On Thursday of last week the market was not much changed. Prices were strong Friday, with some of the bolognas a little higher sale than early in the week. As compared with the close of the previous week prices were on a firm basis.

Prices ruled steady to 10c lower at the start of this week. Heavy butchers and good bolognas were in moderate numbers and demand very good. These kinds sold steady. The market was steady Tuesday.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of bulls:

CALVES.

While some of the better grades of vealers sold steady Thursday of last week, common and medium grades went weak to 25c lower. All price changes Friday toward firmness for better grades and weakness for less desirable kinds. As compared with the close of the previous week good to choice vealers were steady, while other kinds declined 25@50c.

A very poor outside demand, along with fairly good receipts, enabled the local buyers to pound prices at the start of this week to the tune of 25c. Opening active at prices steady to strong with last week's close, the Tuesday trade slowed up later and the market took a lower turn, prices being mostly 25c lower.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of calves:

Good to prime vealers.....	$8 25 @	8 75
Poor to fair vealers.....	5 50	7 50
Good to choice heavy calves.....	4 75	5 00
Poor to fair heavy calves.....	3 25	4 50

STOCKERS AND FEEDERS.

Top price and bulk sales of stockers and feeders this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Top Feeders.	Bulk Feeders.	Bulk Stockers.
This week	$6.00	$4.25@5.25	$3.50@4.35
Previous week	6.35	4.50 5.50	3.75 4.75
Year ago	5.25	4.25 4.85	3.65 4.35

While feeders met with an active demand at steady prices Thursday of last week, stockers were weak sale and a good many plain light lots went 10@15c lower. Prices showed little change Friday. As compared with the close of the previous week plain light and common quality medium weight offerings were 10@15c lower, while other kinds were steady sale.

The bulk of the offerings at the start of this week sold 10@15c lower. A few good heavy feeders sold steady, but these were no criterion of the general market. There was a liberal number of plain light steers available forced in by dry weather and burnt pastures. A liberal supply of stockers and feeders met a good demand Tuesday and prices held steady. Receipts were liberal Wednesday and the market was dull at 10@15c decline.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for stocker and feeding cattle:

Good to choice feeders	$5 00 @	6 00
Poor to medium feeders	4 00	4 75
Good to choice stockers	4 25	4 85
Plain to medium stockers	3 50	4 15

Marketing Thursday of last week 13,246. It was generally a 10c higher deal, with spots showing even more advance. A spread of $8.25@8.70 took the bulk. Above $8.70 it was a market for choice light and light butchers, with the top at $9.00, and under $8.25 for off-quality packers. Supply Friday 9,893. There was an urgent demand from all sources and prices were boosted 10@15c. The top was $9.10 and most good offerings went at $8.35@$8.80. Supply Saturday 7,942. A steady to 10c lower market, closing on bottom. Prices ranged from $8.25@9.05, being generally 10c higher than the close of the previous week.

Supply at the start of this week totaled 34,094. The market closed in much better shape than it opened. The start was very unpromising, but at the decline, which was anywhere from 10@20c, local packers went to the offerings and the finish was 10c above extreme low spot, which was 20c under Saturday. The practicable top was $8.95, but a spread of $8.30@8.60 took a big share of the arrivals. A lot of packers sold at $8.25@8.40, according to weight and quality. Odds and ends went at $7.75@8.00. The $9.00 hog was put out of the running. Tuesday marketing 15,007. The market was very irregular. As compared with the previous day's best basis it was a steady to strong trade, or 5@10c above low start of previous session. However, the close was 5@10c lower on packing stuff. The top was $9.05, obtained by us for 67 head of Missouri offerings of 185 lbs average, next best figure being $9.00. Most light hogs good enough for shippers sold at $8.85@8.95. The 225 to 260-lb butchers went at $8.70@8.80. Mixed packing sold down to $8.25 and the heavy packers as low as $8.00. Marketing Wednesday 21,000. Opening strong with the previous day's average, the market became 5@10c higher and the late trade showed most of the advance wiped out. Top $9.05, with bulk of trading at $8.35@8.80.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of hogs:

*Obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co.

Marketing Thursday of last week 18,823. It was an uneven market, but generally 10@15c higher, with extreme cases strong and others 25c higher. Top lambs went at $7.50 and bulk of sales at $6.50@7.25. Most ewes sold at $3.75@4.00, with the top $4.25, although a small lot of breeders landed at $4.75. Run Friday 13,391. Most offerings went on a firm to stronger basis, although all price changes tended toward weakness later on. Top for lambs was again $7.50, as high as any time for the week, and $4.00@4.25 gathered in most ewes. As compared with the close of last week most lambs showed $1.25 advance, with extreme cases $1.50 higher, while sheep and yearlings gained 25@50c.

Receipts at the start of this week were 25,561. While the supply fell under expectations, sellers were unable to make a general boost in prices. However, the market was active and strong. There might have been instances where some advances were made. Several lots of lambs reached $7.50 and there was quite a showing at $7.00@7.25. Ewes went largely at $4.00@4.25, with ewes and wethers mixed at $4.30. Tuesday supply totaled 29,886. Opening steady, the lamb market closed 15@25c lower. Sheep went steady to 10c lower. Lambs reached $7.50 early, but just as good had to go at $7.25 on the late market. A spread of $3.75@4.00 secured good to choice ewes, although fancy ones went up to $4.25. Run Wednesday 18,000. Sheep and yearlings went 10@15c higher and lambs 15@25c lower, with limit for best lambs late in the day at $7.00.

Denver Markets.

Denver, Colo., July 26—The market last week closed with a loss of fully $1.00 for the week on everything except choice grade of killers. This was due largely to the Denver market being considerably higher than eastern points and also to the rather liberal supply during the week. Stockers and feeders met with rather indifferent demand, but we look for more brisk outlet after the first of September.

Receipts of cattle first two market days this week 1,800, all of which were westerns. Prices 10@15c lower today and 25@30c lower than last week's close. Top range steers $4.65 for a medium class. Best range cows at $3.75 and bulk $3.15@3.35.

Marketing of hogs Monday and Tuesday 1,600. Prices 10@15c lower than last Saturday. Top today $8.50 and bulk $8.35@8.40.

Arrivals of sheep and lambs first two market days this week 1,000. Market strong with last week's close. Top lambs $7.25, which price we obtained for the Perry offerings from Utah. Best yearlings $4.75, wethers $4.25 and ewes $3.75.

Fort Worth Markets.

[Special telegram from Clay, Robinson & Co.]

Fort Worth, Tex., July 26—Receipts of cattle first two market days this week 7,481. Steers sold 15@20c lower than last week's close. Top cake feds $6.50 for one load of 1,444 lbs average, with bulk at $5.25@5.50. Bulk of steer arrivals, however, were grassers and landed at $4.00@4.50. Canner cows 25c lower, with others 15c lower. Bulk cows $3.00@3.40. Light calves 25c lower and others 50c lower. Top was $6.60, with bulk light grades at $5.50@6.00 and most heavy $3.75@4.25. Stockers went 10@15c lower.

Trading in hogs was 15c higher than last Saturday. Receipts were light. Top today $8.95 and bulk $8.65@8.85.

There was no quotable change in the sheep or lamb trade from last week's close. Fair to good lambs brought $5.50@6.00, and a similar class of sheep $3.75@4.25. Stockers and feeders made $3.00@3.50.

[Special telegram from Clay, Robinson & Co.]

National Stock Yards, Ill., July 26—There has been a liberal supply of steers on the market this week and trade was irregular. Western beeves sold 15@25c lower. Best steers, averaging 1,500 lbs, made $8.00. Light weight cattle are coming in competition with quarantine supplies. Butcher cattle show a decline of 15@25c. Stock cattle are 15@25c lower. Very liberal supply of southern cattle. Monday's prices were 15@25c lower and today's market was steady. She stuff sharing in the decline. A liberal run of calves.

Receipts of hogs have been near 17,000 for two days. Monday market 5@10c lower. Today's close about same as finish yesterday. Top at $9.30 for extreme lights. Mixed packers and heavies made $8.92½, with butchers and shippers at $8.20. Pigs and throwouts from $8.00@9.00.

Receipts of sheep 14,700 for first two days this week. Lambs showed a decline of 25c and sheep 15c from the close of last week. Best lambs today at $7.35, most good fat kinds $7.00@7.15 and the fairly good sort $6.50@6.85. Plain Southwest offerings at $6.15@6.40. Mutton sheep to the slaughterers around $4.00. Good blackface breeding ewes of good ages $4.75@5.00. Stockers $3.00@4.00 for best with the fair kinds at $2.00@2.85.

Year ago.....	4.60	6.45	4.85	5.50	3.85 4.75

Marketing Thursday of last week totaled close to 15 loads. Most trading was at 10c decline. Quality of arrivals was again plain. Top beeves went at $6.00, paid for 30 head of 1,304-lb Wyomings. Two head of cows reached $5.50 and bulk went at $2.80@4.50. Feeders took a few lots at prices ranging up $4.85. There were no other rangers during the balance of the week. In sympathy with the price break for natives, steers showed a price loss of 20@30c for the week and cows and heifers 15@25c loss.

At the start of this week receipts were about 1,500, against 800 Monday of last week and 2,000 like day year ago. Montana and Wyoming sent in the bulk of the offerings and their flesh condition was again quite plain. Trading was dull from start to finish and prices declined 15@20c. It was late in the session before many of the offerings had been sold, due to the indifference and bearishness of the buyers. A load of the Chandler 1,366-lb steers from Montana sold up to $6.20 and two loads of the Murphy Montanas made $5.75. Cows and heifers were also very slow sale at prices 10@15c lower. Stockers and feeders showed 10@15c decline.

There were around 1,500 Wednesday. Trading had fairly good life and prices were fully steady. Quality of the arrivals showed no improvement. Top steers went at $6.15, paid for 86 head of the 1,203-lb Spaulding Wyomnigs. Welanded the T. R. Daily Montanas of 1,320 lbs average at $6.10, also J. B. Kendrick Wyoming-Texans straight at $5.45 and a string of the Spear Bros. Wyomings at $5.75. Prices for she stock were strong. Stockers and feeders in heavy supply and demand dull at prices 15@20c lower. Several strings of feeders from Wyoming sold at $3.65@4.00, most of which were horned. Receipts Wednesday 1,200. Market had fair life and prices ruled fully steady. Most of the offerings were beef steers and sold at $5.25@5.60.

Total marketing Thursday of last week 18,823. Prices were generally 10@15c higher. There were no good lambs available, best going at $6.75, while the feeders made $6.35. Wethers sold largely at $4.10@4.40 and the feeders at $3.80@4.00. Yearlings reached $5.50 and feeders went at $4.65. Marketing Friday 13,391. Most of the arrivals went at stronger prices, although the close was somewhat weaker. Lambs went for slaughter at $6.25@6.75 and feeders at $6.00@6.15. Best yearlings available went on feeding account at $5.10, this price being the highest of the week for feeders and obtained by us. Wethers sold at $3.90@4.50, latter price being the highest of the week and also obtained by us, while the feeders sold at $3.85@4.00. As compared with the close of the previous week lambs showed mostly $1.25 advance, with sheep and yearlings 25@50c higher.

Marketing at the start of this week totaled 25,561. It was generally an active market at strong prices, with extreme cases higher. Idaho lambs lacking top quality went at $7.30 and the feeders at $6.30. Idaho yearlings went for slaughter at $5.50@5.75 and feeders up to $5.10, latter price obtained by us. Wyoming wethers landed at $4.40, sale made by us, with others at $4.00@4.37½ and feeders at $3.90@4.10, latter price secured by us. Idaho ewes topped at $4.00 and feeders at $3.00. Total run Tuesday 29,886. Prices for lambs ruled steady at the start and 15@25c lower at the close. Sheep went steady to 10c lower. Lambs brought $6.75@7.00 and the feeders $6.25@6.35. Yearlings made $5.40@5.50 and the feeders $4.50@5.15, latter sale made by us. Bulk of wethers went on feeding account at $4.00@4.15, latter price obtained by us. Ewes sold largely at $3.85@4.00, with best feeders at $3.00. Breeding ewes went at $4.75@5.85, latter price obtaining 69-lb yearlings from Idaho. Wednesday run 18,000. While sheep and yearlings sold 10@15c higher, lambs were dull sale at prices 15@25c lower. Wethers made $4.50 and a very choice class of handy weight yearlings were quotable up to $5.75. An early top of $7.25 was made for lambs, but there was no safe outlet higher than $7.00 late in the day. There was an excellent demand for feeding and breeding stock, and prices for these ruled steady to strong.

Feeder Sheep and Lambs.

Below will be found bulk sales of feeder sheep, yearlings and lambs this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Bulk Sheep.		Bulk Yearlings.		Bulk Lambs.
This week....	$3.00@4.15		$5.00@5.15		$6.25@6.50
Last week....	3.75	4.00	4.75	5.00	6.00	6.25
Year ago.....	3.50	4.50	5.00	5 25	6.50	6.60

A goodly proportion of feeder sheep and lambs was included in total receipts this week. And there was also surprisingly broad and insistent demand. Prices were unevenly higher than the close of last week, although 10@25c covered most of the advances. The way orders poured in is evidence that prospective feeders have faith in the outturn of the corn crop and in the future market for fat offerings, as well as believing that current prices are relatively low. Top lambs went out at a cost of $6.50, yearlings $5.15, wethers $4.15 and ewes $3.25. Call for breeding ewes was also greatly improved, the improved market for wool and the low prices prevailing for the offerings being the cause of renewed interest. Most native offerings cost $4.50@4.85 and yearling rangers up to $5.85.

SOUTH OMAHA MARKETS.

Range Cattle.

South Omaha, Neb., July 26—Last week witnessed the first real movement of grass cattle, supplies for the week being made up almost entirely of this class. Drought conditions are the primary cause of such an early shipment, and cattle are not showing their usual flesh and quality as sompared with early shipments in previous years. The best rangers here during the week came from Western Nebraska and sold at $5.80, averaging 1,256 lbs. Sales above the $5.25 mark were quite scarce; in fact, $5.00 was considerably above the big bulk. Cows and heifers made up a fair percentage of the supply, and large offerings can be expected throughout the fall season. Owing to the limited amount of pasture in the corn belt, stockers and feeders met a very unappreciative set of buyers. A large proportion of only medium quality stock is coming, and prices are working toward a lower level with considerable rapidity. Little encouragement can be offered for a better outlet until conditions are in a better state throughout the corn feeding sections.

There was a heavy run here Monday and quality was rather common. Trade was very slow for the ordinary kinds and prices 10@15c lower, although best kinds held about steady. The market today was more active and rates held fully steady. S[illegible]ers and feeders show a big decline from early last week.

Range Sheep.

Last week there were around 56,000 sheep and lambs from the ranges offered on this market, wethers predominating to a large extent. Trade conditions were rather unsatisfactory at the start, but toward the middle of the week outside buyers became more in evidence and the final windup showed an improvement of 25@40c over Monday's basis. Lambs were in light supply and most of the advance was noticeable in these classes. Prices are quite attractive, considering values that have prevailed the past few years, and it is probable the low point in the trade has been reached. It is at least hoped so for the benefit of the range man, who is compelled to ship.

It was a steady to strong deal in sheep and lambs Monday. Top lambs made $7.50 and bulk $7.25@7.40. Best feeders at $6.10. Top wethers reached $4.10 and bulk $3.85@4.00, with feeders at $3.40@3.85. Yearlings went at $4.50@4.85. Choice Idaho ewes topped at $3.75, with fair to good kinds at $3.15@3.65 and the feeders at $2.50@3.00. Market today opened steady to a shade lower on killers and closed very weak. Feeders active and strong.

Houses at Ten Leading Markets

Clay, Robinson & Co.

Historical.

The firm of CLAY, ROBINSON & CO. is practically rounding out a quarter century of existence, having been organized at Chicago, September 13th, 1886, by John Clay and Charles O. Robinson, succeeding the firm of J. M. Robinson & Co. During the period of the firm's business existence the changes and improvement, both in the quality of the live stock produced in this country and in the methods of handling same, have been numerous and pronounced. Clay, Robinson & Co. have ever endeavored to keep step with the march of progress, and the degree to which we have succeeded is best evidenced by the steadily increasing volume of our business.

Personnel.

The senior member and active head of the firm is Mr. John Clay. Mr. Charles O. Robinson (son of the senior member of the old firm of J. M. Robinson & Co.) has, from the organization of Clay, Robinson & Co., been at the head of the cattle department, personally selling and supervising. In later years John G. Forrest, Courtney A. Kleman and Frank H. Connor have been admitted to partnership. Mr. Forrest has supervision over our Kansas City, South St. Joseph, East St. Louis and Fort Worth houses, together with their connections. Mr. Kleman is head of the sheep department and is resident at Chicago, where he personally sells, as well as supervises, all sheep business. Mr. Connor is financial manager, with headquarters at the firm's downtown office, 663 The Rookery, Chicago.

Growth.

As illustrating the remarkable growth of Clay, Robinson & Co., it may be of interest to know that starting in 1886 with 212 quare feet of office space and three employes, we now occupy an aggregate at all offices of over 20,000 square feet of floor space, while our staff of employes numbers nearly 300. Operating at the beginning only on the Chicago market, we now maintain fully equipped houses at the ten leading markets of the country.

Locations.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s headquarters are at the Union Stock Yards, Chicago, with a separate downtown financial office—John Clay & Co., 663 The Rookery. We have our own houses with a full staff of salesmen and employes in all departments at nine other leading markets, viz.: Kansas City, Mo.; South St. Joseph, Mo.; South Omaha, Neb.; East Buffalo, N. Y.; East St. Louis, Ill.; South St. Paul, Minn.; Sioux City, Iowa; Denver, Colo., and Fort Worth, Tex. At each of above markets the same high standard of service is maintained.

Salesmen.

Recognizing the fact that SALESMANSHIP is the all-important factor in the live stock commission houses, it is, and ever has been, the policy of Clay, Robinson & Co. to secure the very best salesmen that money can hire. First-class salesmen naturally wish to be connected with a large firm, where they will have scope for their abilities, and as a natural result Clay, Robinson & Co. attract to their staff the best selling talent in the trade. As the commission charge is uniform with all firms, so that the best service costs no more than the poorest, the foregoing facts should be borne in mind by the prospective shipper.

Employes.

The firm's remarkable success is in no small measure attributable to the fact of having early in its existence selected a coterie of salesmen and office employes who have continued in active service throughout a long period. Two of the three men who constituted its entire staff of employes at organization are still with the firm. Several other veterans of fifteen or more years of service might be named, while the roll of those in the employ of the firm for ten or more years is a long one. It is a self-evident fact that experience and time-tested ability count strongly toward first-class service, and our customers benefit thereby.

Feeder Buying.

While by far the greater bulk of our business consists in the selling of consignments of live stock, we nevertheless make a specialty, at all markets, of filling orders for stocker and feeder cattle, sheep and lambs. This branch of our business is handled entirely distinct from the selling side. We have our own buyers who, at most of the markets where we have houses, give their entire time and attention to this department. They are on the market every day, and being expert judges of quality and values can save the average feeder considerable money in the purchasing of stock to put in the feedlot. A steadily increasing number of farmers make use of our facilities in getting their feeders. It saves them considerable expense in the way of railroad fare, hotel bills, loss of time, etc., as it is not necessary to come to market in person. Most of our orders for feeding stock are received by mail. Further information regarding this service will be gladly furnished by any of our houses.

The Live Stock Report.

For over twenty years we have published THE LIVE STOCK REPORT, and have seeen it develop from a four-page market circular into one of the best known and most influential live stock and farm journals in the United States. It should be read regularly by every man who is interested in the feeding or shipping of live stock. THE LIVE STOCK REPORT is a sixteen-page illustrated paper issued from our Chicago office each Friday. It contains market reports, quotations, etc., from all the markets where we have houses, as well as much other matter of interest and value to stockmen. This paper will be sent to anyone desiring it upon receipt of 50 cents to cover the actual postage for one year. Requests for the paper should be addressed to our Chicago office.

Volume of Business.

The annual cash turn-over of Clay, Robinson & Co. at all markets is, in round numbers, approximately $75,000,000. The very fact that this enormous amount of money is handled without delay, friction or loss of a dollar to any customer, is a striking commentary upon the perfect organization, as well as the absolute integrity and responsibility, of Clay, Robinson & Co.

Equipment.

Our offices at all points are equipped with every modern facility for the prompt and accurate dispatch of business. In addition to regular office equipment, we maintain at Chicago a complete printing plant. Other up-to-date features of our offices are an intercommunicating and long distance telephone system with our own switchboard and operator; the latest computing machines, multigraphs, folding machine, electric motor, etc.

No Discrimination.

We handle and sell all stock consigned to us without discrimination and strictly on its own merits. Whether you ship one car or one hundred cars a year, whether you are a regular shipper or a feeder who markets his own stock, whether you have shipped for years or are a beginner, you may be sure of first class service and first class treatment if you consign to Clay, Robinson & Co. No consignment is too small to receive our best attention, and none is too large for our capacity.

Wool Market Notes

The movement in the fleece wool states continues rather slow, yet considerably more wool has been bought at 23c than any time this season, with some of the medium wools going up to 25c.

More buyers have been on the Boston market lately than for some time. This would indicate that the manufacturers believe prices have touched bottom and that probable price changes will tend upward.

With the opening of the fourth series of wool auctions at London the uncertainty of wool values was to a certain extent dispelled. Prices for the crossbreds were off par and in buyers' favor, medlums were 5 per cent down and on low the fall was say 7½ per cent. Slipe crossbreds were fully 10 per cent below May.

A good deal of wool has been bought in Oregon, Washington and Idaho. However, growers in the eastern part of the first two states and in the central part of the latter states are said to be holding 1,300,000 and 1,500,000 lbs of wool for around 20c, and if unable to get this price they will send the same East on consignment.

Included in the recent representative sales of wool at Boston were: 15,000 lbs washed delaines, 34@35c; 275,000 lbs unwashed delaines, 25½@26c; 15,000 lbs Ohio XX, 30c; 50,000 lbs Ohio ⅜ and ½ bloods, 27@28c; 10,000 lbs Ohio and Michigan ¼ bloods, 25@27c; 20,000 lbs Wisconsin ¼ and ⅜ bloods, 25c; 850,000 lbs territory, 16@23c.

It is estimated that two-thinds of the wool clip of Beaverhead county, Mont., has been disposed of by the wool growers either by selling or by consignment. The clip this year will amount to more than 2,000,000 lbs and is larger, better and more staple than last year. The price of wool has not suffered to a great extent in this section, the average prices ranging only about 2c lower than that paid last year, which loss or difference will be just about offset by the large clip this year.

Advices from Miles City, Mont., continue to tell of activity in the wool market there. Buyers are evincing best interest of the season thus far. Representative sales there recently were: 147,000 lbs, 21⅛c; 24,000 lbs, 21¼c; 147,000 lbs, 20½c; 36,000 lbs, 20⅝c; 49,000 lbs. 20⅛c; 389,000 lbs, 20c; 42,000 lbs, 19⅞c; 40,000 lbs, 19⅝c; 120,000 lbs, 19 3-5c; 66,000 lbs, 19½c; 79,000 lbs, 19⅜c; 98,000 lbs, 19¼c; 227,000 lbs, 19⅛c; 331,000 lbs, 19c; 75,000 lbs, 18⅞c; 27,000 lbs, 18¾c; 25,000 lbs, 18½c; 70,000 lbs, 18c; 157,000 lbs, 17¾c; 39,000 lbs, 17¼c; 32,000 lbs, 17c; 13,000 lbs, 16¾c; 79,000 lbs, 16c.

Following comes from Nashville, Tenn.: Wool has shown no important change, though one large shipment to the East is reported. The price of the staple is unchanged around 22c. Less than half of the wool in this section has not been moved to market. Last year about 1,000,000 lbs of wool was handled by Nashville dealers. Local wool men estimate that not much more than 400,000 lbs has been marketed this season, the principal part of which is now in the warehouses. Buyers in this country have a considerable part of the clip, some of them holding from 20,000 to 50,000 lbs.

That wool growers in the Southwest would be foolish to give in to the eager buyers at this time and sell for 14c when they may look for a much higher price later is the opinion expressed by President Magnus Brown of the Minnesota Wool Growers' Association, who was at Albuquerque, N. M. Mr. Brown says that after careful investigation he believes there will be a shortage of 20,000,000 lbs in the domestic clip, 100,000,000 lbs shortage in Argentina and that the severe drouth in the Northern states will send the price of wool ballooning in that section. Buyers at Magdalena are raising the price and an offer of 18c is predicted for the near future.

There is no reason why wool products should add to the high cost of living in this country, according to statements given out by Boston wool dealers. Wool is now so plentiful that for the first time in years it is being exported in large quantities. It is stated on good authority that about 1,700,000 lbs of foreign wools held in bond at Boston have recently been reshipped to London to be sold at auction. For the entire six months of this year Boston exported 3,550,000 lbs of wool, against the nominal amount of 170,000 lbs for the same period of last year. These figures, however, represent very inadequately the amount of wool which has been taken out of the Boston market, owing to the depression in the American textile industry.

Speaking of the woolen and worsted situation, which has an important bearing on the wool market, William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Co., of New York, says: "We are predicting the greatest interest in the opening of our goods that has prevailed for many years—something of the flavor of former days—for the reason that it is the most unique. Foreign manufacturing has been in a most satisfactory condition and consumption of wool almost unprecedented. Wools that have been recently selling in this market cannot now be replaced by new wools at the same prices. Any one can readily see that should there be any substantial buying of wool it must necessarily be higher. In my judgment the opening prices of goods will be the lowest and can only remain so temporarily on account of the late opening of goods, which leaves a short time delivery, and no doubt there will be a great disappointment in the trade on account of that fact. I anticipate large sales and shall be greatly disappointed if we do not book orders heavily for this reason."

"To the Western wool growers who have been indulging in a talkfest over schemes to combat the 'wool trust,' and have about exhausted their ideas on wool storage and co-operative plans, we want to offer the following advice," says The American Sheep Breeder: "As long as you cannot agree on any one plan you will never be able to control your wool market. You are split up into too many factions, your states do not work together and the half dozen schemes that are now being tried out will never cause the Eastern buyers to lose one night's sleep. If you are ever going to control the wool situation you have to get together and agree upon one plan and test it thoroughly. How much influence do you expect to exert with your half dozen schemes in a great wool market where over 300,000,000 lbs of domestic wool are produced annually, and even more than this amount imported: Twenty-five or thirty million pounds of wool is but a drop in the bucket. When you can get together and agree upon some plan so you will have control of 100,000 lbs of wool, then you can talk business to the Eastern buyers, but not until then. If the wool growers' associations of the United States, and there are about 125 or 150 strong ones, would unite next January and organize through the National Wool Growers' Association a great movement for handling the next year's wool clip, you would have the wool trade on their knees. As it is, you are getting nowhere in your reform movement."

A New Department at Columbia.

The College of Agriculture, Columbia, Mo., has recently established the first department of Farm Management devoted exclusively to this subject in the United States. This department will consider the factors of production as they relate to the successful administration of farms. D. H. Doane, a graduate of the Missouri College of Agriculture and the first man in the United States to take an advanced degree in Farm Management has been elected to the position of assistant professor in charge. Mr. Doane has spent four years in studying systems of successful farm management all over the United States.

The instruction in Farm Management in the University of Missouri has heretofore been given by Dean F. B. Mumford and the demand for this kind of work has prompted the college to add it as a distinct department of college instruction. Mr. Doane in addition to performing his duties as instructor of Farm Management in the University will continue his connection with the United Statse Department of Agriculture and the two institutions will co-operate in the development of this work in Missouri.

J. N. Josephson of Washington county, Minn., was represented at South St. Paul with a mixed shipment.

L. L. Laughlin of Albany county, Wyo., had a mixed car of feeding steers and cows on the Denver market.

John Lucos of Meagher county, Mont., writes: "Weather is very hot and dry. There is about a two-thirds hay crop."

M. J. Garber, an occasional shipper and a prominent farmer of Ottertail county, Minn., was on the South St. Paul market with a mixed load.

J. K. Seafuse represented Missaukee county, Mich., on the market with a consignment of heifers, calves and feeders which brought pleasing prices.

W. M. Woolridge of Valley county, Mont., writes: "Conditions for stock fattening on range are very favorable. Water is scarce, but grass is fine."

Our South St. Paul house handled a car of cattle for Hartel & Cole, who do an extensive merchandise and live stock business in Barron county, Wis.

Kilpatrick Bros. of Chase county, Neb., and L. J. Hansen of Lincoln county, Neb., both prominent hog shippers, were on the Denver market with consignments.

The limit for lambs at Denver early this week was $7.25. Our house landed three doubles of the J. S. Perry offerings from Weber county, Utah, at this figure.

W. W. Hume of Posey county, Ind., writes: "Cattle came through in good shape. Am well pleased with them. They are really better than I expected for the price."

Campbell, Clabaugh & Whittenmeyer, prominent cattlemen of Sheridan county, Wyo., were on the South Omaha market with a shipment of eight cars of good cattle.

THE JOHN W. LEACH TOP PRICE HEIFERS FROM JACKSONVILLE, ILL.

It was Wednesday, July 20, that Mr. Leach had 54 yearling heifers of 771 lbs average on the Chicago market and they were sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. at $7.15 This price was the top for heifers that day by a big margin, the daily market papers of that date not quoting any other sales above $6.50. Mr. Leach has 53 more heifers on feed. They were Angus and Herefords mixed, mostly Angus, and were bought on the Kansas City market Sept. 23 by Clay, Robinson & Co. at $4.50, numbering 107 head and averaging 361 lbs. This was the first time Mr. Leach ever had us sell stock for him, and he was delighted with both the price and the handling of the stock. However, he has had us buy stocker and feeder cattle for him for several years. As already seen, this lot of heifers showed 410 lbs gain while on feed and brought $2.65 per cwt more than first cost. They were fed ground corn with cob and Champion Feed Molasses.

J. H. Hasty of Custer county, Mont., writes: "Feed and water is short here, and stock is not in as good condition as last year."

Our South Omaha house handled two cars of wethers for John Arnold, a prominent sheepman of Converse county, Wyo.

H. Jabusch, a prominent farmer of Saint Croix county, Wis., was represented at South St. Paul with a car of sheep and lambs.

Bicknell & Gemmell, large sheep operators of Baker county, Ore., marketed four cars of light lambs on the South Omaha market.

P. A. Johnson had his weekly shipment of hogs at South St. Paul on Thursday of last week. He ships from Kandiyohi county, Minn.

Thos. Hoben of Montague county, Tex., writes: "On July 11 we had the best rain in two years. Tanks are full and creeks out of their banks."

J. A. & J. O. Finley of Knox county, Ill., write our South Omaha house: "Double deck of yearling wethers came O. K. We were pleased with the purchase and think them a little the nicest bunch we ever had."

Andrew Norell of Jackson county, Colo., a liberal patron of ours, was on the Denver market with a load of 993-lb cows which our house sold at $4.80, the top by 25c per cwt.

The limit for veal calves at South St. Joseph on July 12 was $8.50. Our house obtained this price for two loads of 171 lbs average for Pyle & Crabtree of Barton county, Kan.

Green & Beatty of McHenry county, Ill., a popular and frequent shipping firm, had a shipment of cows, bulls, calves and feeders here for which we obtained very satisfactory prices.

H. L. Reitz of Tuscarawas county, Ohio, writes: "Load of sheep received and we are well pleased with them. Thank you for the careful attention you have given to my interests."

Among the prominent shippers and feeders who had hogs to our South St Joseph house July 14 were: P. M. Anderson of Gage county, Neb.; Fuller & Bennett of Webster county, Neb.; F. G. Foster of Harlan county, Neb.; W. H. Lewis of Harlan county, Neb.; S. S. Crilly of Franklin county, Neb.; R. R. Praisewater of Andrew county, Mo.

J. D. Lawson of Buffalo county, Neb., w[illegible] 'Please accept thanks for the excellent sale you made for me of the 89 steers which proceeds grossed $10,481,98. Yours for good sales."

H. T. Bureker of Jefferson county, Ia., was the owner and we the sellers of the 81 native lambs of 68 lbs average which brought $7.25 at Chicago on July 20, the top that day for natives.

Engebretson Bros., the prominent shipping firm of Chippewa county, Wis., had a load of heifers and cows on the market here last week and we sent them account sales that made them feel good.

O. A. Patzold and J. R. Slaughter, prominent sheepmen of Converse county, Wyo., were on the South Omaha market looking after the shipment of ten double decks of yearlings and wethers.

M. G. Snyder of Dodge county, Neb., writes our South Omaha house: "I am well pleased with price you received for car of hogs, as it was only 5c below the top. Hope to have many more to ship you."

On July 26 top for hogs was $9.05. We sold at this figure for T. S. & N. T. Wilson of Adair county, Mo., 67 head of 185 lbs average. This price was 5c per cwt higher than any other hogs brought that day.

W. F. McDaniel of Wilson county, Tenn., was on the East St. Louis market July 14 with a deck of lambs which averaged 65 lbs and were sold by our house at $7.10. This price was the top by 10c per cwt.

The Beggs & Ballantine Live Stock Co., who have fed extensively at Rocky Ford and Sugar City, Colo., the past season, marketed at Denver on June 9 seven cars of steers which our house sold at satisfactory prices.

I. N. Atkinson, the well-known feeder of Benton county, Ind., was on the Chicago market July 20 with 15 head of 1,696-lb beef steers which we sold at $8.25, top by a big margin for cattle of this heavy weight.

T. B. Elkins of Johnson county, Ill., had a deck of sheep and lambs on the East St. Louis market July 13. Our house handled the consignment in which were 44 head of 85-lb sheep that made the top price of $4.25.

Peter Isackson, who farms 160 acres of land in Roberts county, S. D., marketed a car of hogs at South St. Paul July 15, the light end of which, 62 head of 164 lbs average, we landed at $8.75, top for that day.

Our Fort Worth house topped both the heifer and the cow market July 12 when they handled a shipment for H. S. & J. B. Ikard of Clay county, Tex. The top sales follow: 20 heifers of 758 lbs average at $5.00 and 10 cows of 892 lbs average at $4.00.

The Empire Sheep Co., a large range firm of Crook county, Wyo., had three doubles of yearling feeding wethers on the South Omaha market July 12 which our house sold at $4.70, averaging 65 lbs, extreme top of the market for that class of stock.

A. Yenerick represented Lee county, Ill., on the Chicago market July 13 with 18 head of grade Hereford branded western two-year-old steers. They tipped the beam at 1,213 lbs and were landed by us at $7.85. Mr. Yenerick is a progressive farmer and feeder.

W. R. Hinton of Callaway county, Mo., writes: "We have had many rains this spring and summer. Corn crop late and much of it weedy. The acreage large. Fat hogs are scarce. Stock cattle doing well. Enclosed find 50c to renew my subscription to the REPORT."

E. A. Van Sicklin, president and one of the directors of the Weiser Loan & Trust Co. of Washington county, Idaho, writes: "The returns are all in from the different shipments. While these sheep and lambs have not brought the price we expected, we are well satisfied with the same. We well realize the condition of the market at the present time and appreciate the fact that you have disposed of this stuff to the best possible advantage."

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

Our South St. Paul house was favored with two cars of stock from J. R. Jones of Richland county, N. D.

Peter Harvey, an old patron of the South Omaha market, was there last week with a car of cattle from Howard county, Neb.

Watson & Johnson, extensive cattlemen of Crook county, Wyo., had another train of eighteen cars of cattle on the South Omaha market.

Chas. Sloan, extensive shipper to the South St. paul market and located in St. Croix county, Wis., was there with a car of cattle and sheep last week.

The 80 native lambs of 70 lbs average which made the top price of $7.50 at Chicago July 25 were sold by us and marketed by C. F. Brown of Effingham county, Ill.

C. J. McComb, superintendent of the Buffalo Creek Farm of Cook county, Ill.: "We wish to say that we were very much pleased with the proceeds of our hogs."

The top for western range cattle at Chicago on July 20 was $6.00, which price we obtained for 19 head of 1,156 lbs average from the L. A. Brown range in Crook county, Wyo.

W. B. Sleeper, an extensive sheep raiser of Parks county, Wyoming, was on the South Omaha market last week looking after the shipment of fifteen cars of yearling wethers.

Hitchcock Bros. of Keyapaha county, Neb., write: "Harvest will be good and condition of corn could not be better. Enclosed find $1.00 for two years' subscription to the REPORT."

Kenneth McRae, a large sheep raiser of Natrona county, Wyo., was at South Omaha with three double decks of sheep that sold at satisfactory prices, considering market conditions.

E. Spurlock of Natrona county, Wyo., for several years associated with Governor Brooks, had a car of good steers on the South Omaha market July 20 that we sold at $5.00, averaging 1,245 lbs.

I. C. Jefferis, manager of the Kent & Bissell Co. of Weston county, Wyo., was on the South Omaha market with four cars. Mr. Nichols was in from the same place with six cars of cattle for the Oil Creek Ranch Co.

Andrew Rogerson of Twin Falls county, Idaho, obtained two tops at Chicago through our firm on July 25, when we sold his 131 feeding yearlings of 79 lbs average at $5.10 and 219 feeding wethers of 107 lbs average at $4.10.

Joseph Cushny, manager of the Phillips Investment Co. of Bent county, Colo., writes our Kansas City house: "Prices on beef steers and hogs are higher than I expected. Please thank your salesmen for their good work."

J. B. Heitter, a prosperous farmer and stockman of Custer county, Neb., was on the South Omaha market with a car of hogs and cattle each. Rain is badly needed in that section to insure much of a corn crop, according to Mr. Heitter.

At Chicago on July 25 we obtained the top price for both killing and feeding wethers. E. McCarthy of Natrona county, Wyo., was the owner and the sales follow: 612 head of 99 lbs average at $4.40 and 627 feeders of 110 lbs average at $4.25.

J. S. Pegg of Pembrina county, N. D., writes our South St. Paul house: "Check for $80 from G. N. Ry. received. I thank you for your trouble and will do what I can in sending stock your way. Very few hogs in this locality this year."

John Charles, a prominent stockman and farmer of Howard county, Neb., was looking after 67 beeves which he had at South Omaha on July 19. These cattle averaged 1,396 lbs and were sold by our house at $7.60, top of the day's trade.

L. R. Vader, the well-known and successful flockmaster of Blaine county, Idaho, was on the Chicago market July 20 with a string of offerings which was handled by us. In this shipment were 647 lambs of 66 lbs average which brought $7.30, the top by 15c per cwt for range lambs last week, and 155 feeder lambs of 57 lbs average at $6.25, this price also being the top for feeders that week.

O. J. Hanson, quite extensively engaged in cattle raising, was at South Omaha on July 19 looking after the shipment of three cars. In this shipment were two cars of very good whiteface feeders which we sold at $4.75, averaging 961 lbs.

A. Brower of Custer county, Okla., was on the Fort Worth market July 11 with 149 head of 233-lb hogs which our house landed at the top price of $8.80. On the same day they also sold for N. D. Williams of the same county 69 head of 255 lbs average at the same price.

The Slaughter Patzold Sheep Co. wethers from Converse county, Wyo., were sold on the South Omaha market July 19 by us at $3.50 to the killers, averaging 109 lbs, and feeding end sold as follows: One car, 108 lbs, at $3.40, and another car at $3.50, averaging 104 lbs.

Ovid N. Ludlow of Larimer county, Colo., writes our Denver house: "I am in the habit of saying just what I think. Your check of $332.41 for 19 hogs is more money than they were worth, considering condition of the market. Thank you for your interest taken and your good service in handling the hogs."

Alva Almond of Mahaska county, Ia., writes: "Enclosed find 50c for a year's subscription to the REPORT, which I have missed very much, especially at this time of the year, when I am thinking of loading up with western feeding lambs. I depend on the REPORT a great deal for forecast of the market."

D. T. Phillips of Custer county, Mont., writes under date of July 21: "Range conditions are good. There is no call for water except among the 'Honyocks' Everybody is putting up lots of hay. Cattle shipments will be later than usual Owing to the severe weather last winter range sheep are inclined to sell high."

B. B. Brooks, governor of Laramie county, Wyo., and an extensive cattle and sheep raiser, had a big string of cattle on the South Omaha market July 20 in charge of Mr. Spurlock. The shipment was handled by our house and the sales follow: 147 to the feeders at $4.90, averaging 1,074 lbs, and 102 heifers to killers at $4.90, averaging 994 lbs.

The following parties disposed of shipments through our South St. Paul house: H. A. Jones of Washington county, Minn.; W. E. Stevens of Douglas county, Minn.; John Liddle of Walsh county, N. D.; C. S. Rich, Cass county, N. D.; A. A. Fladager, Dickey county, N. D.; Jos. Wustner of Ward county, N. D.: S. E. Brindle of Emmons county, N. D.; John Ramsey of Walsh county, N. D.; C. O. Riley of Emmons county, N. D.; P. Silverman of Campbell county, S. D.

Norman Ballantine was at Denver after a trip to the Western slope country, in Colorado, which included a short stop at Grand Junction and one at his ranch near Collbran. Norman says it is dry in parts of Western Colorado, but that up on the Ballantine & Beggs ranges around Collbran the feed is good and their cattle are in first-class shape.

The only hogs to go above $8.77½ at Kansas City on July 12 were those handled by our house. The sales follow: For William Hill of Republic county, Kan., 100 head of 102 lbs average at $8.82½; Carter & McFadden of Jasper county, Mo., 68 head averaging 188 lbs, at $8.80 and R. H. Clay & Co. of Cass county, Mo., 32 head of 200 lbs average at $8.80.

Chas. Rossow of Campbell county, S. D.; J. H. Waldorf of Cass county, N. D.; A. A. Fladager of Dickey county, N. D.: Ole Syvertson of Bottineau county, N. D.: G. H. Hagen of Walsh county, N. D.; W. O. Holtberg of McLean county, N. D., and J. Porter of McPherson county S. D., had cattle and A. E. Duhn of Edmunds county, S. D.; Ramage & Ludwig of Cavalier county, N. D.; G. L. Carson of Clark county, S. D., had cattle and hogs to our South St. Paul house.

NEBRASKA BEEVES WHICH BROUGHT A GOOD PRICE.

Photo showing part of the eight loads (152 head) of 1,439-lb beef steers which Clay, Robinson & Co. sold straight (without a steer cut out) at $8.00 on the South Omaha market July 5. They were fed and marketed by Herman Holsten, well-known and successful farmer and feeder of Dodge, Neb.

Our South St. Soseph house was favored with shipments of hogs from the following prominent shippers and feeders: Evans Bros. of Nodaway county, Mo.; St. Joseph S. & S. Co. of Buchanan county, Mo.; P. M. Anderson of Gage county, Neb.; P. & D. Richardson of Nodaway county, Mo.; A. P. Logan of Nodaway county, Mo.; A. J. Williamson of Harrison county, Mo.; John McCoy of Nemaha county, Kan.

Miller Bros., the extensive feeders and shippers of Henry county, Ia., had on the market last week 77 head of 1,370-lb beef steers of their own feeding which we sold at $7.65. Sam Miller accompanied the shipment and expressed himself as well pleased with the price, considering the condition of the trade. Frank and Samuel Miller, nephews of Mr. Miller, who are progressive farmers and feeders, also had in a load of cattle of their own feeding.

R. M. Reeder of Cedar county, Ia., writes our South Omaha house: "The double deck of lambs arrived O. K. I am well pleased with them in every way; in fact, are better than I expected to get. Every one of them seems to be healthy and strong and of good quality. I certainly appreciate your attention to the filling of my order in the manner you did, and, I assure you, you will continue to receive my orders. I expect to buy more of these lambs in a few weeks, also some ewes for breeding, and will let you know when I am ready. At present I have all that I can handle, as it is very dry with us and pastures are quite short and dead."

Sell Your WOOL To The MILLS!

Woolen mills pay bigger prices than any wool buyers. We are in close touch with the mills. Through us you can sell them your wool, and easily make 2 to 3c more per pound than if you dealt with home buyers.

Our commission for grading, storing, insuring and selling wool is small in comparison to the better prices we can get for you.

We sell 20,000,000 pounds of wool every year, so you can understand how we are able to sell your product at top millmarket prices.

We have been in the wool business 44 years. Our customers number many thousands. The fact that we have kept them from year to year and that their increased patronage has given us the biggest wool business in the country—East or West—is proof that we have lived up to our business motto, "Be fair to the customer."

Think this over. Investigate the situation. Get our terms. Learn our financial responsibility, if you don't now know it.

Just describe your clip and we will tell you what it is worth. We believe we can put 2c per pound net profit on your wool for you. Let us lay the facts before you. Then you decide whether to sell to home dealers or to sell through us to the mills. Terms and explanations will be sent you. We shall be glad to put your name on our free mailing list and send you market reports from time to time. Write us NOW.

In the Land of Mormon

Salt Lake was sizzling, 96 degrees in the shade, and the only cool thing in human shape that I saw there was Sam Newhouse sitting in his office away up in the clear sky looking around him upon one of the most glorious views that the eye of man can conceive. The great Salt Lake looked like a mirror of glass and the mountains with mottled sides of green and gray were catching the waves of heat that rose from the sun-baked valley. Southward were massive chimneys belching forth smoke. In a Peerless motor car, kindly lent us by the above gentleman, we took a look at the city. How it is improving! The broad streets are still there but the buildings have improved. Two massive hotels will place the city in the forefront in this respect, a big theatre is begun, at least a hole for the foundation was being dug, and several splendid business blocks tell of enterprise and prosperous times.

In the midst of all is the Temple, from an architectural point of view, a thing of beauty and a joy forever. Ever and anon I gaze upon it for to my mind it ranks with the Cathedral at Cologne, Westminster in London, Notre Dame in Paris, and there are touches in it which vie with the monument to Scott in Edinburgh. It is on the severe side, clean-cut, classic, its graceful towers fit place for a worshiper, whether he be a Papist, Protestant or Mormon, for the religion of today rests on the sentiment of the past. Centuries ago it was a voice in the wilderness. Solomon built his temple, Rome and Greece followed with fervor. It is the fashion of the world to worship in vaulted chancels and even the matter-of-fact Mormon, trained to economy and hardship, could not resist the temptation. And the love of the beautiful, innate in man's breast, broke forth in the valley of the Salt Lake, just as it captured the dwellers by the Tiber.

Next morning we were on the train going southward. You run through a lovely valley, irrigated with a plenteous flow of water. The grain fields look well, the second crop of alfalfa is green and wholesome looking, and the serried ranks of numerous orchards are on every side. Neat homesteads are shaded by great cottonwood trees. How cool and inviting they look, and by many of them are sparkling artesian wells. Everyone is busy, for it is the harvest season. Now and again you see a threshing machine, swallowing the golden sheaves. Under a broiling sun every man, woman and child seem to be busy. Our train runs for a while by Utah Lake, a big body of fresh water lying among the mountains and fed by streams [illegible] rolling down narrow canons.

Provo is reached and there we change cars for Heber City. It is a mixed train, slow but sure, and creeps gradually up the mountain pass, masses of granite towering skyward. The stream which dashes and roars below has been bridled by an electric company and far up the sides of the mountain is a flume which carries a big body of water. It enters a tunnel and then from a great height it falls through iron pipes to the wheels below, and the unseen power is distributed to the centers of population. It is a wizard-like miracle but the results show that it is reality. You get through the canon and emerge gradually into a little valley, a bijou place amid mighty mountains, a green oasis, for the crops have not ripened. At the depot we are taken in hand by President Joseph Murdock and Counsellor Jensen. The Mormon takes you into his home. They must have imbibed this characteristic from the Scotch proselytes who flocked to the land of the Latter Day Saints in early days, and they come still. After traveling in many lands the hospitality of this little valley stands out in bold relief. The simplicity of the life, the warmth of the welcome, the give-and-take in the family, carries me back to joyous days 'mid heather hills. You miss the toddy and the tea. Perhaps it is as well.

Our mission was to see the sheep upon the summer range. Heber, Provo, and Salt Lake also, are full of sheepmen. They winter their flocks on the desert east and west of Utah Lake, and over in the lower altitudes toward the Green River. In spring they move them to their lambing grounds on the lower hillsides, many of them owning the land they use for this purpose. Then when the season permits and the forest ranger says yes, they go on the forest reserves. As they say about Little Bo-Peep, "they climb the mountains high, high," following the snow, the succulent grasses that seem to spring out of the white wreaths giving the ewes a wondrous flow of milk. There are also an endless number of weeds full of nurture, specially among them the blue-bell, a fast growing plant with a stalk full of sap and generous waxy leaves. It attains four or five feet in height.

So we left Heber to make the Strawberry Valley. There was quite a party: Messrs. Murdock, Jensen, Broadbent (a son-in-law of Mr. Murdock), Moroni Smith and his little son of five years, James Clyde, J. A. Johnston and the writer. We had three rigs, a Studebaker top wagon and two buggies. We passed through a beautiful farming country, past pleasant orchards, one of them especially well looked after, then up a long canon, a pull of about twenty miles. What a rough road it was! Beetling rocks, pine and cottonwood trees on every side, and little rills coming from baby canons. It is hard pulling, but we reach the crest, and there, like a promised land, lies Strawberry Valley. Away in the distance are verdant meadow lands, a white canvas wagon telling of a sheep-herder's camp. We pass by a herd of sheep, "drys" they call them, near a few head of cattle, and far away in the distance, at the mouth of a canon from which Trout Creek emerges, is a white dot. It is the camp we must make for supper. The sun goes down, the air grows cool, the horses know where they are going, and just as the short twilight grows into darkness we make the camp, a romantic place amid a grove of quaking aspens, while from the hillside opposite gushes out a spring as if some Moses had struck the rock. The horses are unhitched, the beds unloaded and soon the smoke is curling upward from the stove in the sheep wagon and there is a savory smell of mutton cutlets and other edibles. Darkness falls, the sheep come down the hill and rest by the salt trough. In the wagon supper is set forth and we fall to with genuine interest. As we smoke our cigar afterwards a great red moon comes over the shoulder of a hill. It lights up the scene, playing hide-and-seek among the leaves, and sails majestically across the peaceful valley. And then to bed, Johnston and I getting the place of honor, a good spring mattress with clean sheets inside of the wagon. Oh, thoughtful Mormons, to provide such a bower of bliss!

The grey dawn comes. There is a tinkling bell outside and the faint murmur of rushing waters, the same music as the night before. As we step out of the wagon there is a freshness about the air.

a lot of ozone there, and you feel as if the world owed you nothing. The moon is gone, the twinkling stars are fading, far away on a mountain-top is a silvery gleam, down on a meadow land is a bank of mist, a soft covering of gray blending gradually into an ocean of green. One by one the sheep begin to rise, stretch themselves, their great pensive eyes watching your movements. Slowly the sunlight comes down the mountain-side and over the shoulder of the same hill the moon had come the night previous, the great orb of day appeared. You turn your eyes down the valley, the mist has gone and the leaders of the herd are stringing out along the mountain side. A soft, cool breeze plays among the pine trees, touches the shimmering aspens. Round the camp it is all action. Mr. Broadbent counts the flock as they string away up the mountain-side. James Clyde is after his horses that have strayed, though hoppled the night before. Moroni Smith has the same task but he goes on horseback. Inside the wagon a fire has been lighted and there is a savory odor from mutton chops and bacon in a skillet. Last night we ate by lamplight in the wagon, but this morning breakfast is laid on a tarpaulin outside. When it was ready nobody made any excuses, but went at it with an appetite born of mountain air and healthy exercise.

Then we hitched our horses to the wagons, bid young Murdock and the sheep-herder good-by, and, doubling back on our tracks through the Strawberry Valley, took another canon road for Heber. I rode with Jim Clyde in his buggy during the long pull to the summit and got much information. These people understand the sheep business. They have gotten there by hard knocks and through the school of experience. They have found that overstocking was the evil they had to contend with. In early days round the Heber Valley it was a go-as-you-please proposition, but the purchase of land and the forest reserve rights have settled many economic questions. It is costly to own land. They pay from 9 to 13 cents per head for grazing on the reserves, but every man knows his carrying capacity, and if he errs it is his own blame. In addition to their possessions in sheep, lambing grounds and forest reserve rights, many of the flockmasters have fine farms in the valley. Mr. Clyde, with the future in view, has a beautiful farm; in fact, he may have several, but the one we refer to lies on the outskirts of Heber. Here he can raise the finest kind of crops, and like the old Scotchman I used to live near in the Merse of Berwickshire, he sells everything and buys nothing. He raises his own bucks, his horses, hogs, and he can winter quite a flock of sheep on those valley lands even if the snow lies deep in mid-winter. If the Moffat

A SHEEP HERDER.

Road ever comes through to Strawberry and Heber Valleys the flockmasters there will have a picnic in the way of shipping for they will practically rise off the bed ground and ship in the forenoon.

Clyde is one of the interesting men you meet on the frontier. I doubt he is an indifferent Mormon, but he makes up for such deficiencies by excelling as a business man. You gather many a garland from his quaint conversation and the morning passes pleasantly, although the road is rough. It is a long climb under a blistering sun and when we reach the summit we are above the snow line. Backward is Strawberry, forward Heber Valley, and all around the Wasatch mountains; a gorgeous panorama lies at your feet, girdled by lofty peaks and grassy hills, a promised land with endless streams to water the thirsty ground. We tarried there for a while feasting on the view and then began the descent. It was a fast ride over great boulders and rocks, into chuck holes, across bubbling brooks, anon a pleasant piece of meadow land, through shady lanes of quaking aspen. Lastly, and welcome, in a thick grove was a sheep-herder's camp with the usual wagon and a tent near by that was parlor and dining room. The herder had killed a lamb the evening before in anticipation of our visit, but looking out in the morning he spied a grizzly bear just finishing the dainty morsel intended for us, so he had to kill another, and a rare one it was—juicy and fat. Those lambs of Clyde's, if as good as the specimen we sampled, will tell a tale in Kansas City. As we drove away from the camp we went through a flock of ewes and lambs. They were "shaded away," as they express it in that region. They were lying under aspens and brush, grass galore around them.

In the evening we had a meeting with the sheepmen. It was an interesting experience, for they, like others, have their ear to the ground as to the price of mutton and wool. It is their Alpha and Omega and their interest is naturally intense. The story of lambs at $7.30 on the day we were there (July 20th), was welcome news.

While at Heber I met Nymphis Murdock, father of President Murdock. He is seventy-seven years young, straight as an arrow, nimble as a deer. If you want to prove it, watch him climb a fence. In 1847 he crossed the plains at the age of thirteen with his mother. If I remember aright they had a wagon hauled by two heifers, a pair of oxen, one cow and one bull. At least they had six kine to the string. Nymphis was so small that his mother had to yoke the animals. Then his tale of the hardships they had to endure in those early days. Mush and milk was the stable dish, as oatmeal was to the Highlander. Shoes and stockings were unknown. And then it would do you good to hear him tell of a trip from Salt Lake to Los Angeles and return with a load of oranges. He sold them at 20c apiece and they were retailed at 25c and 30c. Later on when his family began to grow he moved from the city to the country, and sought out a fertile spot, the valley of the Provo River nigh onto Heber. And so in the autumn of his days he has a pleasant little home in the city of Heber, next to his son and surrounded by his kinsfolk and children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. He has a passion for travel and has seen a lot of the world. As he said: "If it was not for my wife's infirmities I would be away this summer." He told me much of the Mormon faith, of how his brother, who had five wives and thirty-seven children, was a glorious example and had to do penance in prison for breaking the law. I said to him: "How did he manage to get his wives?" "Oh, that was easy. His first wife, who had unfortunately no family, did most of the courting for him." There was a quaint humor in his speech and ways. I told him that I was an indifferent Presbyterian. "Ah," he said, "they were stern folks. Here is a verse about them I learned from my mother:

"The Presbyterian deacon's cat
Went out to seek his prey,
And in the house she caught a mouse
Upon the Sabbath day.
The deacon much offended was
With this bold act proclaim,
Laid down his book, the cat he took
And bound her with a chain."

It is well for the world that we have enthusiasts and the Mormon is a brilliant example of the pioneer whose religious ideals took him to the wilderness. He may have faults, but his life is good and wholesome, with the flag of industry nailed to his mast. There are no poor, no sluggards among them. They try to practice what they preach. And after all, what is religion? Look the world over and study. Nymphis Murdock, in the Utah vale, thinks his the best; my old friend Willie Anderson, now living in a Lammermoor village, is certain that the Free Kirkers of Scotland will have a front seat in the tabernacle not made with hands; in the little town near where my youth was spent one of the parsons there thinks his church is the only true one. When you put all the religions of the world together, throw them into the melting pot, what do you find? An abiding faith, nothing more. A ship on an open sea with the anchor of Hope to leeward. J. C.

Range Cattle and Sheep Conditions.

Conditions throughout the Northwest range country are not to the liking of the sheep and cattlemen. One of the worst droughts in years has that country in a firm grip. Stock is in thinner flesh than usual for this time of the season, weather is sweltering, grass is badly burned, feed is getting short and the hay crop has been greatly reduced. Every one is talking "ship, ship." The movement has started earlier than usual and the great bulk of the arrivals are reaching the markets in plain flesh. To make matters worse, the markets are glutted with cattle of this class, the burned pastures in the Middle West forcing in heavy supplies of partly-fatted natives. Then the feeder demand is not of the proportions that could be desired under the conditions, many prospective buyers holding back until there is more definite news of the outcome of the corn crop.

This is one of those times when the rangeman is at a loss what to do. Cut down his holdings, he must. The outlook for winter provision is not of the best. To carry over the usual number of cattle or sheep this coming winter would be impossible. Two vital points he must consider. First, he should hold back all young thrifty stock that he can provide for and cull out those of poorer quality. Second, he must play safe in marketing his stock; that is, consign his offerings to a commission firm that is beyond doubt financially and that has the best corps of salesmen and facilities for handling stock obtainable.

There is a silver lining to every dark cloud. The prospects are favorable for a record-breaking crop of corn and forage feed should be plentiful in the corn-belt states. The eastern states are in good shape as regards both pasturage and hay. We will doubtless see a broad outlet for feeder stock before long. Prices are relatively low and feeders will not likely miss the excellent chance to stock up just as soon as conditions are more settled. This will lift a big load off the market and prevent the packers from putting their feet under the bargain counter for any length of time. We would not be surprised to see a betterment in prices when there is assurance of a good crop and when the heavy liquidation of natives and southwestern cattle ceases, and a better trade in sheep and lambs, with the big end of the native and southern crop out of the way.

Way Tom Cross Views the Situation.

Tom Cross, chief of the cattle-buying force of the National Packing Co., and who is one of the heaviest buyers of western range cattle, believes that there are better times in store for the range cattle market. "Just as soon, and that will only be a few weeks, as the southwest cattle have been well marketed," said he, "western rangers will sell better. They are working havoc with common and medium range cattle now, but when their force is spent westerns will go to much better advantage. Where possible, owners should not ship any but good fat grades during the next few weeks. It will pay well to hold those in plainer flesh until at least the southwest cattle are out of the way."

Grass Cattle Fairly Swamping the Markets.

The market hoppers are being filled to overflowing with cattle. The movement of westerns from Montana, Wyoming and the Dakotas is of record-breaking totals for this time of the year, bulk of which are going to Chicago, South Omaha, Sioux City and South St. Paul. Western Kansas is shipping liberally to Kansas City and South St. Joseph and Oklahoma is contributing heavily to receipts at East St. Louis. The movement of grassers from Texas is subsiding. If cheap beef is not available to the consumers there is a nigger in the woodpile.

Iowa Corn Shows Big Improvement.

B. W. Snow, the crop expert, after crossing Iowa Monday by daylight, says: "The corn crop has materially improved during the last three weeks. Rains have been local in character, but enough to keep the crop growing rapidly, and the color is good. In some districts the stalk is tasseled short, but the greater part of the crop shows heavy growth. On the Missouri slope the crop is bigger and stronger than for several years. A little more moisture now will give Iowa more than a normal corn crop."

PONDER THESE FACTS.

The firm of Clay, Robinson & Co., organized in 1886, has safely weathered the storm and stress, droughts, depressions and panics of nearly a quarter century. Failure and reorganization are unknown in our history, and we stand today the largest, strongest and most efficient organization in our line of business in the world. If you are a shipper or prospective shipper of live stock you owe it to yourself to consider these unquestioned facts. Ask your banker about our financial standing, and ask any customer about our ability to realize top market value for all stock consigned to us.

Feeding Stock Relatively Low.

Droughty conditions are forcing both native and western thin cattle, as well as sheep and lambs, to the markets by the thousands. Many owners have no alternative but to ship. It's an ill wind that blows nobody good. This is where those who have the pastures and feed are afforded the best opportunity in years to stock up with an excellent class of either stocker or feeder cattle, feeder sheep or lambs, or breeder ewes, at relatively cheap rates. To show how low prices have fallen, we make the following comparisons, which should be interesting.

Stocker and feeder cattle are, if anything, lower than a year ago, quality considered. Bulk this week at Chicago sold at $3.75@4.25 for stockers and $4.25@5.00 for feeders.

Feeding sheep at Chicago are selling around 50c per cwt lower than a year ago and feeding lambs about 25c per cwt lower.

We believe that the heavy runs of thin stock will cease earlier han usual, as the movement started earlier than the average. If the corn crop pans out well, it is logical to anticipate higher prices for thin stock later on. In our opinion, you cannot get your orders in too soon. For further information write Clay, Robinson & Co. at any of the leading markets.

Record Single Shipment of Cattle.

A new record was established at the Chicago Stock Yards on Monday, when Clay, Robinson & Co. received a trainload of range cattle comprising 42 cars. This is the largest single shipment ever received by any other commission firm. Another remarkable thing was that all the cars were 44 feet in length.

The Judith Mercantile Co. of Judith, Mont., and the Shonkin Stock Association of Fort Benton, Mont., were the shippers. They represented a total of 25 different owners. There were upwards of 1,100 cattle in the shipment.

George L. Overfield, president of the Shonkin Stock Association, and H. Hamilton, son of "Bob" Hamilton, the well-known Montana cattleman, accompanied the cattle to market. Mr. Overfield said that in spite of the fact that the distance travelled was 1,422 miles, the cattle arrived in good shape, and were on the road only about 120 hours. He was profuse in his praise of the Great Northern and Burlington Roads, the service being first class, as well as that of Clay, Robinson & Co. in the handling and selling of the big shipment.

"There will be an enormous movement of cattle out of Wyoming, Montana and the Dakotas this season," remarked Mr. Overfield. "Range conditions are so bad and the outlook for winter feed so poor that owners have no other alternative. In Northern Montana conditions are the worst in the thirty-five years that I have spent there. Cattle are thin, grass is burned up and the hay crop a flat failure, water is getting scarce and prospects for winter feed very dark. Parties who cut 400 to 500 tons of hay last year will be lucky to get 100 to 150 tons this year. It will be $10@15 hay this coming winter."

It is Time to Ponder Long.

Within the last week or so the drouth situation has taken on a really serious aspect in the Middle-West and there is already evidence at Chicago and the River markets that farmers and stock raisers are becoming alarmed and are beginning to send stock to market on account of the shortage of pastures and threatened injury to the corn crop. There are perhaps instances in the country where it is imperative that stock be shipped out on account of the burned out condition of pastures. This is of course deplorable. But it is not as yet necessary for a general rush to deplete pastures of all cattle and hogs to beat a threatened drouth condition. Such a rush will inevitably contribute to a demoralization of the market and a future shortage of supplies. It is a time to study seriously and take chances. There should be enough roughage, and, unless you are absolutely shy of water aud pasturage, it is a time to hold back and give the fellow who has no other resource than the market a chance. It is no time to become panic stricken. Think well before marketing anything of desirable quality that lacks good flesh condition, be it cattle, hogs, sheep or lambs. They are worth more on the farm than on the market at this time, where conditions are favorable for keeping them.

Hold Back Plain Flesh Natives.

This week's trade in native cattle was a reflection of what light receipts means for the price range. The higher market for all desirable beef steers was a direct result of light runs. And both eastern and local dressed beef buyers displayed concern over securing their quota of the good to choice grades. It is true that the general demand has not broadened materially, but if it were possible to hold back plain flesh lots for a few weeks there would doubtless be a very favorable story to tell of the market. Of course there are sections where pastures are so badly burned that shipping is compulsory, but those in the more fortunate parts would do well to hold good quality steers lacking desirable flesh for better condition.

Regarding the Hog Market.

No longer is the nine-cent hog in circulation In fact, more business was done under the eight-cent mark the fore part of this week than above. The market Monday rested on the lowest basis since last November. On that day the decline from the high time in March, when $11.20 per cwt was paid, figured around $3.00 per cwt. However, hogs around $8.00 per cwt are comparatively high for August. This is especially true now, with so many sows that have recently weaned a crop of pigs going at current rates. There are some who believe that prices are headed for the seven-cent figure and there are those who look for an improvement this month and next. All are guesses pure and simple. To play safe, we would keep all hogs that are fat and weigh around 225 lbs and heavier coming to market as fast as practicable.

Lamb Market Should Act Better.

One of Armour's buyers has returned from Louisville and says that the run of Tennessee lambs is over and that Kentucky shipments will be less of a price factor from now on. This will be good news to owners of native lambs and to western range flockmasters. It was the southern lambs that brought about demoralization to the trade several times this season and caused prices to fall $1.00@1.50 in two different weeks. Conditions should be more favorable from now on. There is no burdensome supply of natives to come forward, if they are marketed judiciously. Idaho is shipping fifteen days earlier than usual, while Montana and Wyoming shipments will carry a big feeder end. If packers are able to put their feet under the bargain counter again for any length of time, traders will be greatly surprised.

President Brown Sees Good Crops.

On his return from a tour of investigation through the West and Northwest, President W. C. Brown of the New York Central Railroad, gave out a most optimistic interview. He sees no cloud on the financial sky. The greater part of the crops are in good condition, he finds, and where there is a shortage in one item it is made up by the surplus in another.

"The condition of the crops is exceptionally pleasing," said Mr. Brown. "Early in July Iowa corn was scarcely more than five feet high. Now it has grown to more than eight feet and is of superior quality. The same conditions are general. From the Missouri River to New York the country looks like a garden nearly all the way. So great is the volume of business being handled in the West that I noticed a shortage of cars for the transportation of freight. The surplus of cars in the East will soon be needed in the transportation of crops now being harvested."

Range Cattlemen Getting Discouraged.

Edward Burnett, the well-known ranchman of Buffalo, Wyo., writes under date of July 22: "I believe there will be as much beef go from this country as for the last two or three years. Range conditions are not encouraging and we have a short grass crop. We have had a very dry, hot year. Very frequently we have rains later than this that make good grass. This short grass is hardest on farmers who have a few cattle close to home. Some of these men have already shipped. Some parties who would not have taken $50 per head for three and four-year-old native beeves are discouraged and are offering them at $40. The hay crop is short and there will be lots of cows shipped. The cattle on Powder River and Crazy Woman are looking very good, but the grass is short and dried up. Hay is scarce and hard to buy. Some sheepmen bought 500 tons at $7.50 per ton. One party sold his lambs at $3.00. Sheep are being shipped already, as many of the springs and water holes are dry. People are talking $10 hay."

Changes in Quarantine for Scabies.

The acting secretary of agriculture has issued an order, effective Aug. 1, removing the quarantine for mange or scabies of cattle from Dawson county, Mont., and from the counties of Hayes, Hitchcock, Chase and Dundy in Nebraska. This action has been taken because of the progress made in the eradication of this disease by the co-operative efforts of the federal and state authorities.

This work has been under way for several years, and from time to time the quarantine restrictions are removed from areas as they are freed from infection. Large areas have been released from quarantine in the last few years. The territory remaining under quarantine comprises portions of Montana, Wyoming, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma and Texas. In Montana the counties of Teton, Chouteau and Valley remain under quarantine, and in Nebraska the counties of Sioux, Scotts Bluff, Banner, Kimball, Cheyenne, Boxbutte, Dawes, Sheridan, Deuel, Perkins, Keith, McPherson, Grant, Cherry, Hooker, Thomas, Logan, Lincoln, Blaine, Brown, Keyapaha, Rock, Loup, Garfield, Wheeler, Holt and Morrill.

Lip-and-Leg Ulceration.

The fact has been determined by the acting secretary of agriculture, and notice is hereby given, that a contagious, communicable disease known as lip-and-leg ulceration exists among sheep in the state of Wyoming. Willis L. Moore, acting secretary of agriculture, under authority conferred by section 1 of the act of Congress quarantines the following area: All territory of the state of Wyoming situated within the boundaries of the counties of Bighorn, Johnson, Sheridan, Weston, Crook, Converse and Natrona, and that part of Laramie county lying north of the North Platte River.

During the existance of this quarantine the interstate transportation movement, trailing or driving of sheep, except as hereinafter provided, from the said area herein quarantined is hereby prohibited.

Owing to the differences is the manifestations of this disease, the classification of affected and exposed sheep will be designated as follows:

EXPOSED SHEEP.

FIRST—(a) Sheep which are affected with the mild or inactive form of lip-and-leg ulceration, where only one portion of the body is involved without evidence of suppuration, shall be classed as exposed sheep after they have been hand treated under the supervision or direction of an employe of the Bureau of Animal Industry with an emollient dressing containing 5 parts of one of the permitted cresol or coal tar sheep dips, 10 parts flowers of sulphur, and 100 parts of mutton tallow, vaseline, or lard, and may be shipped interstate when accompanied by a certificate of inspection and treatment issued by an inspector of the Bureau of Animal Industry, subject to the laws and regulations of the state or territory to which they are destined.

(b) Sheep that are not infected with lip-and-leg ulceration, but which have been exposed to sheep showing the disease in the malignant form through infected corrals, pens, and chutes used by sheep so affected with the disease, may be shipped interstate in cars placarded as hereinafter provided to a recognized slaughtering center for immediate slaughter, without dipping, or they may be moved interstate for breeding or feeding purposes under the conditions hereinafter provided for such sheep.

BREEDERS.

(c) Sheep that are not visibly diseased with lip-and-leg ulceration, but which are part of a band of diseased sheep, may be moved interstate from the quarantined area or from public stock yards for breeding purposes, provided they are held seven days fer a second inspection before such interstate movement, and further provided that if, upon such second inspection, disease is found, the animals apparently free shall be segregated and properly dipped before their interstate movement is permitted.

FEEDERS.

(d) Sheep that are not diseased with lip-and-leg ulceration, but which are part of a band of diseased sheep, or sheep slightly diseased after the hand treatment described in paragraph (a), or sheep that have been exposed to the disease through infected corrals, pens, or chutes used by diseased sheep, may, without dipping, be moved interstate from the quarantined area or from public stock yards for feeding or grazing in fenced inclosures, provided permission shall have been obtained in advance of the movement from the proper official of the state or territory into which the sheep are to be shipped. If the permission of such state or territorial official is not obtained the sheep shall, before being moved interstate, be dipped as hereinafter provided for sheep exposed to disease through infected corrals, pens, or chutes.

DISEASED SHEEP.

SECOND—Sheep affected with lip-and-leg ulceration which show the disease in more than one tissue and show pus formation to a greater extent than indicated for exposed sheep shall be classed as diseased sheep, and shall under no condition be moved interstate from the quarantined area.

HEALTHY SHEEP.

THIRD—Sheep that are not affected with lip-and-leg ulceration nor exposed to sheep showing lesions of more than one tissue accompanied by pus formation may be moved interstate when accompanied by a certificate of inspection from an inspector of the Bureau of Animal Industry.

DIPPING.

FOURTH—When it is desired to dip sheep for interstate movement as hereinbefore provided, the dipping shall be done under the supervision of an employe of the Bureau of Animal Industry and in one of the cresol or coal-tar creosote dips permitted by the Department of Agriculture in the official dipping of sheep for scabies provided the dip is used at a strength specified for use in the dipping of sheep for scabies. The dipping fluid shall be thoroughly mixed before flowing into the vat and also before the sheep are placed therein. The dip shall be maintained at a temperature of from 85 degrees to 95 degrees Fahrenheit, and the sheep shall be retained therein about one minute. The dipping shall be done carefully and the sheep handled as humanely as possible. The Department disclaims responsibility for any loss or damage resulting from the dipping.

PLACARDING CARS.

FIFTH—When, as hereinbefore provided, exposed sheep or sheep of diseased bands are shipped interstate without dipping for immediate slaughter, the proper officers of the transportation company shall affix to both sides of each car a durable placard not less than 6½x10 inches in size, on which shall be printed with permanent black ink in bold-faced letters not less than 1½ inches in height the words: "Sheep for slaughter exposed to lip-and-leg ulceration." These placards shall also show the name of the place from which the shipment was made, the date of the shipment (which must correspond with the date of the waybills and other papers), the name of the transportation company, and the name of the place of destination. Each of the waybills, conductors' memoranda, and bills of lading pertaining to such shipments by cars or boats shall have the words "Exposed to lip-and-leg ulceration" plainly written or stamped on its face.

Whenever such shipments are transferred to another transportation company or into other cars or into other boats, or are rebilled or reconsigned to a point other than the original destination, the cars into which said sheep are transferred and the new waybills, conductors' manifests, memoranda, and bills of lading covering such shipments by cars or boats shall be marked as herein specified for cars first carrying said sheep and for the billing, etc., covering the same. If for any reason the placards herein required are removed from the car or are destroyed or rendered illegible, they shall be immediately replaced by the transportation company or its agents, the intention being that legible placards shall be maintained on the cars from the time of shipment until they arrive at destination and the disposition of the cars is indicated by an inspector of the Bureau of Animal Industry.

DISINFECTION.

SIXTH—All public stock yards, feeding stations and approaches, chutes, alleys and pens thereof which have contained diseased animals shall, before healthy or nonexposed animals for interstate transportation are placed therein, be cleaned and disinfected as hereinafter provided. Failure to clean and disinfect said places will subject them to quarantine.

Cars and other vehicles, yards, pens, sheds, chutes, alleys, etc., that have contained diseased sheep shall be cleaned and disinfected in the following manner: Remove all litter and manure from all portions of the cars, including the ledges and framework outside, and from the posts, floors, and fences of yards, pens, sheds, chutes, alleys, etc., and empty all troughs, racks, or other feeding or watering facilities; then saturate the entire interior surface of the cars, including the inner surface of the car doors, or the entire surface of the fences, posts, floors, troughs, and racks of the yards, pens, sheds, chutes, alleys, etc., with a 5 per cent solution of pure carbolic acid, or with a 3 per cent solution of liquor cresolis compositus, U. S. P.

SEVENTH—All sheep originating in any state or territory and which are unloaded at stock yards where federal inspection is maintained will be inspected and handled in accordance with the regulations contained in this order before being permitted to move interstate.

The effect of this order is to release from quarantine that territory now designated as Park county, formerly a portion of Bighorn county; that part of Fremont county north of the Sweetwater River; that part of Albany county north of the sixth standard parallel north; and that part of Laramie county lying north of the sixth standard parallel north and south of the North Platte River. In addition it revokes B. A. I. Order 165, and generally outlines the manner in which sheep may be moved interstate from the area herein quarantined and from stock yards where federal inspection is maintained. This Rule 8, Revision 2, which for the purpose of identification is designated as B. A. I. Order 169, will become and be effective on and after Aug. 1, 1910, and is subject to amendment or revision on statutory notice. Rule 8, Revision 1, dated Nov. 13, 1909, and effective on and after Nov. 22, 1909, is hereby revoked.

Ritter Beeves Top Sioux City Market.

John Ritter of Wynot, Neb., was on the Sioux City market July 28 with a load of cattle of his own feeding. He had 16 steers, averaging 1620 lbs, that we sold at $7.75, being the highest price up to that time for ten days. Mr. Ritter started feeding these cattle about Sept. 20 and the ration comprised corn and hay. The cattle were in such good flesh condition that they showed that Mr. Ritter is a good feeder.

"I think the corn crop this year will be as big as any we have had in that part of Nebraska, providing nothing out of the way happens to it. The stands were all pretty good," remarked Mr. Ritter. "Last spring I had a large quantity of corn of the 1908 crop and I sold about 2,000 bushels for seed. Some of it went into South Dakota and some to Iowa, but the larger portion sold near home. The corn had been gathered early and I had a good crib where it was kept. It tested 98 per cent for the most part and I have heard no complaints from the farmers who bought it. There were some who sent away to seed houses for their corn who did a good deal of replanting. Small grains will make a good chops, but hay will not be better than half a crop."

Good Outlook for Corn in Minnesota.

"Up to date, the prospects for a corn crop in Minnesota are above the average," says A. D. Wilson, superintendent of Minnesota's Farmers' Institutes. "There is evidently a little above the average acreage. The stand is good, and with the ordinary amount of rain an excellent crop is to be expected. Considerable moisture is needed to enable the corn to ear properly. There is a serious shortage of hay. The second crop may or may not relieve this condition. At all events it seems wise to make as much of the corn now growing, either fodder or field corn, as possible. The corn crop gives promise of furnishing lots of coarse roughage if it is carefully saved. Those who have silos are certainly fortunate this year, but those who have none can secure much valuable feed from their corn crops by taking extra pains to cut all corn before it gets over-ripe and shocking carefully in large well tied shocks. Those who have sown sufficient fodder corn will be able to supply their stock with roughage if even a moderate amount of rain is secured. Every effort should be made to keep the stock now on the farms, because most of the farms of the state are under-stocked rather than over-stocked."

Notes from Spur Cattle Ranch.

In Camp, Spur Ranch, Tex., July 25—I am in [illegible] in the center of 430,000 acres, once a great [illegible] tract given over to the exclusive breeding of cattle. As I write I can hear the bawling of cows and calves passing through the chute in the delivery of the Spur Cattle to Will Lewis of Clarendon, Tex. I can see fifty cowboys cutting the roundup into classes and filling the pens.

The owners of the Spur Ranch are rapidly getting out of the cow business. Aug. 1 will find Will Lewis owner of the Spur herd and lessee of 400,000 acres of grass, subject to the sale of the land in small tracts to farmers. That work has been going on for a year. I can look from my perch here in camp and see fields of cotton and maize that have sprung as if by magic in the heart of a cattle country, and everything indicates that five years will find more farms than pastures.

Will Lewis does all his business with Clay, Robinson & Co. This purchase gives him one of the best herds in Texas, and probably as good grass as the state affords. He has for several years been one of the largest outside operators, and this deal will make him one of the largest breeders, or collectively one of the most prominent figures, in America's cattle industry.

The Spur cattle are in magnificent condition and will show a calf drop of probably 70 per cent. It is now over 55 per cent. The delivery has been accomplished without detriment to the cattle and without any confusion. Frank Hastings, acting for the Swensons, and Will Lewis have done all the tallying under a perfect system of double checking and without a single discrepancy in handling the whole 15,000 head.

Mr. Hastings' wife and two children are with him and have their own camp about 200 yards from the cowboys. Mr. Lewis has his tent with them and Chas. Jones, who handles all the Spur land and tourists interests, usually comes to camp every night, and there is rarely a night when the camp does not entertain several visitors. We eat our dinner and supper at the chuck wagon and are blessed with the best wagon cook I have ever known. But he gets up at 3 o'clock to get breakfast and has it ready by 4. So we go under our own steam and get our own breakfast, and I have never enjoyed meals more. This morning we had iced canteloupe, white cherries, bacon, boiled eggs, chip beef sizzled in butter, buttered toast, and coffee. At night we usually have a watermelon party or a lemonade carnival, take a cold bath and move our cots out where we can count the stars. But we are usually fast asleep before we get far in the tally. And such sleep! Always under one and sometimes two blankets.

The branding and tally takes only part of the day, and I have had some great rides and drives over the tract. Crops are good, grass is good, a stock water rain is much needed, there is no suffering, but part of the country has had no good big stock water rain since last December.

I can understand why the Swensons want to have nothing but the land business to think of. They have a great problem, and it is being ably handled by Charlie Jones. But it needs his whole time.

Some day the Spur Ranch will look like Illinois. It is what they call it, "the greatest agricultural opportunity in America." But development takes time and Will Lewis will turn a good many thousand of the best cattle that Texas produces during the wait. The Spur cattle have been coming to the corn belt for ten years. The herd has been carefully pruned since the Swensons took it four years ago, and Mr. Lewis' policy will be for betterment. And Clay, Robinson & Co. will undoubtedly top the market a good many tiimes with the product.

The town of Spur is nine months old, has 1,200 people and some buildings that would look mighty good in Kansas City, notably the Spur National Bank building, which is of St. Louis Roman gray brick, and cost $30,000, and a $50,000 hotel done in stucco mission style, which will open this month under very capable management. Spur is the terminus of the Stamford & Northwestern railroad, a part of the Fort Worth & Denver (Burlington) system, and is threatened with several other lines. It is beautifully located. Concrete sidewalks, waterworks, sewerage, electric lights are being put in, and the town furnishes about the best evidence of the "Spirit of the Southwest" that I can quote. The town is unique in the fact that the lots were put on sale at 8 a. m., Nov. 1, and were all sold by 10 a. m. the same day.

W. H. KNAPP.

Crops Withering in Wisconsin.

"Owing to lack of rain, farm crops in Wisconsin are in a critical condition," said Secretary John M. True of the State Board of Agriculture of Wisconsin. Pastures are exceedingly short, causing a great loss to the big dairy interests of the state. The average condition of pastures is only 30 per cent of normal at this time. Many owners of live stock are forced to sell at a big sacrifice. Hay is bringing $25 a ton in some parts of the state. Small grains that have been harvested give a better yield than was expected."

Oklahoma Cattle Freer from Fever.

There is less fever among the cattle on the Oklahoma ranges than ever before in the history of the state, according to G. T. Bryan, superintendent of live stock inspection in Oklahoma. He states that the percentage of cattle afflicted with the disease is very small. He attributes this condition largely to the strenuous campaign that has been made by the state and feeders for the elimination of fever ticks, and to the fact that the state quarantine line has been forced southward to a point where most of the cattle are natives of the tick-infested regions and therefore immune from fever.

Big Shortage of Arizona Fat Lambs.

T. E. Pollock, president of the Arizona Central Bank of Flagstaff, Ariz., and one of the largest flockmasters in Arizona, writes: "While it has been raining here in a local way, the country has not developed the feed that I thought it would. I do not believe shipments of fat sheep to Kansas City will amount to over 40 per cent of last year. The feeder end is going to be very good and with a good corn crop sheepmen in this vicinity should get a good deal out of their sheep on the feeder proposition this fall. I believe I have the situation figured out about right and would not be much surprised if the number of Arizona fat lambs sent to Kansas City did not amount to over 25 per cent of last year."

Flattering Prospects for Corn Crop.

Northern Iowa and Southern Minnesota representatives of the International Harvester Co. bring a most flattering report of the condition of corn throughout those parts. While in some localities they find it better than they do in others, generally speaking they say that it far exceeds anything they have ever seen. Even in localities where the rainfall has been light the corn looks well. And it is so far advanced now that anything like usual fall seasons will insure a bumper crop. This year the low, black soil is strictly in it, and the lower it is the better it is. These men say that there is hardly a field that does not promise at least a yield of 40 pushels per acre, while there are acres upon acres that will yield 100 bushels and even better.

There is Danger in Delay.

"There is going to be some danger this year of prospective feeder buyers holding off too long," says the South Omaha Stockman Journal "Of course it seems foolhardy for a man to take on a lot of cattle and sheep to feed until he is certain of enough feed to properly fatten them. At the same time he must take into consideration the fact that range stock is moving to market at least thirty days earlier than usual on account of the drouth and that the run will probably let up that much earlier than usual for the same reason. It looks very much as if the eleventh hour feeder buyer would have to settle."

Cattle Doing Well in Western Colorado.

Our Mr. Clyde B. Stevens, at Denver, has returned from a trip through the western part of Colorado and the Record-Stockman quotes him to the following effect: "It is pretty dry in most sections of western Colorado, but cattle are doing especially well, the drought not affecting ranges high up where the cattle are running at present. However, winter feed is going to be short in some sections. They are asking $10@12 for hay already. I look for better conditions later on if they get good rains. Cattle are now in fine shape and they will come to market early."

Crop Conditions in Oklahoma.

Harris Bros., prominent in farming land and live stock circles at Wagoner, Okla., write under date of July 29: "The month ends with crop conditions excellent. Wheat and oats threshing is completed. Wheat runs from 25 to 30 bushels to the acre and oats around 50 bushels. All indications point to corn making 50 bushels to the acre or better. Early corn is made and the crop assured. Rain just at this time would benefit the late corn, although it is not suffering and is maturing satisfactorily."

Back in the Saddle Again.

After an illness of about ten days with la grippe. our Mr. James Frazier is again back in the saddle. This will be good news to his many friends throughout the corn belt states.

Wool Market Notes.

Recent sales of wool at Boston were: 10,000 lbs washed delaines, 34@35c; 30,000 lbs unwashed delaines, 25½@26c; 200,000 lbs Ohio ⅝ and ½ blood, 27@28c; 200,000 lbs Ohio ¼ clood, 26c; 1,250,000 lbs territory, 18@22c.

Sheep shearing in the San Luis Valley, in Colorado, for this season is over and the flockmasters are now putting the clip on the market. Buyers from various individuals and firms who handle San Luis Valley wool have been offering 14@14½c per pound, but only a small part of the clip has been sold, the owners preferring to hold for 15@16c.

From New York comes the following: "It became known yesterday that several hundred bales of worsted carpet wools had been sent abroad recently by order of the consigners because the prices prevailing here were considerably under owners' ideas of values. The wools were sold at good figures in England and elsewhere. The fact that consumers can be found readily in England and on the continent, willing to pay figures for class III, wools that our manufacturers have refused to pay for several months, is proof that this is the cheapest wool in the world."

During the past week the wool market has taken on a much different tone, being the most promising of the season thus far. Wools cannot be bought as cheap as recently. Also buyers have shown a disposition to take hold, something they refused even to consider a few weeks ago. Optimists in the trade point to the improved tone to goods market and believed that the demand will continue to improve. They also are of the opinion that the wool and worsted industry, owing to the great curtailment which has been in force for some months, must have greatly reduced their supplies, and that the mills will soon be in a position to take on big supplies of wool.

Despite the bearish tone to the wool and mutton markets at this time, the flockmasters are paying little attention to the siren songs of wool buyers. With a decided shortage in the world's supply of wool they can see no reason for taking less for their product than last year, and the bulk of this season's clip has either been consigned or stored. Relatively little of it has been sold, as the wool warehouses of the West have broken the monopoly so long maintained by Eastern buyers. Down in New Mexico a new situation has developed recently. In order to avoid the heavy freight charges and provide a home market for their wool, many of the leading wool growers of that section have set about the establishing of a wool manufacturing plant. This aroused the Eastern buyers to activity and they have been raising their bids in order to get the wool away from the new concern. New England has lost the greater part of its cotton manufacturing monopoly to the Southern states and if the wool manufacturers should begin moving West, our Yankee cousins would be in a bad way. The situation is certainly getting interesting.—South Omaha Journal-Stockman.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

John Whitaker of Laramie county, Wyo., had a couple of cars of good cows at South Omaha.

C. Borkman of Knox county, Neb., had a load of hogs at Sioux City. He is an extensive feeder.

E. D. Paquin of Todd county, Minn., helped swell the cattle receipts at South St. Paul with one car.

Fred Holcomb of Pennington county, S. D., was represented on the Sioux City market with two loads of cattle.

W. H. McMillan of Jerauld county, S. D., had three loads of cattle at Sioux City. He is one of our best friends.

C. Nelson, an extensive shipper from Hamilton county, Neb., had a shipment of hogs on the South Omaha market.

At South St. Joseph on July 27 the limit for hogs was $8.85, which price our house obtained for a load of 168 lbs average.

J. Hubers of Sioux county, Ia., was at South St. Paul with a shipment of sheep which we sold to his entire satisfaction.

Lee Miller of Cedar county, Neb., had a load of hogs on the Sioux City market. He is one of Nebraska's big feeders.

Carl Anderson of Knox county, Neb., disposed of a load of cattle at Sioux City and stated he was well pleased with the sale.

W. Bangston of Murray county, Minn., marketed a load of hogs at Sioux City and stated he was well satisfied with the deal.

The prominent shippers, Thompson & Sons of Todd county, Minn., were on the South St. Paul market with a car of cattle.

The Tolland Co. made their initial shipment from Converse county, Wyo., to South Omaha July 26, there being ten cars of cows.

J. R. Ludwig of Hamlin county, S. D., sold a car of cattle at South St. Paul and L. E. Potter of Brown county, Minn., a shipment of hogs.

J. B. Nicholsen of Plymouth county, Ia., disposed of three loads of cattle at Sioux City. He is one of the big feeders of Northwestern Iowa.

Wm. Dallman of Park county, Mont., favored our South St. Paul house with a four-car shipment of sheep, which sold to his entire satisfaction.

L. Madsen of Woodbury county, Ia., was at Sioux City with two loads of cattle of his own feeding and stated that crops looked good in his country.

A. B. Olson of Clay county, S. D., sold a load of hogs on the Sioux City market and was well pleased. He is one of the prominent feeders of that state.

Willis Cooper of Cedar county, Neb., had two loads of cattle at Sioux City on July 27 and was well satisfied with sale and weights, market considered.

Extreme top of of the market for hogs at Kansas City on July 26 was $8.85, obtained by our house for 81 head sent in by M. F. Stamate of Dade county, Mo.

J. R. Beverly of Hartley county, Tex., writes: "It is very dry and hot here, yet cattle are doing fine and taking on flesh. Very few cattle in this section."

On July 26 our South St. Joseph house topped the native lamb market 10c per cwt with a car of lambs averaging 65 lbs, shipped by Ed. Griggs of DeKalb county, Mo.

Initial shipment from the Swan and Land Cattle Co., extensive cattle and sheep raisers, was on the South Omaha market July 28, consisting principally of cow stuff.

O. P. Wolcott of Miami county, Ohio, writes: "Double deck of wethers came through in fine shape and I am well pleased with them. You surely did well the way the market was that day."

M. Keliher of Pennington county, S. D., had three loads of cattle at Sioux City. Mr. Keliher accompanied the shipment and even though market conditions were in bad shape he was well pleased.

E. O. & R. W. Belt of Carroll county, Mo., writes: "We must congratulate you on the attention you gave our two cars of cattle. While they lost us a little money, think what they would have lost if you had sold them on the day they arrived. We are well pleased with the way you handled them and will have a warm spot in our hearts for your firm."

L. E. Potter of Springfield, Minn.

Below is the likeness of L. E. Potter, who owns and operates the Sandy Lane Stock Farm, consisting of 340 acres, a well-arranged and well-conducted farm. He is a fancier and breeder of Hereford cattle and has a herd of 100 head running on his place. In the two-year-old class of pure breds Mr. Potter won second money in the 1909 Northwestern Live Stock Show with an entry of one of his steers which Clay, Robinson & Co at South St. Paul sold at $10 per cwt, weighing 1490 lbs. He is also active manager and president of the Farmers Elevator Co. at Springfield, Minn., and has the handling of the live stock shipments for the company for the past five years. With one or two exceptions Mr. Potter has entrusted his business exclusively to Clay, Robinson & Co. either at South St. Paul or Chicago during this period, and expresses himself as being very well satisfied with the treatment received. Mr. Potter possesses keen judgment and foresight and there are few who are more frequently sought after for an expression of advice than he.

Adair county, Mo., was represented on the East St. Louis market Aug. 1 with a shipment from Young & Ledford, who had in both lambs and sheep. Our house handled them and landed the sheep, which averaged 85 lbs. at $4.50, top by 15c per cwt.

C. S. Hoyt, a prominent stockman of Cherry county, Neb., was on the South Omaha market with a bunch of good heavy feeders. Speaking of conditions in his territory, Mr. Hoyt stated the weather has been very favorable to them this season, there has been plenty of good feed and cattle are in good shape.

R. H. Garrett, Henry county, Mo.; Geo. Sta[illegible] Chariton county, Mo.; C. Gauthrop, Louisa c[illegible] Ia.; O. M. Devine, Dade county, Mo., each [illegible] represented on the East St. Louis market with a load of hogs.

Shipments of hogs were received by our South St. Paul house from the following well-known parties: Marion Edwards, Rolette county, N. D.; W. Fredericks, Ransom county, N. D., and F. T. Welch, Walsh county, N. D.

Among the regular sheep shippers who favored our South St. Joseph house with stock were: V. Blessing and A. J. Williamson of Harrison county, Mo.; J. W. Moorman, DeKalb county, Mo.; J. Niger, Worth county, Mo.

G. M. Wallace of Harlan county, Neb., writes our Kansas City house: "We are having it very hot and dry here. Corn needs rain. Hay is very short. Wheat will average 10 to 25 bushels per acre. Pastures are very poor."

The Rocky Mountain Cattle Co. of Park county, Wyo., had a train of their cattle on the South Omaha market, mostly cows and heifers. This outfit is one of the largest operating in the West and raise some very good stock.

Henry Dieterle of Washtenaw county, Mich., writes: "We received the three double decks of lambs O. K. They are a nice bunch and are just what we wanted. They are doing fine. Many thanks for getting us just what we ordered."

Flora Craver Armstrong of Beaverhead county, Mont., writes under date of July 21: "We have just had some splendid rains in this county. Stock is in fine shape and crops will probably be saved. Hay is pretty short, but we have a fine crop."

Clellan A. Finley of Calhoun county, Mich., writes our Kansas City house: "Car of cattle arrived in good shape. I am very well pleased with them. They are just what I wanted, and I thank you for your interest in getting me such a good load."

W. N. Wheeler of Okfuskee county, Okla., and R. I. Bilby of Nodaway county, Mo., each had two cars of cattle on the East St. Louis market. Thos. Dodds of Schuyler county, Ill., and R. S. McKee of Page county, Ia., each had in a load of hogs the same day.

Taintor & St. John, one of the large cattle outfits of Montana, with headquarters in Rosebud county, had seventeen cars of cattle on the South Omaha market July 26. The heavy end, 237 head, averaging 1,199 lbs, sold at $5.00, while 106 head of steers, 1,000 lbs, went at $4.75.

Louis Cook, a prominent ranchman of Converse county, Wyo., writes under date of July 19: "Range conditions are very bad in some parts of the state. There is a strip of country that has had rain enough to fill up the holes, but the grass has not grown since May and is well cured. However, it is very short. Wool is going at 18c per pound here at present."

Included among those who had cattle shipments at East St. Louis on July 28 were: E. W. Lorton, Greene county, Ill.; Bilby & Strickler, Stephens county, Okla.; J. V. Griffith, Franklin county, Mo.; W. T. Burford, Montgomery county, Ill.; D. D. Johnson, Monroe county, Ia.; J. B. Montgomery, Dade county, Mo. Following marketed hogs the same day: Robertson & Ellis, Appanoos county, Ia.; Sims & Smith and E. P. Harned, Cooper county, Mo.; J. B. Montgomery, Dade county, Mo.

The 126 native lambs, averaging 70 lbs, which sold July 29 at South St. Joseph for $7.00, topping the market 15c per cwt, were handled by our house and shipped by Reller & Babcock of Brown county, Kan. They make a practice of buying each fall a lot of aged western ewes suitable for one year's breeding, raise one crop of lambs for the early market, fatten out the ewes and return them to market, and buy a fresh lot for the next year. Mr. Babcock had a car of his lambs there early in June, which Clay, Robinson & Co. sold at $9.50 straight.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

A. F. Burnham of Champaign county, Ohio: "Sheep you sent me are O. K."

P. P. Klick of Todd county, Minn, sold a car of mixed stock at south St. Paul.

J. Sanderson of Bottineau county, N. D., marketed a car of cattle at So. St. Paul.

M. J. Garber of Ottertail county, Minn., was represented at South St. Paul with a car of cattle.

Sol. D. Riegal of Pickaway county, Ohio: "The 200 feeding sheep arrived and I am well pleased with them."

J. S. Buseick of Grant county, Oregon, writes under date of July 20: "It is raining today, the first rain in two months."

S. H. Sherwood of Dekalb county, Ill.: "Received feeding lambs and am well satisfied with them. They should make fine gains."

S. M. Bowman of Howard county, Mo, writes: "Corn looks well, oats good and wheat poor. It is dry now. There are a good many spring pigs and old hogs scarce."

W. A. Sharples of Chouteau county, Mont., had the first consignment of western sheep and lambs from Montana at South St. Paul this season, marketing them July 25.

We had the pleasure of handling a two-car shipment of stock through our South St. Paul house from our staunch patron, J. N. Josephson, Washington county, Minn.

E. McCarthy of Natrona county, Wyo., was on the Chicago market July 27 with 1,019 feeding wethers of 111 lbs average and we landed them at top price of $4.25 for this class of stock that week.

W. S. Woosley of Madison county, Ohio, writes: "Load of sheep arrived O. K. My sons are very well satisfied with them and think them a fine bunch. Thank you for the satisfactory way you filled my order."

William R. Spencer of Valley county, Mont.: "Stock of all kinds are looking fine in northern Montana, but there is poor feed and no hay for winter. There must be a lot of sheep and cattle shipped out from here this fall."

S. Sechrest & Sons, the well-known merchants and stockmen of Riley county, Kan., write our Kansas City house: "Car of cattle arrived in good shape; not a a scratch on any of them. We are very well pleased with them. Thank you."

Julius Brohaska of Laramie county, Wyo., writes: "Live stock is not fat, owing to the dry weather effecting the range. I look for heavy shipments, as there is little hay in the country and what is here is worth $12 per ton, against $6.00 last year."

Our valued patron, Fred Schulte of Pierce county, Wis., was represented on the South St. Paul market with a car of cattle and a car of cattle, hogs and sheep. Thirty-three different owners were represented and checks and account sales were rendered by our house for each one.

Howard county, Ind., was represented on the Chicago lamb market July 29 with 122 head of 82-lb offerings. They were marketed by A. J. Pence and sold by us at $6.75, top of market. This price was 25c per cwt higher than they would have brought on the close of the previous day.

W. T. Wolfe, large cattle raiser of Converse county, Wyo., was at South Omaha July 20 with nine cars of cattle. We sold the top end of the steers at $5.00, averaging 1,138 lbs, and the best cows at $4.10, averaging 874 lbs. Range conditions are in bad shape, according to Mr. Wolfe, and shipments will be heavy from now on from that section.

T. W. Clark, a prominent cattle and sheepman of Natrona county, Wyo., was on the South Omaha market July 19 with three cars of wethers and yearlings, one car of the yearlings selling to the packers at $4.75, averaging 75 lbs, extreme top for the day's trade. Two cars of cattle sold at $4.65, averaging 975 lbs. All of the stock was handled by our house.

Charles Fisher, the well-known farmer and feeder of Fulton county, Ill., was on the Chicago market July 27 with three loads of heavy cattle of his own feeding which went at $7.75. He was accompanied by his brother, Willard Fisher, who is also prominent in farming and feeding circles.

J. Harrington of Lyman county, S. D., sold three loads of cattle at Sioux City. Mr. Harrington has something over 1,000 acres of good land in South Dakota. He was forced to ship these cattle now, as he was entirely out of water. "Everything is suffering for rain in my country," said he.

O. C. Woodrum, Fremont county, Ia.; F. Normile, Doniphan county, Kan.; Cheyney Bros., Mills county, Ia.; J. C. Welch, Page county, Ia.; E. L. Dakin, Nodaway county, Mo.; C. Lingo, Page county, Ia.; Hutlin & B., Mills county, Ia., were among prominent hog shippers to South St. Joseph market.

John W. Leach of Jacksonville, Ill.

Mr. Leach is prominent in both farming and feeding circles. He owns and operates 815 acres of farming land, besides supervising the farming of 200 more acres. He feeds from 75 to 100 cattle and raises and feeds 300 Poland-China hogs annually. His stock always attracts the attention of buyers when placed on the market. Mr. Leach has been a feeder and farmer all his life and says that it is the best and most profitable business if one keeps at it year in and year out and makes a close study of the same.

A. J. Smith of Hendricks county, Ind., had 135 native lambs on the Chicago market August 1 which averaged 69 lbs and were landed by us at $7.00, being 20c per cwt higher than any other natives brought and 25c per cwt higher than westerns made.

John W. Carey, editor of the Sioux City News and son of John Carey, the famous Iowa cattle feeder, was a caller at our office late last week and said that good rains had fallen in that part of the state, that the outlook for corn was quite promising and that the fields are unusually clear of weeds.

McCandless Bros., well-known breeders of pure-bred Chester White hogs in Sangamon county, Ill., write: "We were well pleased with the sale of hogs and lambs. You certainly got all there was in them. When we have any more to ship we will consign them to Clay, Robinson & Co., which will not be before winter as we only ship our own feeding."

Chas. F. Tnero of Cheyenne county, Colo., writes under date of July 29: "We had a fine rain here last night, and looks as though we might have more tonight. Water holes are filled and cattlemen are feeling better than they did yesterday by a good deal. Think there will be some good grassers to go out of here this fall."

On July 27 our South Omaha house handled four cars of ewes and yearlings for the Higgins Sheep Co. of Converse county, Wyo. The ewes in this consignment sold at $3.50, averaging 93 lbs; the fat end of the yearlings at $5.15, averaging 80 lbs, and the thin end to feeder buyers at $5.00. These prices were at the extreme top of the day's trade on the different classes.

On July 26 our South Omaha house handled a car of Wyoming wethers from Crook county, Wyo., 87 head of 85 lbs average for S. H. Shirley, and 47 of 82 lbs average for Mrs. Lester. Both lots made $4.25, top for day and highest price for aged wethers in some time there. This is only another instance where the small shipper was well taken care of by Clay, Robinson & Co.

P. E. Barber was at South Omaha from his ranch at Converse county, Wyo., looking after two cars of wethers. Mr. Barber is an old resident of Wyoming and reported conditions of a very satisfactory character in his section. Feed is all dried up and shipments will have to come along quite regularly from now on. Lack of feed will force in quite heavy shipments, which ordinarily could be carried along in event of an unfavorable trade.

W. W. Burtt, prominent young farmer of Delaware county, Ind., was on the market this week buying western feeding sheep through our house. He farms 320 acres of land and is a fancier of Shropshire sheep. He stated that they have had an abundance of rain in East Central Indiana and that only one more good rain is needed for the corn crop, which has made remarkable growth during the past month. The hay crop has been reduced about one-third from last year.

Among the prominent stockmen who had cattle on the South St. Paul market were: Fred LaPlant, Potter county, S. D.; S. A. Peterson, Burleigh county, N. D.; H. E. Feltheim, Mercer county, N. D.; C. E. Armstrong, McHenry county, N. D.; Coal Harbor Stock Farm, McLean county, N. D.; C. O. Riley, Emmons county, N. D.; Tweeten & Ellingson and Marion Edwards, Rolette county, N. D.; A. E. Dunn and L. O. Jordan, Edmunds county, S. D., and L. B. Garnass, Eddy county, N. D.

Following shippers were represented on the East St. Louis market with one or more cars of cattle July 25: Young & Ledford, Adair county, Mo.; Pritchard & Gibson, McCurtain county, Okla.; J. M. Thompson, Greenwood county, Kan.; R. F. Hulsey, Okmugee county, Okla. Hogs were sent in by the following parties on the same day: A. S. Kines and Wilson & Littrell of Randolph county, Mo.; H. L. Bufford, Shelby county, Mo.; E. P. Harned, Cooper county, Mo.; W. T. Reynolds, Obion county, Tenn.

U. R. Fishel of Bartholomew county, Ind., writes our Kansas City house: "Load of cattle reached me and they are by far the best quality I have ever secured. Thank you very much for the splendid way in which you handled my order. I met a neighbor when I was driving these cattle home, and he remarked that he wanted a load of feeders. I told him to place his order with you and he would get what he wanted. He said that if that is a sample of the way they handle orders I know I would be more than pleased. You may look for an order from him."

It was July 26 that the following stockmen shipped cattle to the East St. Louis market: J. C. Campbell, Coal county, Okla.; Bilby & Strickler, Stephens county, Okla.; E. A. Felker and B. Gibson, McCurtain county, Okla.; D. I. Pierson, Boone county, Mo.; Walters & Walters, Johnson county, Ill.; George & Crockett, Caldwell county, Mo.; W. C. Strode, Ralls county, Mo.; Monsees & Bente, Pettis county, Mo.; H. S. Smith, Linn county, Mo.; C. E. Potts, Green county, Ill.; Henry Miller, Page county, Ia.; C. Brockway, Henry county, Mo. On the same day hogs were received from Darby Bros., Cooper county, Mo.; D. I. Pierson, Boone county, Mo.; H. L. Bufford, Shelby county, Mo,; Goodson & Minnus and E. P. Harned of Carroll county, Mo,; M. Mayfield, Cooper county, Mo.; Geo. T. Clark, Nodaway county, Mo.

RANGE CATTLE AND SHEEP AT CHICAGO AND SOUTH OMAHA

*Obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co.

Receipts last week totaled 4,500, against 4,000 the previous week and 2,300 like period of last year. For the week beef steers showed 15@25c loss, cows and heifers 10@15c and stockers and feeder 25@50c.

At the start of this week there were 7,500 head. This enormous total for this time of the season was further proof of the unsatisfactory condition of the range. Trade was dull and draggy and prices 25c lower for desirable beef steers and 30@40c lower for common and medium grades. The top was $6.25, OBTAINED BY US FOR 17 HEAD OF 1,314-lb MONTANAS. A moderate run of cows and heifers met good demand at steady prices. Stockers and feeders were also in better call and these sold steady.

There was another heavy run Tuesday, total being 6,500. Quality did not show any improvement. There was some shipping demand for the better grades of beef steers and local slaughterers bought with more freedom. Prices were strong for good heavy lots and steady for others. Cows and heifers steady sale. One load of the extra choice 1,520-lb Clark Montana beeves went on Boston account at $6.50.

Wednesday supply 1,500. There was an active demand for beef steers and the market was brisk at 10@15c higher. Top was $6.70, OBTAINED BY US FOR 59 HEAD OF THE SEIBEN LIVE STOCK CO. MONTANA 1,372-lb OFFERINGS, NO OTHER SALE BEING MADE WITHIN 20c PER CWT OF THIS PRICE THUS FAR THIS SEASON. Brisk trade in cows and heifers at 10@15c advance. Top heifers made $5.55, THE SALE BEING CONSUMMATED BY US FOR 84 HEAD OF 1,075-LB OFFERINGS FROM THE ABOVE COMPANY'S RANCH. This was top for the season by 30c per cwt. Stockers and feeders met active call at prices 10@15c higher.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of western range cattle:

Two years ago	4.65	3.75	4.40	6.85	5.50	6.75

*Obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co.

Total receipts here Thursday of last week 20,088. There were no lambs available, but best were quotable at $6.75, against $7.00 late the previous day. Yearlings went 25c lower and sheep 10@15c lower. Best yearlings available went on feeding account at $5.15 and the wethers for slaughter at $4.30. In a total of 12,272 Friday about half were southern lambs direct to packers, billed from Louisville. The only westerns available were Dakota feeder wethers at $4.05 and Idaho feeder yearlings at $5.00. While lambs were quotably 75c@$1.00 lower than the previous week's close, prices for sheep and yearlings were about steady.

Supply at start of this week 19,374. Sellers controlled the whip hand and made buyers do sums in addition to the extent of 15@25c for lambs and mostly 10@15c for sheep and yearlings, with cases even higher. Lambs went for slaughter at $6.50@6.75, latter price obtained by us, choice ones being absent; yearlings topped at $5.65, two-year-old wethers $4.55 and aged lots $4.40, and ewes made $4.35, handled by us. Yearling breeder ewes landed at $5.80. There was a good demand for feeders, with all price changes tending toward strength.

We Sold at Chicago on August 3 at

$6.70 Montana Range Steers $6.70
Top for season by 20c per cwt

$5.55 Montana Range Heifers $5.55
Top for season by 30c per cwt

Above cattle were dehorned grade Shorthorns and were marketed by Seiben Live Stock Co. of Helena, Mont. The steers numbered 59 head, averaged 1,372 lbs and went to the United Dressed Beef Co. of New York. There were 84 of the heifers and they averaged 1,075 lbs.

RANGE CATTLE AND SHEEP AT CHICAGO AND SOUTH OMAHA

Total marketing Tuesday 21,897. There was a brisk demand for lambs and prices went 10@15c higher. While sheep and yearlings moved with fair freedom, prices were merely steady in most cases. Several big strings of Idaho lambs went at $7.00. Best yearlings available brought $5.35, we making the sale. Wyoming wethers topped at $4.60, obtained by us, and Idaho ewes at $4.40. There was a brisk demand for both breeding and feeding stock. Run Wednesday 24,000. It was mostly a 10@15c lower deal. Top wethers at $4.50 were handled by us.

There was another good demand for feeder sheep and lambs this week, and all price changes tended upward. Supply was lightest in some time, due to curtailed movement from western ranges. There were really more orders in the hands of buyers than there were offerings on most days. Top lambs went out at a cost of $6.00, yearlings $5.25, wethers $4.25 and a choice class of ewes would have cost $3.25. Call for breeding ewes was brisk at strong prices, choice yearling rangers costing up to $5.80 and natives $5.00.

SOUTH OMAHA MARKETS.

Range Cattle.

South Omaha, Neb., Aug. 3—Heavy run of westerns and a decline of 10@15c on Monday of last week was followed by more moderate offerings. Beef cattle showed more life, values at close of last week being strong with the finish of the previous week. Recent declines in stockers and feeders brought out more buyers and values advanced 15@25c for the week. Supplies have been made up largely of common to fair quality stock. Drought throughout a good part of the range districts has been responsible for this, most shipments being forced in. Western Nebraska alone is the favored spot this season in the range country. They have little complaint to make, as the grass is generally good and a fairly plentiful hay crop is assured. Sandhill steers last week brought $5.65. They were hay feds, averaged around 1,400 lbs and went to the packers. Liberal shipments are expected this week.

Heavy run first two market days this week, yet beef steers sold strong with last week's close. She stock in liberal proportion. Monday trade 10c lower and Tuesday steady. Stockers and feeders brisk sale at prices 10@15c higher than last week's close. Today's market was 10c higher.

Range Sheep.

Although lambs made up a larger percentage of arrivals last week than any time this season, early in the week prices advanced 10@15c on good killers, top making $7.50. Extreme close was weak, however, and $7.25 bought best then. Light yearlings found about same outlet to packers and feeder buyers, top feeders at $5.00 and killers $5.15, which we secured for a lot from the Higgins Sheep Co. of Wyoming. Choice Montana killing wethers sold at $4.15 and top ewes $3.75. Feeders found fairly ready outlet, prices showing 10@15c advance, with the possible exception of lambs, which closed weak. Bulk of feeding lambs were quotable at $5.90@6.10; bulk wethers, $3.50@3.75; bulk yearlings, $4.50@4.75; bulk ewes, $2.25@2.75.

Monday trade strong to 10c higher. Top lambs $7.00 and bulk $6.60@6.80. Yearlings reached $5.20. Best wethers made $4.30 and bulk $3.90@4.10. Top ewes $3.85 and bulk $3.40@3.60. Active, strong market for feeders. Best lambs $6.10, yearlings $5.00 and bulk $4.65@4.85. Wethers reached $3.85 and bulk $3.50@3.75. A heavy supply of wethers Tuesday and trade weaker, with other kinds steady. Top lambs $7.10. We sold five doubles of the I. C. Miller Wyoming feeder wethers at top price of $3.85 and nine doubles of Madden & Murray Wyoming feeder yearlings at $5.00, the top. Lambs sold 15@25c higher today and sheep steady to 10c lower. Feeders held steady.

Attention, Western Range Cattlemen.

At the outset we wish to strongly advise rangemen holding back for awhile at least cattle lacking good flesh where feasible. There is everything to be gained and nothing to be lost in this policy. And prevailing conditions certainly warrant it. However, fat cattle should be marketed as fast as possible. Just as soon as there is assurance of a good corn crop we would not be surprised to see prices for feeder stock advance 50c per cwt or more. And we anticipate a good crop of corn. There is reasonable assurance of a good demand for well-fatted range cattle all season, as there are only moderate supplies of corn-fed cattle in sight. Prices for range cattle have fallen sharply from two weeks ago, owing to excessive runs. Best beef steers show 15@25c and others 35@50c loss from then, she stock 15@25c and stockers and feeders 25@40c.

It is expected that the big run of southwest cattle will cease after Sept. 1 or 10. Packers are now purchasing liberally of these and giving the light weight western rangers scant favor. However, after the southeru cattle come in smaller numbers slaughterers will have to depend more upon the westerns, and the lighter weights should then meet with better sale.

BEEF STEERS

Range of prices and bulk sales of native beef steers this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Range.	Bulk.
This week.....	$4.50@8.45	$5.60@7.60
Previous week.....	4.50 8.35	5.85 7.60
Year ago.....	4.25 7.50	6.10 7.15
Two years ago.....	4.00 7.90	5.25 6.85

Receipts Thursday of last week 5,908. Prices declined 10c for the fresh offerings and there were not a few instances where stale offerings had to go 15@20c lower. Best offerings available were 15 head of 1,646 lbs average at $7.55. Supply Friday totaled 3,497. More offerings were locked up than went over the scales. Market was as badly demoralized as it was the previous day. However, where trades were consummated they were steady. Part of a load of 1,315 lbs average brought $7.25 that would have made around $8.00 a few weeks ago. Packers had 1,700 Texas direct from other markets and there were 15 loads on sale. As compared with the close of the previous week prices showed 50@75c decline, although there might have been cases where it took $1.00 to cover the loss from ten days ago.

Marketing at the start of this week totaled 22,000, of which 7,500 were western rangers. Thus there was a light supply of natives. Offerings of value above $6.50 went 10@15c higher and those under that figure merely steady. No small proportion of the offerings were in plain flesh, South Dakota and Minnesota contributing liberally because of burned pastures. There were also goodly shipments from Iowa. It was fortunate that receipts were kept down to smaller proportions, as otherwise further price declines would have been recorded. Few arrivals went above $7.50 and the top was $8.05, realized for 43 head of 1,496 lbs average. Most trading was at $5.60@7.40. Receipts Tuesday 8,979, included in which were 6,500 western rangers. Market was practically unchanged from the previous day, with a quiet demand from all sources. Best beeves offered were 21 head of 1,234 lbs average at $7.25. Wednesday run totaled 10,000. Prices were 15@25c higher for good to choice offerings and 35@50c higher than one week ago. Common and medium lots advanced 10@20c over Tuesday and showed that much gain over one week ago. The top was $8.45 for 44 head of 1,536-lb fancy Shorthorns.

COWS AND HEIFERS.

Demand showed improvement on Thursday of last week and the moderate run was cleared in good time at steady prices. A small supply met a very dull demand Friday, although prices were not quotably lower. They stood 25@35c lower than the close of the previous week.

A moderate run at the start of this week met good demand and prices were 10@15c higher, with cases showing even more gain. Prime corn-fed heifers sold up to $7.00. Chief call was for good to choice offerings. Prices were generally steady Tuesday. The medium and plain grassy lots met slower sale, owing to competition of western rangers, and this is expected to be even more pronounced in coming weeks. Wednesday trade 10@15c higher.

The market was dull and weaker Thursday of last week. Supplies were liberal and demand dull. Prices were unchanged Friday. As compared with close of previous week they stood 25c lower for better grades of stockers and good heavy fleshy feeders, but other kinds were 35@60c lower.

Additional showers and the sensational break in prices last week caused greatly reduced marketing at the start of this week. Result was a more active market and prices in most cases were 10c higher, although common light stockers were no better sale. Prices generally steady for better grades Tuesday and weaker for plainer classes. Wednesday market 10@15c higher.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for stocker and feeding cattle:

Run Thursday of last week 17,950. It was generally a 10@15c lower deal. A lot of heavy packing and packing mixed sold at $8.30@8.50. Light weight and handy butchers sold mostly at $8.65@8.80. Fancy assorted light reached $9.00. Marketing Friday 18,345. Prices 10@25c lower, packing grades at outside decline and showed 40c loss from best time Wednesday. Choice light at $8.85, although fancy assorted reached $9.00 early. The 200 to 250-lb butchers at $8.55@8.60 and mixed $8.20@8.35. Heavy packers at $8.00@8.15, with pieces of loads down to $7.75. Saturday total 12,978. Market more demoralized than ever and 20@30c lower. Choice light reached $8.70 early, just as good went at $8.50 late, while $8.10 took prime heavy. A drove of good mixed was put up at $8.00. It was a $7.60@7.90 market for packing grades. As compared with close of previous week the market was mostly 40@60c lower.

Receipts at the start of this week totaled 30,074. At a decline of 10@15c, the market closed active. Most offerings went at $7.75@8.10. Prime hea vy sold at $8.00, a similar class of butchers at $8.00@8.15, many 200 to 220-lb butchers at $8.30@8.45, with the 170 to 180 lbs average at $8.50@8.60 and top at $8.70. Tuesday supply 11,371. Offerings of value above $8.00 showed some improvement, but below weakness was in evidence. A lot of packers had to sell at $7.50@7.75, quality being worst of season. Top $8.75 for fancy light, with most at $8.60@8.70. Choice 200-lb butchers made $8.50 and $8.25 was high for 240 lbs average, with 250 to 260-lb butchers at $8.15@8.20. Supply Wednesday 14,000. Opening 15@25c higher, market closed with part of advance lost. Top at $8.90 was obtained by us, with most choice offerings of all weights at $8.30@8.80 and bulk packing grades $7.85@8.15.

Sheep and Lambs.

A heavy run brought demoralization to the lamb market Thursday of last week. Most offerings went 25@50c lower than the previous day's average, or back to the low point two weeks ago. Some business was done in fancy lots at $7.00 early, but choice ones had to go at $6.50 on the close. Most offerings were common and medium. Ewes, which comprised bulk of sheep arrivals, went steady. We topped the ewe trade with a lot at $4.40 and bulk of sales were at $4.00@4.25. Last week closed with lambs 75c@$1.00 lower than the previous week, while sheep and yearlings were generally steady. The increased marketing of natives and heavy numbers of southerns direct to local packers proved the undoing of the lamb trade.

A big reduction in supplies at the start of this week put sellers in a position to dictate terms. Lambs sold 15@25c higher and sheep strong to 10c higher. Top at $7.00 was obtained by us, no other sale being made within 20c per cwt of this price. A few lots of fancy ewes brought $4.30. While lambs sold 10@15c higher; sheep went steady to weaker. City butchers paid $7.05@7.10 for some fancy lots, but trading was largely at $6.25@7.00. Limit for native ewes was $4.25 and other fair to good kinds went at $3.75@4.00. While sheep sold steady Wednesday, lambs lost 15@25c. We topped the market with one load at $7.10, but there were very few sales as high as $7.00 and $6.75 bought a strictly good fat class after the start.

National Stock Yards, Ill., Aug. 2—Liberal supply of native cattle so far this week. However, few well-fatted beeves included. Two loads, averaging around 1,470 lbs, sold today at $8.00. Prices steady to strong. Butcher stock declined 10@15c from last week's close. Calves 25c lower. Stockers and feeders went 15@25c lower.

Monday's liberal run of southern cattle showed 10@15c loss, while today's small supply caused the market to regain what was lost.

Moderate supply of hogs thus far this week. Monday prices were 15@25c lower and today 15c higher. Top $8.87½ and bulk $8.25@8.50. Packers bought medium weights around $8.50 and heavy $8.00@8.20.

Supply of sheep moderate. Best lambs $6.85, medium grades $6.00@6.50 and most culls $4.50@5.25. Little common kinds at $3.50@4.25. Mutton sheep at $4.25. Breeding ewes ready sale at $4.50@5.00 and stockers $3.25@4.00.

Fort Worth Shippers are Pleased.

Following are a few extracts from letters received last week from well pleased patrons of Clay, Robinson & Co. at Fort Worth:

Tom Hoben of Montague county, Tex.: "I was well pleased with the last sales you made for me."

T. W. House, Jr., of Harris county, Tex.: "Am well pleased with returns for car of calves shipped you. Whenever I ship anything to Fort Worth it will be consigned to Clay, Robinson & Co."

J. A. Johnston of Stephens county, Okla.: "I received account sales all O. K. and am glad to say you sold the stock so as to bring me out on them. I thank you for your work. The shipment did as well as I expected, except the cow, which I thought would bring a little more. As I only missed it on one, think that is good."

The Dickinson, N. D., wool market opened at prices ranging from 17@18c. This is 4@6c lower than last year, and quite a number of the growers are consigning their wool.

Sell Your WOOL To The MILLS!

Woolen mills pay bigger prices than any wool buyers. We are in close touch with the mills. Through us you can sell them your wool, and easily make 2 to 3c more per pound than if you dealt with home buyers.

Our commission for grading, storing, insuring and selling wool is small in comparison to the better prices we can get for you.

We sell 20,000,000 pounds of wool every year, so you can understand how we are able to sell your product at top millmarket prices.

We have been in the wool business 44 years. Our customers number many thousands. The fact that we have kept them from year to year and that their increased patronage has given us the biggest wool business in the country—East or West—is proof that we have lived up to our business motto, "Be fair to the customer."

Think this over. Investigate the situation. Get our terms. Learn our financial responsibility, if you don't now know it.

Just describe your clip and we will tell you what it is worth. We believe we can put 2c per pound net profit on your wool for you. Let us lay the facts before you. Then you decide whether to sell to home dealers or to sell through us to the mills. Terms and explanations will be sent you. We shall be glad to put your name on our free mailing list and send you market reports from time to time. Write us NOW.

We furnish sacks free to customers.

Feeders of Cattle, Sheep and Lambs!

Opportunity is knocking at your door. The Western rangemen are shipping freely of cattle, sheep and lambs in suitable condition for stocker and feeder purposes. Drought conditions are forcing them to markets, even the choicest and most thrifty stock.

The movement will be largest during the next sixty days. Here is a chance for you to get in on the ground floor. It will be the best opportunity in years to stock up at relatively low prices.

Do not delay sending in your orders. If we have them on file we are enabled to take advantage of favorable market conditions and purchase supplies at much lower cost than otherwise could be done. It is not necessary for you to make a trip to market. Just tell us what you want. Our expert buyers will do the rest in a most satisfactory way.

It will be well to remember that the markets which receive the great bulk of the western range stock are Chicago, South Omaha, South St. Paul, Sioux City, Kansas City, South St. Joseph and East St. Louis. Write us at any of these markets for further information.

Clay, Robinson & Company's LIVE STOCK REPORT

Vol. 20 | Chicago, Friday, August 12, 1910 | No. 32

Corn Crop Shows Great Improvement.

Although the corn market has taken cognizance during the last week of the crop improvement resulting from cooler weather and timely rains, the latter is not shown in Government's figures in current issue of REPORT. The Government figures were made up as of Aug. 1, at which time the fears of crop losses in Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska were greatest and when the dry weather also had aroused much uneasiness regarding the outlook in the big states east of the Missouri River. Recent rains have come at a critical time in the life of the crop in these big producing states—the earing period—and it is believed that danger of a corn crop failure has passed, barring the possibility of frost lossses.

Conditions are Bad in Western Range Country.

L. F. Johnston, a well-known cattleman of Sheridan, Wyo., was at Chicago early last week and sold a nine-car shipment of cattle through Clay, Robinson & Co. Speaking of conditions in the northwestern range country, he said:

"There is absolutely no grass, excepting in a few favored places, on the Wyoming range, and we cattlemen are forced to get our stock to market as soon as possible. Very few of the cattle are in decent killing flesh and they are getting thinner every day they are left on the range. Small owners are closing out as rapidly as possible and the owners of big herds are shipping cattle as fast as they can procure cars. Much breeding stock that would be held under satisfactory range conditions is necessarily being sacrificed. Weather conditions from now on until Sept. 15 will determine the proportion of stock that stockmen will endeavor to carry through the winter. If we get good general rains between now and the middle of next month enough grass will perhaps be made to winter a fair number of cattle on. If we don't get the rain the stuff must be shipped. Seven years ago we had exactly the same conditions as now prevail, but we had enough rain in the late summer to make grass enough to permit us from cleaning up our herds entirely.

"We had no rain during May or June, our rainy season. So far there has been no scarcity of stock water in most sections. A few welcome cloudbursts have kept our reservoirs well filled, otherwise we would be lacking water as well as grass. When I loaded these cattle last Friday evening it was raining some.

"Aside from a strip of country in Montana north of the Yellowstone from a point a little west of Miles City, the entire northwestern range country is reported to be in as deplorable condition as is the northeastern section of Wyoming.

"The dry farmer is nearly as bad off as the cattle. He has nothing but his experience and children. A few of those who have been there for some time and know how to handle the land are making a little grain, but the vast majority will harvest absolutely nothing. The idea of making crops without water is a myth. Those who have tried it know that this is a fact, and the real estate men and newspaper and magazine writers, who have in the main been responsible for the propagation of this dry farming rot, know it."

Cattlemen Will Not Sell at Present Prices.

J. S. Gardner of Yuma, Colo., writes our South Omaha house: "We have received good rains and cattle will not be put on the market at present prices. The range is very good and cattle are in good flesh. Rangemen will not sell if cattle will not bring $4.00 per cwt on the range. Thank you for past favors."

Good Rainfall in the West.

Nebraska, the Dakotas, Eastern Kansas, Northwestern Missouri, and portions of Iowa have at last received a good rain amounting to a good soaking in some localities recently. At Kansas City a fall of 1.84 inches was reported and all along the Missouri River from Kansas City to Sioux City rain fell. Through the western section of Iowa the ground was soaked. The fall was steady and continued for several hours in Omaha.

MONTANA GRASS CATTLE WHICH TOPPED CHICAGO WESTERN RANGE MARKET 70c PER CWT.

These beef steers were sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. on Aug. 3 at $6 70, topping that day's trade by 70c per cwt, and up to then top for season by 20c per cwt. They were bought by Tom Cross for the United Dressed Beef Co. of New York. There were 59 head of grade Shorthorns in the shipment and they averaged 1,372 lbs. The cattle were marketed by the Seiben Live Stock Co. of Helena, Mont., one of the most prominent ranching firms in the Northwest.

Montana and Dakota Cattlemen.

We call the attention of Montana and Dakota cattle shippers to the advantage of consigning to Clay, Robinson & Co., in that, having our own houses at South St. Paul and at Sioux City, shipments coming via these markets consigned to us (if not sold there) are sorted and shaped up before reloading, so that they come on the Chicago market all ready for inspection of the buyers. This is often a very great advantage, as it enables the salesmen to offer the cattle on the early market, being not necessary to do any sorting upon arrival here. It frequently happens that coming through to Chicago, consigned to firms that do not possess the above advantage, have to be held over until next day, as by the time they are sorted up, classified, etc, ready for the buyers, it is too late to offer them on the day of arrival.

Prospective Montana and Dakota shippers will do well to make a mental note of this matter, and if any further information is desired, address Clay, Robinson & Co. at either South St. Paul or Sioux City, as the case may be.

Northwestern Stockmen Have New Plan.

Owing to a short hay crop and lack of range, causing cattle and sheepmen of the northwestern part of South Dakota to prepare to ship out all available, it has been decided by many of them to sacrifice a portion of the small crops that would otherwise be obtained in order to fatten up the stock before shipping. The plan was suggested by stockmen a few days ago, has met general favor among other owners, and is to be widely followed in that section. It consists in cutting what barley, wheat and oats are available and using them for fattening up this stock instead of marketing the half crop after threshing. The stockmen contend that by this method they will save more through having fat stock to ship than they could obtain from the crops after going to the expense of harvesting them. It is a good plan and should be followed by other stockmen of the Northwest where similar conditions prevail. Sacrificing young thrifty cattle or sheep, unless compulsory, is ill advised.

Wyoming Gets a Good Rain.

F. L. Clark, a prominent cattleman of Douglas, Wyo., was on the South Omaha market Aug. 2 with three cars of cattle which our house sold at very satisfactory prices. Two cars of steers, averaging 1,207 lbs, made $5.10 and a car of cows, 986 lbs, $4.00. Conditions have been unsatisfactory in that section, according to Mr. Clark. Recent rains have filled the water holes, however, and grass will get a new start. Cattle will come in liberally from now on, and while rains have relieved the situation to a certain extent, the stock will not carry the good flesh that it usually does from that country.

Thorman Fancy Beeves from Nebraska.

A cattle trade feature at Chicago last week was the arrival and sale of four cars of prime horned and branded Nebraska Shorthorns of the old fashion that were declared by trade talent to be as fancy as any cattle received here this year, and good enough to grace any show ring. Three loads of these cattle arrived on Wednesday, averaged 1,536 lbs and sold to Schwarzschild & Sulzberger at $8.45. The other load was on Thursday's market, averaged 1,555 lbs and went to Armour & Co. at $8.50, grossing $132.17 per head, while the 69 head, comprising the entire shipment, grossed $7,696. These prime beeves were raised, fed and marketed by Julius Thorman of Elgin, Neb., who has proven himself a pastmaster in the art of raising and feeding cattle of superior merit. These cattle bore his own brand and were high grade, and a few of them pure-bred Shorthorns.

"My experience has been that it pays to raise cattle and to raise the best," remarked Mr. Thorman. "While I have not figured the expense of the cattle, I know they made me good money, though they have not been produced without cost by any means, as they have been fed for a long period. Late last fall I put them on corn fodder and in December on a ration of snapped corn, millet and alfalfa hay. For the last 6½ months they were on a full feed of shell corn in connection with which I continued to feed the millet and alfalfa for roughness."

South Dakota Will Ship Many Cattle.

J. A. Archambault and Louis Agard of Schnnasse county, S. D., were represented on the South St. Paul market with eighteen cars of cattle which our house handled and disposed of to their entire satisfaction. These gentlemen remarked that conditions were very dry in that section of the country and water scarce, which will necessitate shipping a good many cattle. Another thing which they stated the stockmen had to contend with was the constant arrival of new settlers and the readjustment of land conditions.

Stocks of Provision Show Decrease.

Stocks of provisions at western centers of accumulation are now only about 85 per cent of a year ago of cut meats and about 60 per cent of lard. Stocks of cut meats are only about 70 per cent of those of two years ago. Officially reported stocks in Chicago, Kansas City, South Omaha, South St. Joseph and Milwaukee, as compiled by Schwarz & Co., are 187,330,000 lbs of cut meats Aug. 1, against 197,871,000 lbs a month ago, and 220,133,000 two years ago. The decrease in the cut meats during July was 10,541,000 lbs, which is the smallest July decrease since 1907.

MONTANA GRASS HEIFERS WHICH TOPPED SEASON'S CHICAGO WESTERN RANGE SHE STOCK MARKET 30c PER CWT.

There were 84 head of 1,075-lb grade Shorthorns in the consignment. They were sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. on Aug. 3 at $5.55 and were marketed by the Seiben Live Stock Co. of Helena, Mont. James Crowley, who appears on horseback at the left in the photo, bought these heifers for Swift & Co.

†Bushels. ‡Tons.

Official estimates for August, as made by the Agricultural Department at Washington, show that corn is still king, with a promise of the largest crop ever raised, notwithstanding big losses last month west of the Missouri River. Despite losses of 220,000,000 bushels last month, the crop promise now stands at 2,940,000,000 bushels, or just 13,000,000 bushels more than the bumper crop of 1906.

Oats also have distanced the previous bumper crop by 13,000,000 bushels, promising 1,022,000,000 bushels, against 1,009,353,000 bushels last year, which was the first time the oats crop of the United States ran into the billion-bushel class.

Wheat Offers Surprise.

Winter wheat furnished a surprise even to the most optimistic although it was known that the grain was of magnificent quality and was weighing out handsomely. Its preliminary showing, as given in figures by the Department, is for a yield 12,000,000 bushels larger than that of last year, and puts this year's crop as second largest in the country's history, the crop of 492,000,000 bushels raised in 1906 being first.

The losses shown in spring wheat a month ago measured virtually all of the crop loss of the year. The spring wheat crop is small enough to pull the total wheat production down to 669,000,000 bushels, a total which has been beaten five times in the last decade.

Hay Crop Is Short.

One of the important features of the crop report is the sensational loss in hay. The August indication is for a total crop of about 54,000,000 tons, which compares with 64,938,000 tons in 1909 and with 70,798,000 tons in 1908, when the largest hay crop on record was produced. This immense shortage in hay, when taken in connection with the almost universally short pastures, will have a most important bearing on the feeding situation and undoubtedly will have much influence in determining prices of the feeding grains. The report indicates that potatoes are a three-fourths crop.

The preliminary estimate of the acreage of hay is 45,005,000 acres, or 1.6 per cent (739,000 acres) less than last year. The average condition of the hay crop Aug. 1 was 83, as compared with 80.2 last month, 86.8 Aug. 1, 1909; 92.1 Aug. 1, 1908, and a ten-year average Aug. 1 of approximately 87.2.

Comparisons by States.

The crop reporting board of the Bureau of Statistics of the United States Department of Agriculture, issued at Washington Monday, estimates from the reports of the correspondents and agents of the bureau as follows: The average condition of corn Aug. 1 was 79.3, compared with 85.4 last month, 84.4 Aug. 1, 1909, and 82.1, the average Aug. 1 for the last ten years.

Comparisons for important corn states follow:

Big Fires Reported in Montana.

C. H. Kaiser of Chouteau county, Mont., writes under date of Aug. 1: "In regard to the range: Our feed is good but water scarce. Creeks are drying up and I expect the shipping season will open this month. Cattle are in fine shape around here, but they will suffer for water from now on unless we have rain. I guess there will be quite a shipment of cattle and sheep this fall, as there is not much hay and we are having some big fires northwest of here."

"Not So Bad for First Train."

M. W. Read, cashier of the Reclamation State Bank of Newell, S. D., writes as follows: "The first train of cattle ever shipped from Newell, S. D., left today with 15 cars. Of this number Clay, Robinson & Co. got eight cars. Not so bad for the first train."

The shipment in question was that of A. Linder, who is prominent in South Dakota range cattle circles. The offerings included heifers, cows and calves, and, considering the condition of the market, Mr. Linder was well pleased with the prices.

Hog Market and Provision Trade.

"Last year we had in front of us a well-known and carefully estimated crop of hogs, and a very large trade, while this year it seems to be the general opinion that the contrary is the case," says Walter C. Hately, the Chicago provision expert. "Of course our present stocks available for consumption this year are not large and are well held by the packers, whose interest it is to get full prices for them; but with the prospect for the new season it will be all they can do to maintain selling on the basis of 1½c a pound cheaper. The consumer will certainly not buy more than his immediate necessities demand. We have packed in the West since March 1 about 8,500,000 hogs, against 10,000,000 a year ago. It is true hogs are heavier than a year ago, but we reduced our stocks of meat in July last year at the five principal points 52,000,000 lbs, against a decrease this year of only 10,000,000 lbs. In lard the world's stock shows a decrease of only 4,000 tierces, against 26,000 tierces decrease a year ago."

Grass Cured Fine in Montana.

Alfred Wright of Custer county, Mont., writes under date of Aug. 6: "Please find enclosed 50c for subscription to REPORT. I can't very well do without it. We have had a dry, hot summer so far, but stock is looking fairly well and will do better just as soon as the days shorten and nights get cooler. They ought to be hard fat this fall, as grass cured in [illegible] shape. Water is a little scarce. I am afraid [illegible] will have to quit the stock business on accoun[illegible] settlers fencing up the water holes."

No Complaint from La Junta, Colo.

R. W. Patterson, president of First National Bank, La Junta, Colo., writes under date of Aug. 4: "We have had upon the whole a very favorable summer. Grass is excellent on the range and stock generally in good condition. The weather was dry for about 50 days, but we have lately had several heavy rains, so that there is an abundance of water throughout the range and grass is in good condition. Crops generally are excellent. However, under one or two of the late ditches the crops have suffered on account of lack of water."

Veterinary.

Indiana—I have a car of lambs and they have a bad cough. Symptoms: Drawn in at flank, snotting at nose, some of their nostrils a little inflamed, hold their heads high when coughing and sneezing, act like they have something up their nostrils and try to blow or sneeze it out.

Reply—The cough and other symptoms described are caused by the presence of gad fly grubs in the sinuses of the head and upper chambers of nostrils. There is no certain cure. Some shepherds claim to get fair success by pouring in a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts turpentine and sweet oil into each nostril in turn, the sheep being laid on its back and the nose turned upward and held there for a minute or two until the mixture can run to the part desired. Generous feeding is most important to offset effects of the irritation. Feed a mixture of whole oats and bran, equal parts, and add mixed hay if pastures are bare. Snuff or pepper sometimes is put on floor of pen to be occupied by sheep. This gets into the nostrils and so induces free sneezing, which may expel some of the grubs.

Wool Market Notes.

Five hundred thousand pounds of wool are being held in warehouses by growers in the Lewiston, Idaho, district, and no sales will be made at the present price of 13c. The holders say they will not let any go for less than 15c per pound.

The wool crop in this country this year is estimated to be far less than a year ago, authorities estimating 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 lbs to be the loss from a year ago. The Montana clip alone, it is figured, will be 6,000,000 lbs less than in 1900. The long staple clips are reduced considerably in many sections.

According to word from San Angelo, West Texas growers and eastern buyers are wrangling over the price of 1,000,000 lbs of wool from the spring crop which has been stored there. The growers have been offered 15@17c for their product, which is about 5c under one year ago, and the majority have refused to sell.

The Tri-State Wool Growers Association met at Boulder, Wyo. Bids were opened for the 1910 clip. The highest was 20c per lb for the entire clip belonging to the thirty members of the association, amounting to 500,000 lbs. This is reported to be the highest price paid in that state this season and is a victory for co-operation, as many independent growers consigned for 16@18c. The M. J. Smiley clip of 138,000 lbs and the F. N. Fuller clip of 60,000 lbs have sold at about 19c.

Advices from Boston are to the effect that there has been quite a cleanup of fleece wools the past two or three weeks, and there is no large accumulation left. During the past few weeks 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 lbs of Michigans have been taken out of the market. Ohio quarter-bloods are being sold at 28¼c and three-eights and half bloods from the same section bring 29c. Ohio unwashed delaines are selling at 26c and the general lines of fleece wools are up fully 1@1½c a pound over July prices. Michigan grades are 1c a pound under the Ohio prices.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

E. D. Wright of Union county, N. M., writes under date of Aug. 5: "We are having abundant rains now."

G. H. Arnold and E. C. Majors of Converse county, Wyo., were at South Omaha looking after a four-car shipment of cattle.

Lewis H. Easterly of Gunnison county, Colo., writes: "Plenty of rains in the mountains and feed is good. Cattle are doing well."

George Grimm of Olmsted county, Minn., had 68 breeding ewes of 81 lbs average at Chicago on Aug. 8 and we sold them at top price of $5.00.

A. Rasmussen, a well-satisfied customer of our South Omaha house, had a shipment of cows and heifers there from his ranch in Custer county, S. D.

F. W. Gooding of Blaine county, Idaho, had 1,857 of his lambs on the Chicago market Aug. 8 and we landed them on feeding account at $6.60@6.65, latter price being top.

O. A. Cramer of Rio Grande county, Colo., writes under date of Aug. 5: "We have had a hot, dry summer, but are getting rains now and crops are looking good."

Geo. E. Huey of Yuma county, Colo., writes under date of Aug. 5: "Cattle are very good here for this time of year. Grass is fine and plenty of rain at present."

R. M. Hewson, manager of the Lexington (Nebraska) Shipping Association, practically a daily shipper to the South Omaha market, had two cars of hogs there Monday.

Stroud & Roff, one of the most prominent cattle firms in the Southwest, with headquarters in Pontotoc county, Okla., marketed a big string of southern cattle through our East St. Louis house recently.

J. P. Dickinson of Lincoln county, Colo., writes under date of Aug. 4: "Good rains in Eastern Colorado past week. There is plenty of grass and water, and conditions have improved very much."

Governor B. B. Brooks of Wyoming had two cars of cattle at South Omaha on Aug. 8. They were mostly heifers and landed at $4.50, averaging 983 lbs, as high as anything of this sort has sold there lately.

Jos. O. Cell of Park county, Colo., writes under date of Aug. 5: "Cattle are doing fine in this locality. Owing to heavy snows last winter grass got a good start, and we are getting plenty of rain now."

C. L. McCray of Bent county, Colo., writes under date of Aug. 6: "We have had good rains on our range and our steers are doing fine. Rains have been general and I think the grass will be fine for late feed."

Brett Gray of Cheyenne county, Colo., writes: "Range has been short on account of the dry weather, but have had some fine rains the last week and I think range stuff will do fine the next sixty days."

Thos. S. Snyder of Union county, N. M., writes under date of Aug. 6: "We have had fine rains since July 30 and stock will be in good fix by November. There has been a general rain all over the northwestern part."

A. A. Hunt of Grand county, Colo., writes under date of Aug. 6: "No weather trouble here, at least not on east side. Pastures fine, but hay will not make over 75 per cent of full crop. Three inches of rain fell in last 10 days."

Mary J. Crooks of Blaine county, Idaho, obtained two top prices in the sheep trade at Chicago on Aug. 8 when we sold 264 head of 84-lb yearling wethers on feeding account at $5.50 and 126 wethers of 110 lbs average to killers at $4.25.

E. Rosenwald & Son of San Miguel county, N. M., writes under date of Aug. 6: "The summer has been rather warm and dry, but we are now having good rains and will have plenty of good gramma hay for fall. We believe that stock, especially sheep, will be in good condition by October."

W. H. King of Garfield county, Okla., writes under date of Aug. 6: "On account of drouth everything is burnt up. Corn is a complete failure. There are very few cattle left in this part of the country. Had a good rain last night."

H. G. Weare's first shipment to the South Omaha market this season was received Aug. 3, most of which was killing steers, cow and calves. Bulk of steers made $4.80@5.00, cows $3.40@3.50, with a three-load bunch of heifers at $4.20, and most calves $6.00.

Moffatt Bros. of Rich county, Utah, had a shipment of lambs and sheep on the South Omaha market Aug. 8. In this shipment were 667 lambs, averaging 69 lbs, that sold to packers at $6.60, extreme top, and a deck of ewes, averaging 102 lbs, at $3.85, also top.

Stephen Scott of Prowers county, Colo., writes under date of Aug. 5: "The summer has been very dry here. However, rain seems to be in sight and several showers have fallen in the vicinity recently. Dryland farming up to the present time has been a complete failure."

L. F. Miller of Garfield county, Okla., writes under date of Aug. 5: "It is raining hard now in this locality. It has been dry here this summer, dryer than since the opening of the strip. The rain is too late to help the corn any, yet there will be little corn here this year. Wheat was fair."

Monsess & Bente, the extensive and popular live stock firm of Pettis county, Mo., had a consignment of lambs and sheep at East St. Louis on Aug. 8, same being handled by our house. The lambs averaged 68 lbs and went at $6.75, ewes at $4.25 and the breeding ewes at $5.00, which prices were the tops for the respective classes.

Sheridan county, Wyo., shipments to the South Omaha market last week included some very good cattle. One car of the P. C. Watt feeders sold at $5.00, averaging 1,100 lbs, one car for F. G. S. Hesse, averaging 1,209 lbs, at $5.00, a part of a car of the Keeline steers at $5.25, averaging 1,291 lbs, and two cars of cows from Stanley & Williams of Weston county, Wyo., sold at $3.85@4.00.

H. A. Johnson, a prominent stockman of Natrona county, Wyo., was at South Omaha on Aug. 8 with five cars of cattle. In this consignment were two cars of steers, averaging 1,151 lbs, that made $5.15 and also about two cars of cows, averaging 1,035 lbs, $4.00. This is the highest price Mr. Johnson says he ever received for cow stuff, and the sales generally were quite satisfactory to him.

We desire to publish the names of the following parties who are well known and prominent in the live stock business and who honored our East St. Louis house with shipments of sheep and lambs recently: M. Mayfield, Cooper county, Mo.; Johnson & Duncan, Miller county, Mo.; Thornton & Gurley, Union county, Ill.; E. P. Meredith, Polk county, Mo.; D. S. Mayhew, Barry county, Mo.; G. T. Snider, Lewis county, Mo.; Young & Ledford, Adair county, Mo.

Wm. Schmele and Carl Anderson were on the South Omaha market Aug. 3 from Newell, S. D., with some very good cattle. Range is in very dry condition at this time, but owing to irrigation considerable hay will be put up. Mr. Schmele had a couple of cars of good feeders that sold at $5.45, averaging 1,100 lbs, while one car from A. Erickson of Newell, S. D., brought $5.55, averaging 1,069 lbs. Both prices were right at the top of the week's trading in feeding stock.

Below will be found the names of well known live stock dealers who recently sold cattle at satisfactory prices through our East St. Louis house: Clardy & Yaple, Nodaway county, Mo.; Elmas James, Page county, Ia.; Springer & Johnson, Monroe county, Ia.; Gladney & Mitchell, Lincoln county, Mo.; J. H. Patton, Gentry county, Mo.; W. M. Johnson, Christian county, Mo.; Siles & Coventon, Marion county, Ark.; W. C. Hughes, Jackson county, Mo.; E. L. Trescott, Lincoln county, Mo.; S. Spilman, Boone county, Mo.; Paul Hecht, Moniteau county, Mo.; Austin, Son & Harrison, Lewis county, Mo.; Chas. Harnell, White county, Ill.; W. H. Marose, Shannon county, Mo.

AGAIN WE ASK YOU

Why Not Play Safe?

This is an exceptional year, and calls for exceptional judgment and prudence in the selection of your commission firm. Be sure of at least two things: First, that you consign to a firm whose financial standing and responsibility is beyond any question. Second, that your stock is consigned to the firm that will get you most money for it.

These requirements are United in Clay, Robinson & Co.

Our firm, organized in 1886, has weathered all the storm and stress, droughts, depressions and panics of nearly a quarter-century. Failure, change, or reorganization are unknown in the history of Clay, Robinson & Co., who today stand as the largest, strongest and most efficient organization in the live stock commission business in the world.

If you are a shipper or prospective shipper you owe it to yourself to consider these unassailable facts, and to act upon them. Ask your banker about our financial responsibility, and ask any customer about our ability to realize top market value for all stock consigned to us.

Consider, also, our selling record for twenty-five years, our staff of over fifty of the best salesmen in the trade, at ten markets, our annual cash turn-over of upward of $75,000,000.00, and the thousands of unsolicited testimonials from pleased customers which you yourself have seen printed in these pages from week to week.

"It's Better to Ship to Clay, Robinson & Co. Than to Wish You Had."

American Royal of 1910.

The American Royal Live Stock Show of 1910 will be held at the Kansas City stock yards October 10-15. The purebred breeding and fat stock, the grade feeding and carlot classes for cattle breeds have about the classifications and prizes as usual; entries may be made with the superintendent as follows:

Hereford—C. R. Thomas, 1012 Baltimore avenue, Kansas City, Mo.

Short-horn — B. O. Cowan, 817 Exchange avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Galloway—R. W. Brown, 817 Exchange avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Aberdeen-Angus—Charles Gray, 817 Exchange avenue, Chicago, Ill.

In addition to the prizes offered by each association, premiums are offered by the show and the stock yards company, which make it possible for the best car of fat cattle and the best car of feeders to win $200 on first and $100 on second; if the grand championship in the fat cattle and feeders in carlots is won by Herefords, the owners get an additional $500; if by Galloways, an additional $150. It is expected that the Shorthorn and Angus associations will also provide such additional premiums in the carlot division.

Each year more attention is paid to these carlot classes, and the prizes grow, as do the entries and the opportunities for purchasers of feeding cattle. The range division is expected to continue in popularity, also.

N. H. Gentry is superintendent of the swine department. Entries are to be made as follows:

Berkshire—Frank S. Springer, Springfield, Ill.

Chester White—W. W. Waltmire, Raymore, Mo.

Duroc-Jersey—Dr. J. J. Boyd, Reeds, Mo.

Cotswold, Hampshire, Shropshire, Southdown, and Oxford classes are provided in the sheep department; all entries are to be made with Secretary Thompson. John W. Fulton, Helena, Mont., again has charge of the Angora goat department, and entries are to be made with him.

W. L. Nelson, Columbia, Mo, is superintendent of the students' judging contest, and receives entries therein.

Auction Sale at Northwestern Show.

The Northwestern Live Stock Show, which is to be held at the Union Stock Yards, South St. Paul, Nov. 15 to 18, is the only show in the Northwest conducted solely for market types of livestock. The exhibitor who feeds his animals for this show need not necessarily make his plans to be out on the circuit a great length of time, although the International Exposition at Chicago is held only a week later than the Northwestern Show, and the exhibitor can, if he so desires, enter his animals also in this show. The chief attraction in this type of show for the exhibitor lies in the fact that when the exhibition is over the animals, being market types may at once be sold on the show grounds, and he thereupon has the benefit of the education to be derived from seeing these animals sold for slaughter purposes. In this way he gains a particularly valuable knowledge of what types are best suited for the market.

In connection with the Northwestern Live Stock Show an auction will be held on the last day of the show, at which all the stock exhibited may be offered to the highest bidder. The bidding is often spirited at these sales, and the prices which the stock brought last year in every instance yielded a handsome return to the exhibitor. Of course it is impossible to forecast market conditions six months hence, but it is safe to say that animals which are fitted with care will naturally bring more money in the show division than animals in the market division, which have received less care and feed. In feeding live stock, as in anything else, it pays to do the work thoroughly and well, and the feeder who conscientiously performs his duty is practically sure of ample financial returns for his reward. Feeders should not lose sight of the fact that there is a market at South St. Paul for all the choice animals that may be fitted for this show.

Cost of Raising Hogs.

Every agricultural experiment station in the United States, Canada and Europe has conducted comprehensive experimentations in the cost of production of different classes of domestic animals. The demonstrations extend over different periods of animal growth, development and finish for food consumption, and the results achieved differ widely in different localities on the first cost of production. The ordinary farmer who has never studied the elements of food rations to understand the necessary proportions of protein and carbohydrates that enter into a balanced ration has yet succeeded in animal industry by feeding the grain and roughage which his ancestors employed to produce beef, pork and mutton.

The Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station has conducted extensive experimentations in raising hogs and has published bulletins which give the cost of production on corn, corn and milk, corn and shorts and corn and alfalfa. With corn at 30c per bushel, shorts $12.50 per ton, skim milk at 15c per cwt and alfalfa at $7.00 per ton it was demonstrated that the cost of the different methods of production of 100 lbs of live weight was as follows: Corn alone, $4 48; corn and skim milk, $3.97; corn and shorts, $3.53, and corn and alfalfa, $3.40. The experiment demonstrated that skim milk increased the value of corn 4c a bushel, wheat shorts 8c and alfalfa 9c per bushel. The combined ration proved more efficient in increasing weight than the different feeds fed separately.

Alfalfa appears to be the ideal food for hogs, and pigs on alfalfa pasture will make an average gain of 100 lbs in a season. The number of pigs that an acre will carry depends on the vigorous growth of the alfalfa and ranges from ten to twenty head. According to the Kansas Experiment Station work, it took one bushel of corn to produce 7.56 lbs of increased weight in the hogs, or 740 pounds of cornmeal to make 100 pounds gain in live weight.

At the Canadian Experiment Stations the results of 464 trials conducted with 2,303 pigs gave, for swine averaging 38 lbs, 100 lbs gain, 293 lbs of food. The lighter the pigs, the less food, proportionately, it took to make a pound of gain; the larger the animal the more food was necessary for maintenance. The experiments demonstrated that the more profitable production was in medium rather than extreme weight hogs.

Beef Cattle for Beef Purposes.

In speaking to the farmers of North Dakota from the "Better Farming" special train, Professor Richards said that many farmers continue to raise cattle for market for beef purposes from stock that do not possess any blood of the beef breed, and consequently they lack what is known as the beef type. It is impossible to produce beef economically from cattle that possess any considerable amount of this blood. To produce an animal of the beef type it is necessary to use the beef breeds of cattle, such as the Shorthorns, Herefords, Aberdeen-Angus and Galloway. Cattle of such breeding put on flesh much more rapidly and of a better quality. A beef animal could be described in a general way as a low down, compact, blocky animal. He must have a short, blocky head, a wide breast, a deep, wide chest, a broad back, a good spring of rib, heavy, full thighs. He must have a pliable, mellow skin, for this quality indicates a good fleshing tendency.

Note Time of Closing.

Intending exhibitors in the breeding and individual fat classes at the Inter-State Live Stock Show, to be held in St. Joseph the week of Sept. 26 to Oct. 1, should note that entries for these classes close on Aug. 31. The entries are coming in lively and there is every assurance already that in number and class the exhibit this year will excell anything the Inter-State has ever had.

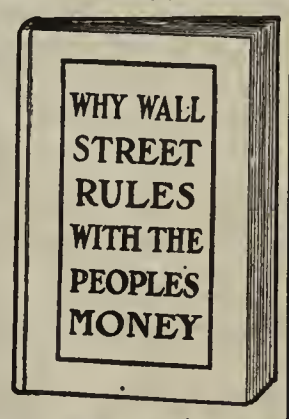
The First Electric Line to Tap the Wealth of Our Golden Northwest.

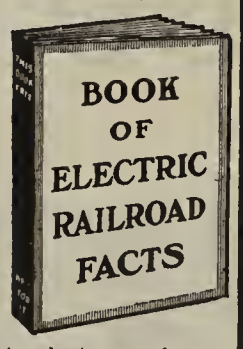
I Will Give You $1000 in the Voting "Common" Stock, Absolutely Free, in Addition to a 10 Share Investment in Our Preferred Stock, and I Believe this Free "Common" Stock Will Increase to Over $2000 Cash Value. Smaller Investments Will Receive Same Proportion of Free "Common" Stock.



I BELIEVE I can show you the best electric investment opportunity that ever came to your notice—I firmly believe it and I have backed up my belief by a $100,000 investment myself. I don't want you to say "yes" or "no" until you give me a chance to talk with you a little while

If you've got some money that you want to place where it will bring you big returns, or if you want to invest a little each month out of your income, give me your careful attention for a little while until I can lay before you an investment proposition that strikes me as a great big money maker for the people, and the indisputable facts bear me out in my judgment—I want you to have all the facts and then I believe you will want to put your money where it will work for you and you only.

Now, the first thing to do is to send you my big 40-page "Book of Electric Railroad Facts," which I'll mail you free and at the same time I also send you my other book called "Why Wall Street Rules With the People's Money." When you get these two books which contain all the facts about the Dan Patch Electric Railroad and about me, personally, then I'm willing for you to sit in the quiet of your home and pass judgment on the whole proposition.



I just want you to have these two free books that will open your eyes about banks and Wall Street and investments in general; and when you get these two books I'll take my chances on whether you ll say "Savage is wrong" or "Savage is right," and it won't interfere with our feelings or friendship if you never invest a dollar or never write me again. I offer you these two books free—I want to show you how you can make your money work and earn for you.

Now just a minute, while I give you a few facts. Perhaps nine out of ten readers of this paper know me already, but to those who do not, I want to say that I've been doing a national and international business out of Minneapolis for the past 22 years.

My business is now the largest of its kind in the world—made so by the continued patronage of nearly three million thinking, progressive, hard working farmers and stock-raisers. These people are my friends and customers—thousands have already invested in my new enterprise—some from your own State and from every State in the Union and every Province in Canada. I have built up a number of big enterprises here in the Northwest and now I'm building the biggest of them all. It is known as the People's Electric Line, owned and controlled by the people.

OUR SPLENDID 57-FOOT, ALL-STEEL CARS COMMENCED RUNNING IN JULY, 1910

Dan Patch Electric Railroad

The Dan Patch Electric Railroad runs from Minneapolis to Rochester, and back from Lakeville to St. Paul—130 miles.

I am not merely "thinking" of building this Railroad, I am really building it now—grading on the first section is completed and cars are running. We have started grading on the last division from Owatonna to Rochester.

I am working to make this the best constructed and biggest dividend-paying Electric Railroad in the country. High-class Electric Roads from New York to Spokane are great money-makers. I tell you all about it in my Big Book. This is the second time I have given the people a chance to share with me—my other new enterprise paid 10 per cent—the dividend checks were mailed out on June 1st.

Now is your chance to share with me in this enterprise—the greatest of them all I will give you $1,000 in voting stock in addition to a small investment. I want to send you the estimated net-profit statement, showing how your investment can rapidly increase in cash value. This information is contained in my Big Book of Electric Railroad Facts. I want you to have it even though you never invest a dollar, and I am especially anxious for you to have my new Book, "Why Wall Street Rules with the People's Money."

Don't be backward about sending for these books. I want you to have them and they won't cost you a cent—they are free—some of these Wall Street secrets will open your eyes. I want you to see how the people's money works for Wall Street. I want to show you how to make your money work for you and for no one else.

MAIL ME THE FREE COUPON

I am not drawing any salary and I have not received any free stock except with the preferred stock I bought. I cannot make any money except by the rapid increase in value of the "common" stock. I personally guarantee to protect your stock equally with my own and that it will make exactly the same per cent of profit. This is truly a people's road that is owned and controlled by the people.

I offer you the "Common" Stock Free instead of giving it to Wall Street. It is the "common" stock that has made the great railroad fortunes—"common" stock will make you rich if you carefully select it. Do you know of anything as good as the Dan Patch Electric Line?

If interested I want you to send this coupon today—SURE

M. W. Savage, President and Treasurer, Dan Patch Electric Line, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear Mr. Savage:—I don't know whether I'll invest any money or not, but would like to have you send me your two Books—without any obligation on my part—"Book of Electric Railroad Facts" and "Why Wall Street Rules With the People's Money."

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

A. T. Shull of Logan county, Colo., was on the Denver market with a car of hogs.

Merricks Bros. of Watonwan county, Minn., were represented on South St. Paul market with a mixed load.

Hartel & Co. of Barron county, Wis., prominent in shipping circles, had a car of cattle at South St. Paul.

We handled a mixed car of cattle and hogs at South St. Paul for Keitzman & Greenlie of Nelson county, N. D.

Von Dowgen & Son of Piatt county, Ill., write: "We were very well pleased with your sale of load of sheep and lambs."

Irvin Hobbs of Fayette county, Ill., writes: "Your returns received and was very well satisfied, quality of lambs considered."

Thomson Black, successful cattle owner of Converse county, Wyo., had a consignment of steers and cows on the South Omaha market.

Our South Omaha house handled seven cars of lambs for the Northern Sheep Co. of Natrona county, Wyo., Dan Rhoades being in charge.

Marion Edwards, cashier of the First National Bank of Rolette county, N. D., had a consignment of hogs on the South St. Paul market.

Besemer Bros. of Hillsdale county, Mich., write: "Received lambs and were well pleased with them. They are the right grade. Thank you."

Our South St. Joseph hog department made an excellent record on Aug. 1 by selling for E. B. Robinson of Cheyenne county, Kan., 62 hogs, averaging 213 lbs, at $8.15, which was 25c per cwt higher than any other hogs of their weight and 15c per cwt above any other sale of hogs averaging over 200 lbs.

Recent shipments to our South Omaha house included four cars from the Burbank Live Stock Co. and two from Wiker & Co., both of Converse county, Wyo.

Madden & Murray of Fremont county, Wyo., marketed 1,500 feeder yearling wethers at South Omaha on Aug. 2 and our house landed them at top price of $5.00.

J. Hogan of Saint Croix county, Wis., favored our South St. Paul house with stock and stated that conditions in his part of the country were very bad, with hardly no crops at all.

I. C. Miller represented Carbon county, Wyo., on the feeder sheep market at South Omaha on Aug. 2 with five doubles of wethers of 99 lbs average which we sold at top price of $3.85.

R. M. Rewson, manager of the Lexington Shipping Association, Dawson county, Neb., a daily shipper to the South Omaha market, had six cars of hogs to our house there Aug. 1 and 2.

Early shipments from Butte county, S. D., included consignments from our good friends, W. J. Dorset, E. C. Townsend, A. L. Knight, W. J. Kelley, R. White and P. J. O'Connor.

I. C. Miller of Carbon county, Wyo., had another shipment of four cars of feeding wethers at South Omaha Aug. 2 that averaged 102 lbs and were sold by our house at $3.95, the top.

Herman Holsten of Dodge county, Neb., writes: "There are no fat cattle left in this vicinity. Crop conditions are fair and rain is needed to push the corn crop. Hay is only a third of a crop."

Wyoming shipments to South Omaha recently included a consignment from Donahue Bros. of Laramie county, Wyo., who run a large number of cattle and are representative stockmen of that locality.

Albert Johnson of Fremont county, Wyo., was at South Omaha on Aug. 1 with five double decks of wethers and yearlings, we selling the killing wethers at $4.20, the feeding end at $3.80 and yearlings to feeder buyers at $4 75@4.95.

J. E. Higgins of the Higgins Sheep Co., Converse county, Wyo., writes our South Omaha house: "We received returns from sheep, and, as usual, you did fine. Thank you for your very efficient service."

J. F. Smith of Las Animas county, Colo., the Yampa Live Stock and Land Co. of Routt county, Colo., and Stover & Miller of Morgan county, Colo., marketed cattle through our Denver house last week.

On Aug. 1 I. C. Miller, an extensive cattle and sheep raiser of Carbon county, Wyo., had five double decks of feeding wethers on the South Omaha market that we sold at $3.85, averaging 99 lbs, extreme top.

On July 28 our Denver house handled for J. R. Porter & Sons of Dundy county, Neb., two loads of hogs. One load, averaging 207 lbs, sold at $8.45, top of the market. The other load, on the rough order, landed at $8.37½.

George E. Shermerhorn of Fillmore county, Minn., writes our South St. Paul house: "Received deck of wethers in good shape and I am well pleased with them. Will probably want a deck or two later if pastures improve."

Montana shipments were received by our South St. Paul house Aug. 1 from C. O. Donnell and Billings Live Stock and Feeding Co., Yellowstone county; C. A. Gunnette, Dawson county; N. T. Rogness and J. Dinsdale, Carbon county.

Adams & Ferguson, for a number of years in the cattle business in Converse county, Wyo., had two cars at South Omaha Aug. 2. In this shipment was a 1,400-lb steer that our house sold at $6.25, considerably above the average of the trade at that time.

Our South St. Joseph hog department was favored with a shipment from each of the following successful shippers and feeders: C. F. Weller, Holt county, Mo.; Wilkerson & Grable, Platte county, Mo.; E. P. Rhoades and Wm. Steeve of Page county, Ia.; Power Bros., Richardson county, Neb.; Schemmerhorn & White, DeKalb county, Mo.; G. W. Feil, Tremont county, Ia.; Mawhinney & H., Page county, Ia.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

J. J. Chambers of Champaign county, Ill., writes: "Ewes came through in good condition. Think I got a good bunch."

F. A. Brown, Jr., cashier of the Faith State Bank, Faith, S. D., writes: "Indications here are that almost all of the range stock will be shipped this fall."

H. Allison represented Lawrence county, Ill., on the Chicago lamb market Aug. 5 with 130 head of 58 lbs average which we sold at the top price of $7.15.

P. P. Klick, Todd county, Minn.: John Anderson, Wadena county, Minn.; F. W. Hale, Washington county, Minn., each favored our South St. Paul house with shipments.

Bennet Hunter of Williamson county, Tenn., writes our East St. Louis house: "Car of breeding ewes arrived in good condition and they are very satisfactory, being just what I wanted."

Poweshiek county, Ia., was represented on the Chicago lamb market Aug. 3 with 99 natives of 71 lbs average which made the top price of $7.10. They were marketed by E. L. Gillespie and sold by us.

W. H. McVay of Macon county, Mo., writes our South Omaha house: "Sheep arrived all right and look good to me. Thanks for your service. I am as well pleased as though I had been there myself."

James Dickie, president of the Big Horn Copper Mining and Developing Co., Big Horn county, Wyo., writes under date of July 31: "We are having some fine rains here just now, which are doing a world of good."

On Aug. 2 our South St. Joseph house sold for T J. Thornton of Oneida county, Idaho, 228 lambs, averaging 60 lbs, at $6.90, top for rangers, and also obtained $6.00 for his 54-lb feeding lambs and $5.00 for 90-lb yearlings.

D. B. Mayfield of Cooper county, Mo., had a single deck of mixed sheep and lambs at East St. Louis on Aug. 4. Our house sold the sheep at the top price of $4.25 and the lambs at $6.90, as high as local buyers there would pay."

We are pleased to make mention of the following who were among our South St. Paul patrons recently: A. S. Erwine and E. Sanders of Clay county, Minn.; F. W. McDougall of Nelson county, N. D.: J. D. Christianson of Montana.

Levi Forbis of Logan county, Ill., writes or South Omaha house: "I think the sheep a nice even bunch and I am well pleased with them. Thank you for your trouble. I think you did better than I could have done if I had been there."

S. S. Potter, cashier of the Iantha Missouri State Bank, writes our Kansas City house: "We are perfectly satisfied with the manner in which you handled our car of hogs and will do all we can to get you the future shipments from this point."

J. A. Estes, Ottertail county, Minn.; A. E. Dunn, Edmund county, S. D.; C. E. Peck, Polk county, Minn.; B. W. Andrews, Nelson county, N. D., and E. Kirk, Grand Forks county, N. D., were represented at South St. Paul with shipments of cattle.

M. A. Gauldin of Dyer county, Tenn., writes our Kansas City house: "Cattle you bought for me arrived in good condition. I am well pleased with the purchase. I could not have pleased myself any better. There were twenty or more farmers here when I unloaded and said this was the finest load of yearlings they ever saw."

The Donnell Sheep Co. of Carbon county, Wyo., obtained three tops in the sheep trade at Chicago on Aug. 3 through our firm when we sold their 650 wethers of 103 lbs average at $4.50 and 153 feeding wethers, averaging 97 lbs, at $4.25, both sales being the top for the respective classes. On the following day the above company had in another string of their sheep with which we topped the market at $4.60 and $4.25 for the killer wethers and feeder wethers respectively.

T. P. Maddox of Garfield county, Okla., wrote under date of Aug. 5: "We have had but one rain all summer. Yet wheat and oats are good, I don't see how they grew. Wheat went from 15 to 35 bushels per acre and oats 50 bushels. Alfalfa is standing still."

Chas. McGinnis, very prominent in the cattle business in Converse county, Wyo., had a few good steers on the South Omaha market Aug. 1 which we sold at $5. 20, averaging 1,181 lbs. Other shipments from there included two cars from F. W. Rimington, a regular patron of ours.

Madden & Murray, heavily engaged in sheep raising in Fremont county, Wyo., had at South Omaha on Aug. 1 nine double decks of wethers and yearlings. We landed 1,500 of the yearlings on feeder account at $5.00, a top figure, the killing wethers at $4.20 and the feeding end at $3.80.

It was Aug. 4 we handled at South St. Joseph a four-car shipment for C. H. Betty of Blaine county, Idaho, selling 600 head of 54-lb feeders at $6.00 and yearlings $5.10. Mr. Betty accompanied the shipment and expressed himself as decidedly well pleased with the prices and the way we handled his stock.

D. B. Mayfield of Cooper county, Mo., was represented on the East St. Louis market Aug. 5 with two mixed decks of sheep and lambs. Our house handled the shipments and sold part of the sheep on breeding account at $5.00 and the heavy end of the killers at $4.25, both prices being the top for the respective classes. The lambs averaged 68 lbs and brought $6.75.

Dr. C. E. Greenfield of Dupage county, Ill.: "Sheep came in excellent condition: There was plenty of hay in the car for food and bedding. You selected us a fine bunch of sheep and several farmers have admired them. After such kindness and careful attention as you gave us we were very careful to tell them that they came from Clay, Robinson & Co., an honest, reliable firm. Thank you for the extra trouble you went to in culling out the three and four-year-old ewes that you were not just satisfied with."

Two years ago	3.90	6.00	4.55	5.35	3.50	5.10

A total of 15,100 western range cattle arrived last week, compared with 4,500 previous week and 2,700 corresponding week last year. The week closed with beef steers 10@15c lower than previous week's finish. Top for week $6.70, obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co. for 58 head of the 1,372-lb Seiben Montanas, 20c per cwt higher than any other sale of the season. Bulk sales at $4.50@5.25. She stock largely at $2.75@4.25, with Clay, Robinson & Co. landing 84 head of the 1,075-lb Seiben Montana heifers at $5.55, top for season by 30c per cwt. Trading in stockers and feeders mostly at $3.50@4.50.

Around 5,000 rangers received at start of this week, against 7,500 Monday last week and 3,000 like day last year. It was generally a 10c higher deal for beef steers and 20@35c higher than low time last week. While there were not so many light weights of ordinary quality, most arrivals lacked good killing quality. Top was $6.00, paid for 187 head of 1,264-lb Montanas, with several big strings at $5.35@5.75. She stock generally strong to 10c higher. Heifers off a Montana reservation reached $5.20 and cows $5.00. Stockers and feeders 10c higher.

Marketing Tuesday was 5,000. Buyers showed beef steers of value above $5.50 good favor and paid steady prices for these, but they demanded and secured 10@15c concessions for such as had to go under $5.50. A six-load string of Montanas went at $6.50, and some other native Montanas $5.75, with Montana Texans at $5.40, about 50 loads in all selling at these prices. Among other sales was part of a load at $6.25, while several droves landed at $5.35@5.75. She stock sold 10c lower, with heifers up to $5.00 and cows at $3.50@4.25. Stockers and feeders strong sale. Receipts of western range cattle Wednesday 6,000. Beef steers were active sale at prices strong to 10c higher. Some prime beeves off of an Indian reservation in Montana sold up to $7.25, the highest price of the season. Cows and heifers went 10@15c lower. All price changes for stockers and feeders were upward.

*Obtained by Clay, Robinson & Co.

There was an excellent demand Thursday of last week and sheep and yearlings held a firm basis, while lambs advanced 15@25c. Washington lambs reached $7.15, best price of week, and feeders $6.55. Wyoming range wethers topped at $4.50 and feeders at $4.25, although most feeders went at $4.00@4.10. Montana feeding yearlings sold up to $5.45 It was generally a 15@25c lower deal for lambs on Friday and all price changes for sheep and yearlings tended towards a weaker basis. Fat lambs brought $6.75@7.00 and feeders $6.35@6.55. The sheep were Montanas and went on feeding account at $3.50@4.00. As compared with close of previous week lambs showed 25c advance and sheep were steady sale.

At the start of this week there were about 70 loads of rangers, the largest supply of the season thus far. Lambs were 10@15c lower and sheep mostly 10c off. Feeder buyers made a red hot market for both lambs and yearlings and paid prices strong to 10c higher. Fat lambs went at $6.65@6.75 and feeders at $6.50@6.65, with 307 head of 66-lb Idaho ewe lambs on breeding account up to $7.00. Feeding yearlings brought $5.15@5.50. Montana wethers went for slaughter at $4.15@4.25 and on feeding account at $4.00. Idaho ewes reached $4.15, with yearling breeding ewes at $5.75.

As far as packers purchases were concerned Tuesday, the market was down to season's low point. Supplies were burdensome and general trade in a bad way. In the main prices showed 10@15c loss. Rangers ran largely to lambs, Idaho alone sending in 43 loads. Great bulk of arrivals were in feeder flesh. Best lambs made $6.70 and feeders $6.60. Extra choice light weight yearlings went on feeding account at $5.55 and most wethers went back to the country at $3.75@4.00. While sheep held steady Wednesday, all price changes for lambs were downward. The quotable top was $6.65, but there were no real choice offerings available. We landed feeders up to $6.60

Feeder Sheep and Lambs.

Below will be found bulk sales of feeder sheep, yearlings and lambs this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Bulk Sheep.		Bulk Yearlings.		Bulk Lambs.
This week	$3.75@4.00		$5.25@5.50		$6.50@6.65
Last week	4.00	4.25	5.00	5.25	6.40	6.50

Two years ago	3.50	4.00	4.35	4.50	4.75	5.50

There has been a remarkable demand for feeding sheep and lambs this week. In spite of a liberal proportion included in total arrivals from the western range, little advantage was afforded buying interests. Monday trend of prices was upward, the Tuesday market was a little lower and Wednesday prices held steady. Top lambs went out at a cost of $6.65, yearlings $5.55, wethers $4.00 and ewes of a choice class would have cost $3.25. Washington ewe breeding lambs reached $7.00.

RANGE CATTLE AND SHEEP AT CHICAGO AND SOUTH OMAHA

SOUTH OMAHA MARKETS.

Range Cattle.

[Special telegram from Clay, Robinson & Co.]

South Omaha, August 10—Supplies of cattle last week were liberal, largely westerns of quite ordinary quality. The heaviest day's run of the week occurred Monday, when there was a drop of 10@15c on killers. The trade after then, however, was stronger, and closed with prices 10@15c above the opening of the week. Top grassers for the week sold at $6.00 Thursday, 65 head of Sandhill hay-feds, averaging 1,281 lbs, going at this figure. There was a better movement to stockers and feeders, and a good share of the advance of 25@40c during the two weeks fell to light and medium weights. Calves were received in liberal numbers, witn a resulting drop of 50@$1.00 in ten days. Numerous localities in the range district report rains, and the situation does not have the dark aspect of few weeks ago.

Market for both killing and feeding cattle was strong Tuesday.

Range Sheep.

Lambs made up a heavier supply of the total number of 51,000 sheep and lambs here last week, and trade closed up with a loss of 15@25c from early in the week. Sheep, although showing a little loss early in the week, closed 10@15c higher than previous week's finish.

Sheep and lambs Tuesday 15@25c lower than last week's close. Top lambs $6.60 and bulk good kinds $6.20@6.45. Best wethers $4.15. Bulk went to feeders at $4.75@5.00, with top at $5.10. Best ewes $3.85 and bulk $3.40@3.60. Top feeding lambs made $6.00 and bulk $6.75@6.90. We sold the Governor Brooks lambs from Wyoming at $6.55, yearlings $5.25, wethers $4 00, ewes $3.75 and feeding lambs $6.00, all of which were top prices.

BEEF STEERS

Range of prices and bulk sales of native beef steers this week, with comparisons, as compiled by CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT:

	Range.		Bulk.
This week	$4.75@	8.50	$5.80@	7.75
Previous week	4.50	8.50	5.60	7.60
Year ago	4.25	7.55	6.00	7.35
Two years ago	3.75	7.75	5.25	6.75

Thursday market of last week was strong to 10c higher. Demand from both packers and eastern shippers was good. One load of prime Nebraska Shorthorns, numbering 16 head and averaging 1,555 lbs, reached $8.50, best price of week. Demand fell off sharply Friday and prices declined mostly 10c. Best beeves offered were 20 head of 1,424 lbs average at $8.05. Price gain over close of previous week was anywhere from 40@75c. Good to choice grades caught most appreciation. The decreased run was accredited to timely rains over the corn belt and feeders' determination to hold back and give the market a chance to right itself. This was fortunate, as the beef demand was not of volume to afford outlet for big supplies.

At start of this week offerings of value above $6.00 went 10@15c higher, while those that had to go under $6.00 were weak to 10c lower sale. Strength in trade for better offerings was due to moderate supplies of these kinds and a continuation of a good demand from both local slaughterers and eastern shippers. Two loads of prime 1,506-lb offerings reached $8.50.

Market was in mean shape Tuesday. Bulk of total arrivals were rangers and buyers showed these best favor. Thus natives met a very dull trade and where offerings found outlet it was a 10c lower deal. Quality of arrivals was quite plain. Best offered were 19 head of 1,484 lbs average at $7.25. The market was in miserable shape Wednesday; in fact, it was semi-demoralized. Total run was 22,000 and demand from all sources was the most limited in many weeks. The result was a decline of 15@25c, offerings of good to prime classes showing mostly 25c loss. Top was $8.20. paid for 45 head of prime 1,539-lb beeves.

COWS AND HEIFERS.

Last week closed with all desirable grades showing 25c advance over previous week's finish. In spite of local buyers' favor for western rangers, outside demand was strong enough to offset this bearish feature. Receipts were relatively light, which was also in sellers' favor. Supply of thin she stock from the western ranges was so liberal that the lower grades of natives were no better sale. A fancy lot of heifers sold up to $7.25.

This week started out with moderate receipts and a good demand from all sources, which resulted in prices ruling strong to 10c higher.

Prices mostly weak to 10c lower Tuesday. Outside demand was limited and call from packers narrow. Prices were generally 10@15c lower Wednesday.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of cows and heifers:

BULLS.

At close of last week prices were no better than at finish of the previous week. Receipts were moderate and but few butcher grades were included, for which demand was best.

It was a steady to 10c higher deal at start of this week. Best call was for good butchers and weighty bolognas, these showing strength in prices.

While the early market was steady Tuesday, the close was 10c lower. Shipping outlet quite limited. Wednesday trade was mostly 10c lower.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of bulls:

Good to choice butcher bulls	$5 00 @	5 50
Fair to choice export bulls	4 75	5 50
Plain to medium butcher bulls	4 00	4 65
Good to choice heavy bologna bulls	3 85	4 15

CALVES.

There was no quotable change in prices at close of last week as compared with previous week's finish.

Supply was moderate at start of this week. Prices were not quotably changed. Demand was very indifferent for common and medium lots.

There was strong demand Tuesday and prices were boosted back to last week's closing basis. Run was moderate. Some prime grades sold up to $8.50. The market was mostly 25c lower Wednesday.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of calves:

Good to prime vealers	$7 75 @	8 50

At close of last week prices showed mostly 25c advance over previous week's finish. This was due to reduced marketing and a very good demand. Both native and western offerings met with a broad outlet.

Strong to 10c higher prices were paid at start of this week. There were fairly liberal supplies, but demand was equal to the occasion. Packers were strong competitors for anything that possessed decent killing quality.

There was sufficient demand to clear offerings Tuesday at steady prices. Best sellers were good quality strong weight steers and meanest the common little stock steers and heifers. The best kinds went steady to strong and others weak to 10c lower Wednesday.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for stocker and feeding cattle:

Two years ago	6.40 6.80	6.35 6.70	6.30 6.70

Barring a few sales of light weights, market Thursday last week was mostly 10c lower and late in the day concessions of 20c had to be made. From packers to good packing mixed it was a $7.60@8.00 trade, with good butchers to light weights at $8.25@8.40 and an assorted lot up to $8.95. On Friday offerings which went below $8.50 showed 15c decline and close was demoralized at prices 15@25c lower for heavy packing. Lights and mediums good enough to go above $8.50 were in a class by themselves. The nine-cent quotation was registered on pigs and lights. Packing stuff had to go at $7.60@7.75. It was mostly a 10@15c lower deal Saturday, $7.50@8.00 taking bulk, although $8 90 was recorded for fancy light. Heavy packing sold 40c lower than close of previous week, while choice light were a little higher.

Market was 10@20c higher at start of this week, with most sales at 15c advance. The nine-cent hog bobbed up again, assorted light making the price. There was quite a proportion of sows which had to go at $7.75@7.90. Considerable up-and-down mixed brought $8.00@8.30, according to quality and weight. Prime heavy sold at $8.10@8.20 and the 230 to 270-lb butchers $8.30@8.45, and the 200 to 210-lb butchers $8.75@8.80.

Packing trade Tuesday had a very bad close, being anywhere from 10@25c lower. Lights and mediums however, were strong to 10c higher, although pigs showed no advance. The 200-lb offerings got whatever boost was made, selling up to $8.95. A lot of packing offerings had to go at $7.60@7.75. Wednesday trade opened steady, but closed 15@20c lower on everything but packing grades. Top $9.00. Bulk light and choice heavy at $8.30@8.80 and packers $7.65@7.90.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of hogs:

Native Sheep and Lambs.

At close of last week prices for sheep and yearlings showed no quotable change from previous week's finish, while the market for lambs was 25c higher. At the close best fat ewes were on a $4.25 basis, although $4.40 had been paid high time in the week. Limit for wethers was $4.50 and for yearlings $5.50. Most decent to good lambs sold at $6.00@7.00, although at the finish latter price was stopping point for best, against $7.15 best time of a week. There were many sales of the plainer classes under $6.00 and a great many culls at $5.00@5.50.

At start of this week prices for sheep held steady, but lamps went 15@25c lower. Heaviest run of rangers of the season, along with a good supply of natives, proved the undoing of the trade. Bulk sheep were ewes and went at $4.00@4.25, with a mixed lot of fancy wethers and ewes up to $4.60. The practicable top for lambs was $6.75 and a spread of $6.00@6.50 gathered in bulk.

While sheep held about steady Tuesday, most lambs showed 15@25c decline. We landed offerings on the early market up to $6.75, but the limit later on was around $6.50. Most of the sheep, which were ewes, went at $4.00@4.25. Wednesday trade in sheep was steady but lambs showed 10@25c decline from early yesterday. There was no safe outlet for best lambs above $6.50.

Clay, Robinson & Co.'s revised quotations for all grades of native sheep and lambs:

Every Acre Made to Pay.

Japan has in its main islands, exclusive of Formosa and Karafuto, a population of 48,542,736, and the area of its cultivated fields is 21,321 square miles. This is 2,277 people to the square mile.

There are also maintained 2,000,000 cattle and horses, nearly all of which are laboring animals, giving a population of 142 people and 7 horses and cattle to each 40 acres of cultivated field.

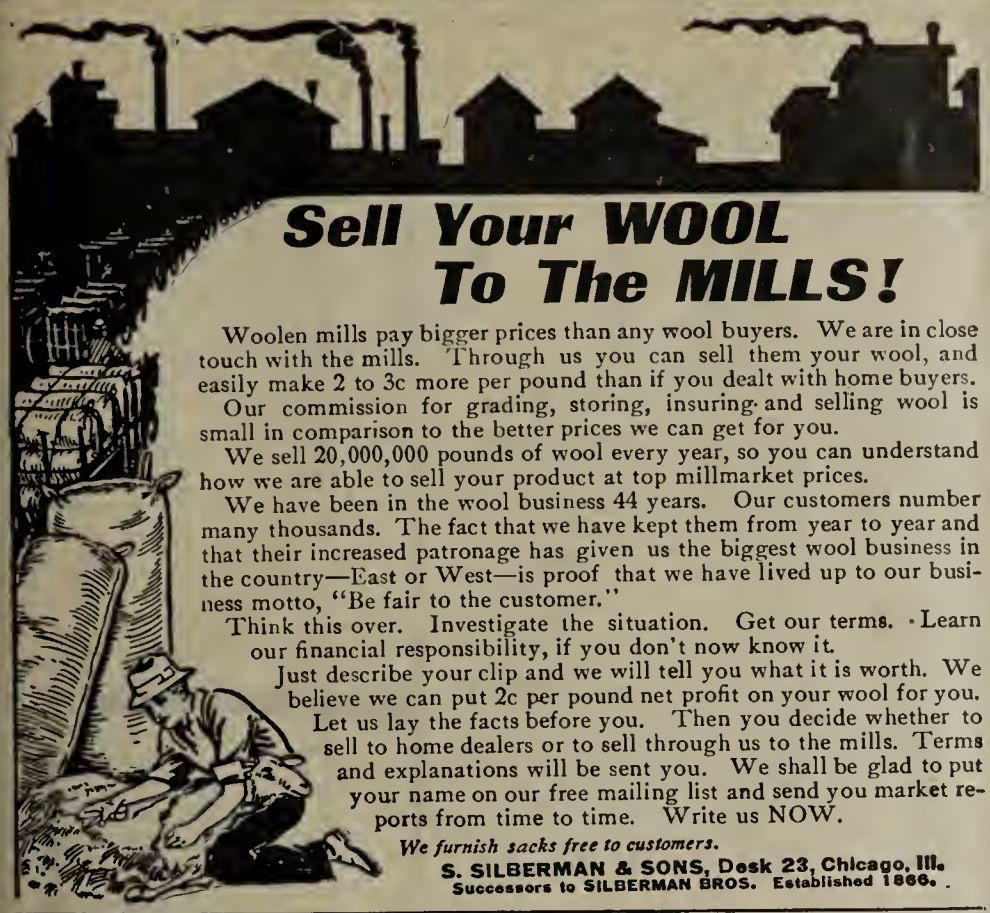
One old Japanese farmer told an American visitor that he owned and was cultivating fifteen mow of land, which is 2½ acres, and that besides his team—a cow and small donkey—he usually fed two pigs.

"This," writes the American in Farm and Fireside, "is at the rate of 192 people, 16 cows, 16 donkeys and 32 pigs on a 40-acre farm, and a population density of 3,072 people, 256 cows, 256 donkeys and 512 swine per square mile.

"As early as 1872 Japan established an agricultural college. For several years the soil survey of the main islands has been completed. The country has an admirable system of road maintenance in effective operation.

"She has many agricultural experiment stations, nine of which we visited, and the equipment at Tokio for soil investigation is superior to anything yet provided in this country. We have more pretentious buildings, but their resources are more largely used in providing appliances and men for rigid, accurate research work.

"I visited one of their dormitories at the agricultural college connected with an experimental station, and there young men are provided with room and board at $4.00 gold per month. From the two colleges of highest rank they had graduated in 1907 1,041 students; from their 139 A and B classes of agricultural schools of second rank they had graduated in 1906 12,371, and from the still lower grade of third rank there graduated in 1905 from the 2,450 supplementary agricultural schools 14,927.



Sell Your WOOL To The MILLS!

Woolen mills pay bigger prices than any wool buyers. We are in close touch with the mills. Through us you can sell them your wool, and easily make 2 to 3c more per pound than if you dealt with home buyers.

Our commission for grading, storing, insuring and selling wool is small in comparison to the better prices we can get for you.

We sell 20,000,000 pounds of wool every year, so you can understand how we are able to sell your product at top millmarket prices.

We have been in the wool business 44 years. Our customers number many thousands. The fact that we have kept them from year to year and that their increased patronage has given us the biggest wool business in the country—East or West—is proof that we have lived up to our business motto, "Be fair to the customer."

Think this over. Investigate the situation. Get our terms. Learn our financial responsibility, if you don't now know it.

Just describe your clip and we will tell you what it is worth. We believe we can put 2c per pound net profit on your wool for you. Let us lay the facts before you. Then you decide whether to sell to home dealers or to sell through us to the mills. Terms and explanations will be sent you. We shall be glad to put your name on our free mailing list and send you market reports from time to time. Write us NOW.

Gentlemen:-

Your letter with account of sale of car of lambs duly received. To say that I am greatly pleased with the sale is stating it mildly, I am delighted.

In fact the season's work from last September to the present month (June) has been admirable. You bought for me on the slumps and sold for me on the bulges.

This is the seventh year I have done business with you and I have neither complaints nor regrets, but on the contrary gratification and satisfaction. I will see you in September

Yours Truly

Clay, Robinson & Company's LIVE STOCK REPORT

Vol. 20 | Chicago, Friday, August 19, 1910 | No. 33

Professor John Craig is Dead.

Professor John A. Craig died Monday morning on his ranch near San Antonio, Tex., after a short illness. He had maintained the ranch where he succumbed for many years as one of the leading stock ranches of the Southwest. Professor Craig was justly known as the father of animal husbandry in the agricultural colleges of the country.

He was Canadian born and taught in the schools in Canada for some time after his graduation from the Agricultural college at Guelph, Canada. He came to Wisconsin in the early 90s, as professor of animal husbandry in the Agricultural college at Madison, where his splendid work in agricultural and experimental lines endeared him to a large circle of friends among students and stockmen. He later accepted a position as professor of animal husbandry in the Agricultural college at Ames, Iowa, where he worked with Professor Curtiss in organizing and developing the strongest animal husbandry course in the world. In 1900 he issued his famous book on judging live stock, which met with instant favor among stockmen and students, and which is still recognized as the strongest presentation of the fundamental principles of live stock judging that there is in existence. Declining health forced Professor Craig to resign his position at Ames and he was later elected editor of the Iowa Homestead, but his health would not permit him to remain in the north and he gave up his work with the Homestead and went to Texas. Not long after this he was elected professor of animal husbandry in the Agricultural College of Texas, where he served with distinction for several years, later accepting a position as dean and director of the Agricultural college in Oklahoma, which position he resigned only this last spring on account of his physical disabilities. No man in America was better known to college and live stock men than Professor John A. Craig, and his death brings sorrow to a very large circle of friends. No stronger character has been known to the live stock fraternity in the last twenty years.

Wyoming Range is Greening Up.

J. E. Spurlock, who looks after the cattle interests of Governor B. B. Brooks of Wyoming, brought in a good-sized shipment of spayed heifers and steers, being handled by our South Omaha house. Mr. Spurlock asserts that the range around Casper is in much better condition than it was six weeks ago. Recent rains have replenished water holes that were almost dry and grass is greening up, so that quite a few fat beeves will be included in later shipments.

Mr. Spurlock's employer, "The Governor," owns nine large ranches within a radius of twenty-five miles of Casper. Thousands of cattle and sheep are produced annually and every detail of the work has a definite niche in the system that embraces the whole. His excellency is a stickler for method and believes that mutton and beef growing are not industries surrounded by haphazard conditions, as many people imagine.

Of course, it is getting to be quite fashionable among eastern statesmen to take a fleeting whirl with Dame Nature in the corn or hay fields each summer. A strong suspicion exists that much of this rural activity is prompted by political reasons so that Wyoming's executive may safely be placed in a class by himself. Any lawmaker who is able to manage nine ranches year after year and make them yield profit has a deeper interest in outdoor life than the mere hankering to taste of the primitive, comments the Journal-Stockman.

One of Mr. Spurlock's friends, who wishes his name withheld, told a rather new story about the birth and growth of Casper during the early days. It seems that several new-comers had pitched tents on portions of the old Stroud ranch, over twenty miles distant from Casper's present location. They intended to make it a permanent settlement and christen it Casper. Joshua Stroud, who then claimed the land, did not approve of this arrangement and demanded rentals from the settlers. They refused to pay up and moved to the present site of Casper, where the town was located. Incidentally, Governor Brooks now owns what was then the Stroud ranch.

Death of William Benoist.

James R. Burr of the Matador Land and Cattle Co., White Horse, S. D., writes: "William Benoist, one of the best known and most highly respected stockmen on the Cheyenne Reservation, and owner of the W B Bar cattle and horses, died last week from the effects of an accident a few days previous. He was a prominent Mason and Oddfellow, and his funeral, which took place at the Cheyenne Agency on Sunday, was very largely attended by members of both orders. He leaves a widow and young family, for whom there is much sympathy felt in the district."

New Ruling at South Omaha.

Following comes from our South Omaha house: "The first of this month all railroads out of these Yards put in operation a rule that they would not accept dipped sheep for shipment unless they had been out of the dip for twenty-four hours. This is going to take a little longer time to get stock to customers and will also entail a little additional expense in the way of feed, but in the long run will no doubt be a benefit to the sheep."

Big Shipment from South Dakota.

The first large shipment of stock to be made from Belle Fourche, S. D., this season was recently, when 225 cars of cattle were sent to eastern markets. The shipping this season is a trifle early on account of the dry weather and lack of feed. For the next few weeks it is probable 200 to 300 cars of cattle will leave here each week. A few weeks ago it was estimated that practically all the cowmen would make an effort to clean up this season, as it looked as though there was a slim chance of getting their stock through the winter. But in the past week there has been some change and now a great many owners of cattle say they will hold over a share of their herds, although everything that is ready for market will be shipped. Some of the cattle going out are not in the best of flesh, while others that have had good range are in good condition. Sheepmen, who are being crowded by the homesteaders, will probably ship practically everything, as with the curtailing of the range and the short feed it will be almost an impossibility for sheep owners in some localities to carry their flocks through the winter.

Highest Yearling Cattle Sale in Several Weeks.

W. H. Brevoort & Son, one of Indiana's famous cattle feeding firms, were on Chicago market Aug. 17 with 42 head of 903-lb yearling steers from their feed lot near Vincennes, Ind. The cattle were sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. at $7.75, the highest price by 25c per cwt for yearlings in several weeks. They were horned and grade Herefords, with some Angus among them.

Should Stock Up Earlier This Year.

It may be good policy for feeders of cattle to lay in their supplies a little earlier than usual this year. The range cattle movement has started early and will probably reach its height sooner than in normal seasons. That there will be a large proportion of feeding cattle among the receipts from the ranges this year is evident. Dry weather has caused a shortage of grass, and it takes good grass to make fat cattle. Probably there will be a big cleanup of range stock this fall. Many ranchmen find themselves short of hay and will not winter as many cattle as usual on that account. To some extent this applies also to farmers.—National Stockman and Farmer.

Cullen-McPherson Shearing Plant, Solon, Wyoming.

No. 1 photo—This building is 100 feet wide by 10[illegible] feet long. It is made of corrugated iron and was erected in 1907. It is considered one of the best lamb shearing pens known. A total of 112,000 sheep were sheared in thirty days by forty men, who sheared more than 1,000,000 lbs of wool in this time.

No. 2 photo—This plan differs from any other shearing pen in this country, being of a circular variety. There are 20 double pens around the inside, diameter forty feet. They are 6½x12 feet and hold about 16 sheep and two shearers. In the center of the circle is the wool sacker. After the wool is tied it is thrown up to a platform about 9 feet high. From there it is put in the sacks and packed. The sacks are then sewed and dropped to a truck which is on the railroad track, taken a few feet and weighed on track scales, then taken out and piled in front of the building. Sheep are taken into the house from the outside two ways, through large double doors and one door on east and south of building. Sheep go to left of building to the far end, this being the main entrance to the runway to pens. They enter the runway at the extreme northwest corner and follow one another around the runway to the farthest northeast end where they are put in pens to be sheared. They are then led out into the second runway and are then in the branding corral.

No. 3 photo—Showing the dining room, kitchen and bunk room. Sleeping quarters for the men are upstairs. Also a small railroad track is shown running from the wool sacker to the Union Pacific Railroad, where wool is loaded in cars.

"The Sheep Herder's Grave."

Embar, Wyo., July 31, 1910.

Mr. John Clay,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:

I have just finished reading your story of the range, "The Sheep Herder's Grave," and I am writing you to tell you how very much pleased I am with it.

The story reveals a common weakness of our poor human natures. Withal, "English Joe" was a kindly man and a lover of nature, one to whom our heart would go out in adversity. Even his dumb canine friend must have been drawn to him through his kindness of heart, so much so that he could not survive the loss of his friend and master.

Nothing could be more pathetic than the manner in which he gave up his life; faithful to his trust to the last. Then the funeral! That must have been an impressive scene when poor Joe was laid away to rest in his narrow grave high up in that niche of rocks in "Wild Horse Canyon." All his earthly troubles ended at last. The picture of a band of sheep grazing in the mountains comes out splendid and true to life.

I am well acquainted with all the country you describe, having camped all over there in the early days from Rawlins to Lander. Bell Springs, Bohack's Ranch at Loss Soldier, Crook's Gap, Johnnie Signor's at Rongis, were camping places for us when we used to trail sheep to Rawlins for shipment to the eastern markets. I well remember when I came out to this country in 1886, coming up from Rawlins with a freight team of mules belonging to a Dutchman, Harry Burke. I helped him drive his saddle horses in the day time. I was bound for Diamond Springs to take charge of a band of sheep for John Lahoar. I left the freight team at Coffee's place on the Beaver. Signor ran the place after Coffee left. I never was very well acquainted down in the Split Rock country. My brother, David, and I used to run our sheep mostly in the Big Sandy country and around South Pass, Oregon Buttes, and the Seven Lake country. You would probably know all of the old timers around in that part, Jim Smith of South Pass, Pat McCann, Barney Bozeman, Abe Luman, etc.

Western Range Country Gets a Wetting Down.

B. C. Mossman of the Diamond A Cattle Co., LeBeau, S. D., one of the extensive cattle firms in the West, was here this week with several big shipments to Clay, Robinson & Co., all of which sold to his entire satisfaction, considering the adverse conditions surrounding the trade at this time. Mr. Mossman stated that they have had rains in the West recently and he was of the opinion that it was not too late to make winter feed. This will result, according to him, in a much smaller movement of thin young cattle from the western range than anticipated, hundreds of orders for cars having been cancelled.

West is in Good Condition.

A general summary of its annual crop and business reports prepared by the Continental and Commercial National Bank, Chicago, has been issued. The report has statements from counties in western states giving the views of bankers there as to the crop and business situation.

The summary in dealing with the business outlook finds that there is large improvement over conditions which were obtained earlier in the year. Country banks are declared to be in good condition and "the strain at one time apprehended has been averted by changed conditions."

The bankers say that while farmers have purchased automobiles they have paid for them mostly in cash and are able to buy automobiles if they desire them. Some counties report large speculation in farm lands, but the conclusions reached are that there is nothing in the situation to warrant undue apprehension.

Corn Needs Favorable Weather.

After 12,000 miles of travel in the last two months, O. K. Lyle makes the following estimates of yields for a Chicago Board of Trade firm:

	Wheat, bu.	Corn, bu.	Oats, bu.
Illinois.....	32,000,000	360,000,000	170,000,000
Iowa.....	8,000,000	295,000,000	148,000,000
Missouri.....	23,000,000	235,000,000	26,000,000
Kansas.....	70,000,000	160,000,000	40,000,000
Nebraska.....	40,000,000	185,000,000	65,000,000
Minnesota.....	73,000,000	65,000,000	65,000,000
North Dakota..	43,000,000	7,000,000	12,000,000
South Dakota..	36,000,000	70,000,000	35,000,000
Total.....	325,000,000	1,377,000,000	561,000,000
In 1909.....	438,415,000	1,351,222,000	566,192,000

All crops are well in security except corn, and that must have favorable weather for several weeks to reach the expressed conditions. Wheat and oats are above the average in weight, quality and condition. Winter wheat has been harvested from about 30,000,000 acres.

Rangemen Cancelling Many Car Orders.

Writing of the cattle trade at South Omaha, our house says: "Taken as whole the trade has been in very satisfactory shape. One of the principal roads into South Omaha from upper Wyoming reports the cancellation of about half of their car orders. Good rains throughout a good many sections of the West have apparently relieved the situation, and excessive runs no doubt have been checked for the present at least."

Handled 3,500 Cattle for One Firm.

On Aug. 10 our Denver house handled for the Colorado Stock Feeding Co. of Longmont, Colo., six cars of steers at prices which were entirely satisfactory to the owners. This is the windup of that company's feeding operations for the season, they having marketed through Clay, Robinson & Co. at Denver and the Missouri River markets upwards of 3,500 cattle, and throughout the prices realized for their stuff were eminently satisfactory.

Sufficiency of Hay in North Dakota.

Robert Neilson of Palermo, N. D., writes our South St. Paul house: "Calves I bought through you last May are doing very fine and getting fat. This season has been dryer than common, but we have had rains lately and the range is getting very good for stock. Wheat will be a poor crop, some fields not yielding the seed back and others from five to ten bushels per acre. Hay will be about half crop, but will be sufficient to feed all stock, some old hay standing over."

"Report" is Best and Reliable.

B. F. W. Thorp, assistant editor of the Farm and Fireside, Springfield, Ohio, writes: "We are revising our exchange list and I do not find your esteemed publication now coming to our Springfield office. We shall be glad to have a copy of the LIVE STOCK REPORT regularly in order that we may be constantly in touch with the best and most reliable report."

Had Good Rains in Texas.

J. L. Fuqua, president of First National Bank, Hereford, Tex., writes under recent date: "It has been the warmest summer we have had in many years. Glad to advise you we have had good rains recently and the outlook is better generally. Cattle seem to be doing fairly well and think most of them will get fat."

Inter-State Show Notes.

Are you going to the big show at St. Joseph, Mo.? It is the Inter-State Live Stock and Horse Show and will be held the week of Sept. 26 to Oct. 1. It is going to be the biggest show of the kind held west of Chicago this fall and there will be something doing night and day. Entries already show that there will be more stock of all kinds than have ever been there and it will be beneficial to you and your whole family to put in the entire week at the Inter State. There will be something doing all of the time, parades up town in the mornings, live stock judging from 10 to 3 o'clock, a short program by the Miller Brothers Wild West every afternoon, and then the big wild west performance every night.

Premium List is Off Press.

Our South St. Paul house writes us to the effect that the premium list for the fourth annual Northwestern Live Stock Show, to be held there Nov. 15 to 18, is off the press. It is ready for distribution and all parties who contemplate making entries in the show can secure entry blanks or any other information that they may desire by addressing Clay, Robinson & Co., Stock Yards, South St. Paul, Minn.

Make Crop Into Corn Hay.

The crop report figures should startle American farmers into action. Hay was short last year about 6,000,000 tons. It is now estimated to be short nearly 11,000,000 tons from the depleted crop of 1909. It is a calamitous condition unless farmers garner from the cornfields to meet the deficiency from the meadows.

Corn is the giant grass. American farmers never have learned that fact. It would be as foolish to drive a header through the timothy fields as it would be this year to pick the seeds from the corn fields and plow under the stalks. No time can be lost in making preparation to cut the corn and shred it into corn hay.

The silo farmer lies down to peaceful dreams. Neither hay shortage nor fear of frost affrights him. He has learned the lesson that is essential to the success of American agriculture in the future—the preservation and utilization of all the feeding value of the giant grass that men toil to bring to maturity. —Breeder's Gazette.

Coyote Proof Pasture Success in Colorado.

[illegible] sure of sheep range within a coyote-proof fence has been tried in Colorado by F. H. [illegible] Macos with highly satisfactory results. An experiment begun by the United States Department of Agriculture on the Wallowa National Forest, in Oregon, to discover whether sheep could be advantageously pastured within such an enclosure, led Mr. Taylor to give the new method a trial. The outcome is set forth in a letter to the Department, as follows:

"After reading the description of your coyote-proof fence in Oregon, I constructed a fence to enclose about 500 acres in the same manner. The fence was constructed during the fall of 1908, and in the springs of 1909 and 1910 one thousand head of ewes were lambed in this enclosure." In the vernacular of the herder, 100 per cent of the lambs were saved, that is, a lamb to each ewe, and one man did all the work. I think the per cent of the lambs would have been higher, but one animal, presumably a coyote, was inside when the fence was constructed. It was impossible to capture this animal, even with hounds. Some of the herders thought the animal was not a coyote, but since coyote tracks were found in several places I am of the opinion that it was. Whatever the animal was, it raised its young inside the enclosure."

Connecting his loss with the rapacity of this animal, Mr. Taylor says:

"A great many of the lambs were killed and a small hole eaten behind the foreleg and the remainder of the carcass was untouched. On the land outside of the enclosure it required the services of three men and a pack of hounds to care for one thousand ewes, and only 95 per cent of the lambs were saved. This per cent could not have been saved without the assistance of the hounds.

"I consider this fence a splendid investment, since it easily pays for itself in three years. On the other hand, it is often difficult and sometimes impossible to get men during the lambing season. For this reason the money value of the fence can hardly be estimated."

The Department of Agriculture entered upon the experiment of enclosing sheep range within a fence which would turn stock-destroying animals in the belief that this method would save forage as well as stock and wages. This belief has been fully justified by the results. The Oregon enclosure carried more sheep than an equal area of range of the same quality outside, produced a heavier lamb crop, heavier sheep, and more wool, and at the same time resulted in a better condition of the range itself. These advantages are due to the different behavior of sheep pastured within such an enclosure from that of sheep herded in the ordinary way.

When a band of sheep moves about in charge of a herder it must be kept from scattering much. As a result much of the forage is wasted through trampling. Within an enclosure, however, the sheep soon learn to spread out and shift for themselves. Under these conditions it is not to be wondered at that a given area supports more sheep, puts them in better condition, and suffers less wear and tear. The success of the new method, however, depends on the extermination of all dangerous animals within the enclosure, and on the maintenance of a fence which will keep off outside attacks.

Mr. Taylor believes that the Wallowa plan of construction is open to improvement in one particular. He advocates placing a barbed wire on the ground before the woven wire is unrolled, and stapling it down. "I expect to build another enclosure soon," his letter concludes, "and will have a barbed wire stretched around the enclosure and have the men place their foot on the wire and press it close to the ground and staple it. With the fence already constructed it seemed almost impossible to get the wire as close to the ground as is necessary on account of the uneven surface."

Big Prizes for Feeders.

The exhibitors in the carlot classes at the American Royal Live Stock Show, Kansas City, Oct. 10-15, 1910, have chances to win big money. Larger prizes than ever before have been offered, and more of them, which already have borne fruit in the increase in early prospects of entries. The feeders will be sold at auction. One of the new classes this year is for the best carload of fat cattle, any age or breed, for which prizes of $100 and $50 are offered. This is a championship class, for the carlots that have already won the good money in the departments of the various breeds.

The money piles up fast in the feeder carlot classes. The various breeding organizations offer good prizes for feeders in carlots. The American Royal gives first prize of $100 and second of $50 for championship to be contested for by winners in the breed classes for feeders, and the Kansas City Stock Yards Co. duplicates the Royal prizes. In addition, special prizes are also provided.

The Hereford association offers $50 for first prize, $30 second and $20 third for three ages of feeding steers or heifers; the winners in these classes compete for a Hereford sweepstakes prize of $75 for feeding Herefords, and $15 special prize and a silver cup also go to the sweepstakes winner; this winner contests for the American Royal championship in feeder carlots, $100 and $50 prizes, and the Kansas City Stock Yards premiums, $100 and $50; if a Hereford win the championship, the association will give $500 extra—a total of $840 to the winner of the carlot feeder grand championship if Hereford, and $240 to the winner of second place in the grand championship if Hereford.

The Shorthorn association gives three prizes, $60, $45 and $30, in three classes for Western feeders having had no grain, and $100 for the championship, which also carries a silver cup. The Shorthorn champion Western feeders are eligible to the grand championship, and may therefore win $200 as first or $100 as second—a total of $360 if the grand champion carlot of feeders is Shorthorn, and $260 if the Shorthorns are second.

The Galloway carlot feeder classes have prizes of $40, $30 and $20, in three classifications by age: $30 special and a silver cup to best carload of feeders any age; this best car may enter the grand championship feeder classes, and if it wins, the Galloway association will give $150 extra—a total of $420 if Galloways win the grand championship, and $170 if Galloways are second.

The Aberdeen-Angus association offers prizes of $40, $30 and $20, in three feeder classes, and a championship prize of $50; a silver cup and $15 special prize also go to the Angus champion carlot; if Angus feeders win the grand championship, they will get a total of $305; if second place, $205.

Recapitulation of grand championship feeder carlot winnings:

Hereford feeders may win $840 and cup for first, $240 for second.

Shorthorn feeders may win $360 and cup for first, $260 for second.

Galloway feeders may win $440 and cup for first, $170 for second.

Aberdeen-Angus feeders may win $305 and cup for first, $205 for second.

J. F. KNIGHT OF LE BEAU, S. D.

Mr. Knight, who for many years past has been identified with the live stock business in one capacity or another and is very favorably known among the western stockmen, acts as traveling live stock agent for the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway.

For Sale.

George D. Brown of Wild Rice, N. D., informs us that he has the following for sale, which he will dispose of in large or small amounts and give time if desired, or will exchange for anything that he can use: 130 tons of hay, 5,000 fence posts, 1,000 cords of wood, 15,000 feet of mixed lumber, 4 registered bulls and several truck horses and drivers.

Absorbine Among the Trainers.

Absorbine is a great favorite among the trainers and is in constant use by them. Whenever they need a remedy for getting the horse in condition for the race, relieving inlamation of any kind or treating bruised, swollen tendons, they apply Absorbine and the horse goes to the race sound. Harry Benedict of East Aurora, N. Y., reported: "I have used Absorbine for a long time: in fact, ever since it has been on the market, and I think it is one of the very best remedies known to veterinary service. It does all it claims to do." Write for descriptive pamphlet sent free. W. F. Young, P. D. F., 21 Temple Street, Springfield, Mass.

The Wonderful Kharkov Wheat.

The engraving shown herewith represents the above variety of wheat, which is a recently imported

Russian sort. It is this season for the first time introduced by the A. A. Berry Seed Co. of Clarinda, Iowa. This company have given it careful trial and in their experiments it has proven to be a phenomenal producer of the choicest sort of seed. This is now offered for sale to readers of this paper. It is a new variety of winter wheat, fully described in a circular, for which write to the A. A. Berry Seed Co., Clarinda, Iowa, whose advertisement appears on page 15 of this issue.

The House Sheep Co. had three cars of sheep from Natrona county, Wyo., to our South Omaha house Aug. 15, the feeding yearlings selling at $5.25 and feeding wethers at $4.10, top for the day.

E. T. Graham, the celebrated cattle feeder of Platte county, Neb., was on the South Omaha market Aug. 16 with two loads of 1,585-lb beef steers which our house sold at the top price of $7.75.

On Aug. 15 our South Omaha house sold feeding lambs for Rees & Denny of Beaverhead county, Mont., at $6.20, the first to bring the price since early in July. Mr. Rees accompanied the consignment and was well pleased.

Harry Markham, cashier of the Wheelers Savings Bank, Linn county, Mo., was a pleasant caller at our office this week and said that the supply of fat cattle and hogs to come from that county is very limited. They have had timely rains there and prospects are good for oats, corn and hay. Mr. Markham is of the opinion that this is a good time to stock up with both cattle and sheep, as prospects are favorable for a better market after the heavy liquidation on account of the drought ceases.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

R. Matthews, an old customer of our firm, was on the Denver market last week with a car of cows.

D. N. Hartt of Meagher county, Mont., telegraphs: "Obliged for telegram. Much pleased with sale."

Charles P. Guy of Barton county, Ohio, writes: "Car of lambs shipped from St. Joseph received in good shape."

George G. Rusk of Montgomery county, Ind., writes: "Deck of wethers arrived in good condition. Am well satisfied."

James Dickie of Bighorn county, Wyo., writes: "We are having some rains here just now and they are doing a world of good."

W. J. Hennesey of Saint Croix county, Wis., in conjunction with John Reddin of the same place, marketed a car of cattle at South St. Paul.

It was Aug. 11 that our Sioux City house topped the cattle market with 20 steers of 1,258 lbs average at $7.00 for C. E. Cameron of Buena Vista county, Ia.

Our Sioux City house topped the hog market 10c per cwt there Aug. 12 with 54 head, averaging 191 lbs, at $8.35 for Albert Le Breche of Union county, S. D.

Chas. P. Guy of Union county, Ohio, writes our South St. Joseph house: "Car of lambs received. Not a dead or crippled lamb in the lot. Very well satisfied."

Top for lambs at South St. Joseph last week was $6.80, secured by our house for a car of 69-lb natives shipped by Hoverson & Rittenhouse of Doniphan county, Kan.

The 447 head of 59-lb feeding lambs which made the top price of $6.65 at Chicago on Aug. 16 were sent in by F. H. Gooding of Blaine county, Idaho, and handled by us.

E. A. Rice of Linn county, Ia., writes our South St. Paul house: "Arrived home with load of sheep in good shape. They stood the trip fine. Thank you for courtesies shown me."

W. F. Schultz of Saint Charles county, Mo., was on the East St. Louis market Aug. 16 with a deck of goats which our house sold on feeding account at $3.00, this price being the top for goats.

G. Osness represented Chouteau county, Mont., on the Chicago sheep market Aug. 16 with a big string of wethers, all of which were handled by us. Included in the same were 800 head of 119 lbs average which we landed at the top price of $4.40.

Wm. French of New Mexico writes: "A very dry summer here up to July 30, but good rains since then and prospects for grass are very good now. Cattle are in much better shape than one might expect for the season and expect they will be fat by late fall."

On Aug. 11 our South Omaha house handled five cars of lambs for R. Gilchrist of Fremont county, Idaho. The fat end went to killers at $6.40, averaging 69 lbs, the top, and the feeding end, averaged 58 lbs, made $6.10, top for several weeks for feeders.

B. F. Wicker was on the South Omaha market Aug. 9 from Fond Du Lac county, Wyo., with a double deck of yearlings and ewes. In this shipment were about a double of yearlings that went to the feeder buyers at $5.10, averaging 66 lbs, extreme top for feeder yearlings.

On Aug. 9 our South Omaha house handled a nine-car shipment of yearlings and ewes for Odmund Josendal of Natrona county, Wyo., the yearlings selling at $5.05 to feeders, top end of the ewes, averaging 89 lbs, at $3.75, top of the day's trade, and feeding end at $3.25. Mr. Josendal was extremely well pleased with the sale and stated prices were stronger than he really expected.

W. T. Williams of Mitchell county, Kan., writes under date of Aug. 8: "Good rains last week here will make good half corn crop and will make good pasture. There was not enough to make good stock water. A good hay crop, all being shipped out. Cattle are getting scarce and more are on feed."

A. Spelts of Garfield county, Neb., was at South Omaha on Aug. 11 looking after the shipment of four cars of cattle our house sold at $7.40, averaging 1,299 lbs. This price was top for the day. These cattle had been on feed only about five months, and made the very satisfactory gain of 400 lbs. Mr. Spelts was well pleased with results.

M. J. Shearn, of the prominent farming and feeding firm of M. J. Shearn & Charles E. Shearn, Grundy county, Ia., was on the Chicago market Monday with a load of hogs of their own feeding. Mr. Shearn stated that this was their initial shipment to Clay, Robinson & Co. and he was delighted with the handling and selling of the hogs, as well as the treatment given him.

A. T. McMillan of Logan county, Okla., writes under date of Aug. 7: "Wheat and oats good, but dry weather has cut corn to probably one fourth crop, pasture and hay in proportion. In the past week have had good rains, which relieved stockmen and promises plenty of winter forage for cattle. There will not be any cattle fed in this section except at the oil mill at Guthrie."

CATTLE FEED LOTS OF A. E. ALLEN, HICKSVILLE, OHIO.

The cattle shown in this photo were bought by Clay, Robinson & Co. on the Chicago market at $4.70. They were Herefords and Shorthorns and averaged 900 lbs. They sold straight at $8.00, tipping the beam at 1,370 lbs. There were 70 head of hogs which followed these cattle and when sold at $9.00 they averaged 215 lbs. Mr. Allen has been feeding only about two years, but the good record that he has made is proof sufficient of his ability for preparing either cattle or hogs for the shambles. He owns and farms 240 acres of land, which he would not sell for $150 per acre. This was Mr. Allen's first experience with Clay, Robinson & Co., and he was more than delighted with the results. At the left in the picture is his son, Thomas Allen.

E. W. Puterbaugh of Carroll county, Ill., was the owner and we the sellers of the 77 native lambs of 84 lbs average which brought the top price of $6.75 on the Chicago market Aug. 9. On the later trade a similar class of lambs had to go at $6.50. On the same day we also sold for J. B. Parish of Christian county, Ill., 62 head of 75 lbs average at the same figure.

Mr. Miller, of the sheep firm of Brooks & Miller of Natrona county, Wyo., was at South Omaha Aug. 9 looking after a consignment of ewes and lambs. One load of the lambs sold to the feeder buyers at $6.00, averaging 55 lbs, top for this class, and the balance to the packers at $6.55, averaging 64 lbs, also top, one load of ewes, averaging 104 lbs, at $3.75, extreme top. On the same day Governor B. B. Brooks had in a shipment of lambs, the feeder end, averaging 52 lbs, selling at $6.00, top for the day, and 622 killing lambs at $6.40, averaging 57 lbs.

J. P. Mansfield, secretary and general manager of the Mansfield Land and Cattle Co., Grant county, N. M., writes: "Out here the grass is fine and cattle are doing well. Calf crop was away above an average. The loss among matured cattle was light with the exception of a few localities. Take it all around, this year has been all right. I receive the REPORT all the time and it is O.K."

William Lasswell, one of Missouri's leading farmers and feeders, with headquarters in Lewis county, was on the market last week with two loads of home-grown and home-picked Shorthorn and Hereford cattle which we landed at a satisfactory price, in view of the fact that they were on a semi-demoralized trade. Besides the cattle carried too big weight, which was decidedly against their sale. They sold at a margin of $3.65 over first cost.

C. H. Betty of Blaine county, Idaho, was again represented Aug. 8 on South St. Joseph market with a two-car shipment of sheep, accompanied by his son, Marion. We secured $5.10 for the killing yearlings and $4.10 for wethers and ewes mixed. In reporting Mr. Betty's previous consignment of Aug. 4, our South St. Joseph house made an error in stating that his lambs sold at $6.00. The item should have stated that 600 head of 54-lb lambs sold at $6.85. 232 feeders at $6.00 and the yearlings at $5.10.

The following parties honored our East St. Louis house with shipments of sheep and lambs: H. H. Taylor and Monsess & Bente of Pettis county, Mo.; H. L. Burford, Shelby county, Mo.; Sefton & Sapp, Fayette county, Ill.; Caleb Baird, Clark county, Ill.; S. E. Oglesby, Pettis county, Mo.: M. Mayfield, Cooper county, Mo.; J. W. King, Marion county, Mo.; Douglas & Farmer, Gibson county, Ind.; R. H. Utley, Johnson county, Mo.; C. G. Robinson, Randolph county, Mo.; J. F. Farris, Crawford county, Mo.

Our East St. Louis house had the pleasure of handling shipments for the following prominent dealers in cattle: M. Mayfield, Cooper county, Mo.: Ed. Freeze, Dade county, Mo.: M. P. Kidd, Pettis county, Mo.; Stroud & Roff, Pontotoc county, Okla.; E. F. Baskett, Gentry county, Mo.: H. Gatzemier, Macon county, Mo.; Wigginston Bros., LeFlore county, Okla.; W. R. Davis, Schuyler county, Ill.; Young & Ledford, Adair county, Mo.: J. F. Alsup, Massac county, Ill.; M. L. Givens, Wayne county, Miss.

We are pleased to make mention of the following who were among our patrons at South St. Paul: A. J. Kimball, Rosebud county, Mont.: J. A. Estes, Ottertail county, Minn.; J. E. Parr, Marshall county, Minn.; C. Johnson, Barnes county, N. D.; N. W. Hawkinson, Towner county, N. D.: J. E. McDougall and L. E. Heaton, Burleigh county, N. D.: Marion Edwards, Rollette county, N. D.; G. K. Liuhdal, Benson county, N. D.; H. E. Feltheim, Mercer county, N. D.; Ole Swenson, Cass county, N. D.; Kaspner & Greenlie, Nelson county, N. D.

The following prominent feeders or shippers had hogs to our East St. Louis house: A. H. Higgins, Cedar county, Neb.; T. D. White and Franken & Belt of Carroll county, Mo.; J. W. Miller, Hamilton county, Neb.; Howard Yaeger and Sidney McFadden of Pike county, Ill.; J. W. King, Marion county, Mo.; S. P. Priestly, Henry county, Mo.; E. P. Harned and Joe Finley of Cooper county, Mo.; Irvine & Duncan, Pike county, Mo.; R. H. Turner, Cass county, Ill.; R. J. Offitt and C. W. Erisman of Audrian county, Mo.; Monusier & Sons, Hancock county, Ill.; Sims & Smith, Cooper county, Mo.: G. H. Swaney, Nodaway county, Mo.; F. M. Manifold, Page county, Ia.; Thos. Dodds, Schuyler county, Ill.: Mark Paire, Greene county, Ill.; Oswald Bros., Cooper county, Mo.; H. L. Corbin, Lafayette county, Mo.; H. P. George, Caldwell county, Mo.: W. R. Hinton, Callaway county, Mo.; C. Brockway, Henry county, Mo.; J. M. Cox & Son and R. J. Hillis, Hamilton county, Neb.; Nunnely & Sherlock, Nodaway county, Mo.; G. W. Lowe, Cooper county, Mo.; Cobb & Cox, Barton county, Mo.: H. Ager, Howard county, Neb.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

Mac Best of Kiowa county, Colo., writes: "We have had good rains lately."

C. M. Wheeler, a very extensive shipper of Hamilton county, Neb., had hogs at South Omaha.

H. E. Hanson of Grand Forks county, N. D., was on the South St. Paul market with a mixed shipment.

Guiser Bros., prominent farmers and stockmen of Pierce county, Wis., had a car of cattle at South St. Paul.

I. A. Braden of Deaf Smith county, Tex., writes: "Have had good rains here and lambs are well grown."

Judge W. W. Bogel of Presidio county, Tex., writes: "It is dry here and the drought covers a large country."

J. A. Green of Yellowstone county, Mont., writes: "Our ranges are short, being almost burned up. Many of us will have to feed."

J. C. Hinderlider of Jackson county, Ind., writes: "I wish to thank you for the attention you gave my load of cattle and prompt remittance."

Adam Scott, Jr., of Pottawatomie county, Kan., writes our Kansas City house: "I was well pleased with the sheep. They have done fine."

J. Retter of Ottertail county, Minn., and J. N. Josephson of Washington county, Minn., were represented at South St. Paul with shipments.

Chas. E. Dutcher of Scott county, Ia., writes our South St. Joseph house: "Lambs arrived in good shape and am well pleased with them. Thank you."

R. Hudson of Luna county, N. M., writes: "It is very dry in this vicinity, no rain having fallen this season. We will have a poor season here for cattle."

C. T. Thero of Cheyenne county, Colo., writes: "Since July 28 we have had about 4 inches of rain, water holes all filled, grass growing fine and cattle doing well."

Palmer & Meeker of Lincoln county, Okla., write our Kansas City house: "We are very well-pleased and satisfied with the sale and manner of handling our shipment."

Haven Hubbard of St. Joseph county, Ind., writes: "Yearling ewes came through all right and they are a fine lot. Thank you for your care in making so good a selection."

The load of 70-lb lambs, which brought the top price of $6.40 at East St. Louis on Aug. 11, were marketed by R. H. Utely of Johnson county, Mo., and sold by our house.

G. T. Cline of Montezuma county, Colo., writes: "Crops here are good and stockmen report cattle and sheep never better; in fact, they will be in fine shape at shipping time."

The Merchants Live Stock Co. of Boyd county, Neb., one of the largest shipping associations in that state, were represented on the South Omaha market several times the past week.

S. Mortimore of Converse county, Wyo., for twenty-five years a resident of that state, was on the South Omaha market with two cars of cattle which sold at very satisfactory prices.

F. R. Hunt, son of the widely-known farmer and feeder, Charles Hunt, and W. E. Wisslen, cashier of the Loan and Trust Co., were in from Cass county, Ia., and paid our office a pleasant visit.

W. J. Sims of Delaware county, Ind., writes: "Lambs ordered by S. C. Rinker came in good shape. I got half of them. I want to thank you for your prompt attention and kind treatment."

Fred Catchpole of Archuleta county, Colo., writes: "Crops are good around here and cattle are fat. There will be a good many steers to sell, but she stuff will be short of last year's crop."

C. F. Jackson of Hardeman county, Tex., writes: "Our summer has been hot and dry, grass is short and there is going to be a shortage of both grass and water if a general rain does not come soon."

W. H. Johnson, Wadena county, Minn.; Thompson & Sons, Todd county, Minn.; Fred Schulte and M. Burns of Pierce county, Wis., all prominent in shipping circles, had stock at South St. Paul.

The Tolland Co. of Converse county, Wyo., had their initial shipment of cattle this year on the South Omaha market Aug. 9, all being cow stuff and selling mostly at $3.70, averaging 881 lbs.

Henry Voss, Jr., of Rio Grande county, Colo., writes: "We have had a normal year, considering everything, and think stock will be in the same condition here this fall as they were last season."

W. E. Eggers was on the South Omaha market from Crawford county, Ia., on Aug. 11 with a small bunch of native lambs that we sold at $7.00, averaging 96 lbs, top for their class in several weeks.

It was Aug. 11 our South Omaha house handled two cars of native sheep and lambs for Shannon & Garrett of Page county, Ia. In this shipment were 100 lambs, averaging 74 lbs, that we sold at $6.50.

PERRY REEDER OF FORT COLLINS, COLO.

Mr. Reeder is one of Colorado's famous farmers and feeders. He migrated from Illinois to that state 23 years ago. He farms 160 acres of land and produces some of the finest lambs that reach the Chicago and River markets. He has been feeding fourteen years and of thirteen of them he has consigned all of his shipments to Clay, Robinson & Co. with the exception of one. We are proud to number Mr. Reeder as one of our staunchest friends.

Henry Sieben, president of the Sieben Live Stock Co., Lewis and Clark counties, Mont., writes: "I was well pleased with the sale of my cattle. I was somewhat uneasy on account of the great rush."

S. Buseick of Grant county, Ore., writes under date of Aug. 4: "Range conditions are bad in the mountains. We have had the worst drought in many years, having had no rain to speak of since April."

A. G. Fluke, Kiowa county, Colo., writes under date of Aug. 6: "We have had it very dry until the last ten days. Now there is plenty grass and water all over the range and cattle are sure to do fine from now on."

Chas. Nelson, a prominent stockman and farmer, was at South Omaha on Aug. 10 with eight cars of good steers from Knox county, Neb., that averaged 1,416 lbs and were sold by us at $7.75, top there for several days.

J. B. Insley of Pottawatomie county, Kan., writes our Kansas City house: "I am pleased to say I was always satisfied with your business methods. You are entitled to the high standing which you occupy in the business world."

C. S. Brown of Genesee county, N. Y., writes: "There are two ends to this deal—play fair and they are both yours. I am enclosing slip of single deck of sheep you purchased for me last year, which gave excellent satisfaction."

Ross R. Mattis of Champaign county, Ill., writes: "I expect to buy 10 cars and possibly 12 more later if satisfactory. Last year I gave you this kind of an order and you sent me a fine lot of lambs, and results were very satifsactory."

Jesse S. Moore of Clay county, Neb., writes our South St. Joseph house: "The two-and-one-half-inch rain that we had on Aug. 2 makes a good average corn crop almost sure, as our corn was practically not hurt at all by the drought."

C. Gordon-Cummings of Fremont county, Tex., writes: "We have had some fine rains lately and grass is fine. Wheat will average about five bushels. Kaffir, maize and other feed stuff will be good if we get a little more rain when we need it."

Kellogg & George of Yavapai county, Ariz., write under date of Aug. 10: "The summer has been very warm and dry, but good rains in the past week have put the range in good condition. Cattle are doing well but are high, range beef being hard to get."

Wm. VanBruggen of Colfax county, N. M., writes: "Our summer has been extremely dry and hot, but the cattle are looking better than could be expected. We had some very nice rains recently and grass is getting good and cattle will soon fatten up."

Geo. W. Witt represented Greene county, Ill., on the Chicago cattle market last week with five loads, most of which were of his own feeding. We handled the cattle to his entire satisfaction, considering the wretched condition of the market. Mr. Witt has shipped to us for ten years and, using his own words, "always did excellent work." Mr. Witt it well known in farming and feeding circles and associated with him are his two sons, Fred T. and William P. Witt.

A. C. Russell, prominent dealer in cattle, sheep and hogs of Cass county, N. D., writes under date of Aug. 8: "It is very dry in this section. There are no fat cattle to speak of this side of the Missouri River. Hay is going to be very scarce all over this western country and there will have to be thousands of cattle shipped out that ought not to be. However, owners are still holding them at about what they would bring on the market. Please find enclosed 50c to renew my subscription to your most valuable REPORT, which I think the most correct report printed and is one that we can depend upon."

It was the pleasure of our East St. Louis house to handle shipments of hogs for the following parties who are prominent either in feeding or shipping circles: J. M. Mayfield, Cooper county, Mo.; R. W. Hume, Saline county, Mo.; R. H. Garrett, Henry county, Mo.; J. W. King, Marion county, Mo.; H. L. Bufford, Shelby county, Mo.; O. M. Devine, Dade county, Mo.; W. P. Aull, Lafayette county, Mo.; E. P. Harned, Cooper county, Mo.; Louis Becker, Greene county, Ill.; J. T. Berry, Edgar county, Ill.; T. D. Mourning, Greene county, Ill.; E. F. Henderson, Missouri; G. H. Conn, Missouri; Leslie Bean, Missouri; Smith & Co., Linn county, Mo.; Ben Perry and G. D. Woodward, Gentry county, Mo.; T. Winnell, Nodaway county, Mo.; Johnson & Duncan, Miller county, Mo.; M. D. Kelly, Greene county, Mo.; Jenkins & Bedenhamer, Webster county, Mo.; C. R. Noble, Wayne county, Ia.; R. H. Garrett and C. Brockway of Henry county, Mo.; Irvine & Duncan, Pike county, Mo.; Minnis & Goodson, Carroll county, Mo.; R. E. Coulter, Illinois; George Wilke, Illinois; Austin, Son & Harrison, Lewis county, Mo; Sims & Smith, Cooper county, Mo.; George N. Crocket, Caldwell county, Mo.

Total marketing of western range cattle last week 15.000, against 15,100 the previous week and 9,000 corresponding week last year. The week closed with all offerings 10@15c higher than close of previous week. One load of prime 1,542-lb Montanas reached $7.25, top for season, and a few others sold at $6.00@6.70, but it was largely a $5.00@6.00 market for beef steers. The common light feeders went down below $4.00. Bulk cows and heifers sold at $3.40@4.15, with some good cows and heifers at $4.25@4.75, while one drove of Montana heifers were SOLD BY US UP TO $5.55. She stock went 10@15c lower for the week, with stockers and feeders displaying that much advance.

This week started out with a run of 6,500, compared with 5,000 like day last week and 2,500 one year ago. Best grades of beef steers sold readily at firm prices and other kinds fully steady. A STRING OF 105 MONTANAS OF AROUND 1,275 LBS AVERAGE WERE LANDED BY US AT THE TOP PRICE OF $6.50. Among our other sales were: Almost a load of the J. L. Davis 1,213-lb dehorned steers from Montana at $6.00; twelve cars of the Taintor & St. John Wyoming double-wintered Texas steers of 1,083 lbs average at $5.35; 192 of the Diamond A Cattle Co. 1,163-lb double-wintered steers from South Dakota at $5.30 and a second cut at $4.85. Bulk of arrivals were Montanas and Dakotas of a medium class, with some from Wyoming. Cows and heifers sold steady. WE TOPPED THE MARKET WITH MONTANA HEIFERS AT $5.50. Stockers and feeders held steady.

Receipts Tuesday were reduced to the small total of 1,500. Beef steer trade was active at prices strong to 10c higher. South Dakota beeves numbering 18 head and averaging 1,324 lbs, topped the trade at $6.50. Our sales included 86 of the Diamond A Cattle Co. 1,170-lb South Dakota-Texans at $5.40, with the second cut of 183 head, averaging 1,170 lbs, at $5.00. Cows and heifers sold fully steady. Market for stockers and feeders was firm.

The Wednesday total was estimated early at 5,000, but there were only about 3,500 on the market. Trade in beef steers was brisk and prices 10@15c higher. Twelve head of the very choice Dana Wyomings reached $7.00. Cows and heifers went 10c higher. There was an excellent demand for stockers and feeders at 25c advance over last week's close.

It was another sellers' market in feeding sheep and lambs. An excellent demand prevailed, which, coupled with a decrease in supplies, rendered the trade very active the first half of the week at prices strong to higher. Additional rains in the western range country may cut marketing some. On the other hand for the same cause the outlet gives no promise of narrowing. Bulk of the week's trading was in lambs at $6.50@6.65 and wethers at $3.90@4.10. Yearlings went out at a cost of $5.60, a new high price this season. Breeding ewes continued in good call at the best prices of the season.

SOUTH OMAHA MARKETS.

Range Cattle.

[Special telegram from Clay, Robinson & Co.]

South Omaha, Neb., Aug. 16—Supplies of cattle were moderate last week. General quality was better, with more steers and cows and a smaller percentage of younger cattle. There was good inquiry for beef steers and prices advanced 15@20c. Top steers brought $5.70, paid for good Montanas averaging around 1,400 lbs. Heavy fleshy feeders from the Sandhills of Nebraska sold up to $5.65, averaging around 1,350 lbs. Stockers and feeders gained 15@20c. In spite of a large number of cows and heifers, trade was fairly active and satisfactory. Choice Sandhill heifers brought $4.85, averaging 1,115 lbs.

In spite of the liberal run Monday and Tuesday of this week, both beef steers and she stock held steady, while feeders showed a strong range. Top beeves $6.75, two cars of Wyomings of 1,350 lbs average going at the price. Best feeders made $5.75.

Receipts Thursday last week 7,386. Prices were steady to 10c higher, the better grades showing the strength. Top $7.90, paid for 32 head of 1,495-lbs average. Friday supply 2,479. About half of the offerings were Texans, bulk of which came direct to packers. As compared with the close of previous week prices were 25@35c lower, the good kinds bearing the brunt of the decline.

Marketing at the start of this week 30,099. Good to choice grades sold steady in most cases, due to relative scarcity, but the excessive numbers of common and medium grades enabled buyers to pound prices for these 10@15c. Top price of $8.25 was realized for 16 head of prime 1,555 lbs average. Marketing Tuesday 7,500. Trade was slow at very steady prices. Best steers offered were 25 head of 1,147 lbs average at at $6.60.

Run Wednesday 20,000. An active market from start to finish and prices 10@15c higher. Top was $8.45, a string of 54 of 1,551 lbs average making the price.

COWS AND HEIFERS.

On Thursday of last week it was a steady deal for desirable cows and heifers, but plainer classes were dull and weaker sale. Quality was quite plain, there being few offerings of value above $4.50. Prices Friday were steady with the previous day, but 15@25c lower than the close of the previous week. Western range she stock continues a strong competitive of she stock in the native market, although buyers are showing fairly good favor toward desirable offerings.

At the start of this week good to choice cows and heifers met fairly good demand and prices ruled steady. The plain and medium grades, which comprised a big portion of the offerings, sold at 10@15c decline. A few choice yearling heifers went up to $6.50. The Tuesday run was liberal and made up largely of plain and medium grades, but the absence of a heavy run of westerns helped out the selling end to the extent that steady prices prevailed.

Wednesday market was fairly active at steady prices.

Supplies were fairly liberal Thursday of last week and prices declined 10@15c, all classes getting bumped. A string of 100 feeders of 1,233 lbs average went out at a cost of $6.00. However, they were well worth the money to the killers. Supplies Friday were greatly reduced and tone of trade was stronger. As compared with last week, however, prices were 15@25c lower. The market would have been on a considerably lower basis had it not been for the wide outlet through eastern stocker and feeder channels. The West has been compelled to ship because pastures have given out in many sections.

A big run at the start of this week resulted in a decline of 15@25c. Local buyers were rendered bearish by the heavy run and the moderate number of country buyers. On Tuesday there was a goodly number of outside buyers on the market and trade was active at fully steady prices.

Wednesday market was 10@15c higher.

Save Your Dollars

It's every man's business to make money and to save money. When your cattle, sheep or lambs are fat you send them to market consigned to a commission salesman to make money. You feel he is the best qualified to get the high dollar, that the commission you pay him for his service is a good investment. It is. But do you save money by buying your feeding stock yourself? If it's a money making investment to hire your fat stock sold, it's a money making and a money saving proposition to hire your feeding stock bought. "A thing well bought is half sold" is demonstrated in the markets every day. Our experts are filling orders for up-to-date feeders every day and they are making them money and saving them money. You save railroad fare, hotel and incidental expenses by sending us your order. Our buyers, in the price alone, often save you several commissions. Besides, you get the benefit of their expert knowledge in the selection, sort, etc. Give us a trial order and make and save money in one operation. : : : : : :

Supplies Thursday of last week 14,715. Good to choice offerings sold 15@20c lower. Opening steady for packing grades, market elosed strong to 10c higher. Top was $8.95. Most shipping grades sold at $8.15@8.75 and bulk packers at $7.60 @8.00. Friday total 11,644. Market generally 10 @15c higher. There was a lot of business at $8.00 @8.50, and the nine-center bobbed up again. Marketing Saturday 7,524. While packing grades advanced 5@10c, other kinds held about steady. It was a $8.00@8.25 market for big hogs on the packing order, against $7.50@7.75 same day last week. The general bulk of sales at $8.00@8.60. Top was $9.00, which stood only 10c higher than a week ago.

Marketing at the start of this week 34,390. Prices were 5@10c lower, light weights selling to best advantage. The heavy packers showing mostly 10c loss. It was a good market, considering the run, and quality was excellent. From packers to butchers a lot of $8 00@8.40 business was done, with top at $8.95. The average weight of hogs last week was 252 lbs, being only 2 lbs under the previous week and comparing with 231 lbs a year ago. Run Tuesday 12,000. General market was steady to 5c higher, although the close was weak on heavy grades. A spread of $8.00@8.35 took a lot of packing and mixed offerings. The top was $9.00.

Run Wednesday 25.000. Packing grades held steady until late, when they went weaker, bulk going at $7.80@8.20. Other kinds opened strong and finished 10@20c lower. Top $9.00 and bulk $8.35@ 8.90.

Native Sheep and Lambs.

At the close of last week prices for native lambs were 15@25c lower than the previous week's finish, while sheep were about steady sale. Top for week was $6.75 for lambs, $5.50 for yearlings, $4.50 for wethers and $4.35 for ewes. Bulk of sales were at $6.00@6.50 for lambs and $4.00@4.25 for ewes. Breeding ewes largely at $4.25@4.85.

It was a 10@15c higher deal at the start of this week, with buyers very anxious for anything desirable. A small lot of native lambs made $6.85 and $6.25@6.50 got most of them. Bulk of sheep were ewes and landed at $4.00@4.25. We landed breeder ewes at top price of $5.25. Prices were boosted still higher Tuesday, most trading being at 10c advance. Top lambs made $7.00 and ewes $4.35.

Starting out 10c higher Tuesday, the lamb market closed with the advance lost. However, they went 10c up from start to finish. Early $7.00@7.10 was paid for lambs, and ewes reached $4.50, with yearling breeders at $5.35.

On Wednesday sheep sold 10@15c lower, with prime ewes at $4.25, while lambs showed 25@40c decline, a fancy class going at $6.75.

Information that Informs

Thousands of live stock feeders stand ready to bear witness that keeping in close touch with the markets through the LIVE STOCK REPORT, and the market letters issued by Clay, Robinson & Co., not only at Chicago, but also at our branch houses at nine other leading live stock points, has been most profitable to them. Through the above they are kept in the closest touch with the trade every day and besides are advised when is the best time to let their offerings come to market or when to buy feeding stock. It is our aim to furnish our clients the best possible advice and information at all times. No expense is spared. With our high-class salesmen and houses at ten leading points we are in a position to keep in as close touch with the trade as are the packers themselves, and are in position to take advantage of the market conditions at all times to the benefit of our patrons. If you are not being thoroughly and frequently informed on market conditions at Chicago, Kansas City, South Omaha, East St. Louis, South St. Joseph, Sioux City, South St. Paul, Denver, East Buffalo, or Fort Worth, a letter to Clay, Robinson & Co. at any of these points will bring forth the "information that informs." IF YOU HAVE FEED

YOU NEED

Cattle or Sheep to Eat it!

LET US BUY THEM FOR YOU

Why? Because—

1—We get you better stock at less cost. Our feeder buyers are expert judges of quality and value. They are on the market every day and can't be fooled.

2—You save money by placing your orders in our hands, as you do not need to come to market, thus avoiding unnecessary expense of railroad fare, hotel bills, etc.

3—You avoid loss of time, as well as trouble and worry. We relieve you of all this. To do so is a regular branch of our business, and we are equipped for it.

4—With houses at ten leading live stock markets, we are in intimate touch with all sources of supply, enabling us to advise our customers on which market to buy to best advantage.

We fill orders season after season for hundreds of the most successful feeders in the country. You have read in the Live Stock Report from week to week the unsolicited testimonials of many of these, proving that we please them. We can do the same for you. : :

Exterminating Ticks by Vacating Pastures.

August lends itself well to the eradication of cattle fever ticks where a pasture rotation plan is used. By vacating a pasture during this month and keeping it vacant until July 1 of next year it may be freed of ticks, and if no tick-infested animals are allowed to enter after July 1 the pasture will remain free.

Pastures from which live stock is removed for a sufficient time become free of ticks by a process of starvation, as the ticks cannot live to maturity if they are unable to get upon animals. The time required for all ticks to die after the stock has been removed from infested field and pastures varies considerably, depending on climate, season, and weather conditions. Experience has shown, however, that the period from Sept. 1 to July 1 is sufficient, and this appears to be the most convenient time.

The advantage of vacating a pasture for the period named is twofold. Not only is the pasture freed from ticks, but its disuse during that time will probably cause less inconvenience and expense than at any other season, and it will be benefited by the rest and will have a better growth of grass the following summer. In some sections, where pastures are utilized throughout the winter, to vacate would probably necessitate feeding the stock, unless the farmer is situated so that he can keep his stock on one pasture while another pasture is kept vacant. But it is also true that beginning with September there will be a more abundant supply of rough feed about a farm which can be utilized. August is a most favorable month for making a start toward freeing premises of ticks by the method suggested.

The animals should of course be free of ticks when they are again turned on the pasture in July. Where the owner has a small number of cattle, greasing or spraying them with Beaumont crude petroleum is a good way to rid them of ticks When the number of cattle is large or when a dipping vat is convenient it may be more practicable to dip them.

Full information as to how to get rid of the ticks, including directions for the preparation of dips and sprays, may be obtained free upon application to the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Feeder Sheep at Northwestern.

A new addition to the premium list of the Northwestern Live Stock Show this year is a class for feeder sheep, in carload lots of fifty head, wethers or ewes one year and under two, and also car of wethers or ewes under one year. The prizes offered for each lot are four in number, aggregating $195, and in addition to that a prize of $75 for the champion carload. It is expected that this class will bring forth a large number of entries, as the territory of the show comprizes some excellent sheep raising districts. There is not a state in the territory embraced which does not produce a large number of most excellent sheep eligible to this class. The class does not make any distinction as to pure breds or grades, and is open for all comers. Ownership of stock sixty days prior to the day of the show, which is Nov. 15 to 18, is the main condition imposed in this competition.

Vol. 20 . Chicago, Friday, August 26, 1910 No. 34

Wing's Wise Words on a Timely Topic.

Joseph Wing has the following to say in the Aug. 17 issue of the Breeder's Gazette:

"In recent years of good wool and mutton prices many farmers have wished for a flock of sheep, but were kept from getting it because of the high figures asked for breeding stock. This year they have an opportunity to 'get in on the ground floor.' The sheep business does not look so attractive as it did, but considering the cost of getting into it it is as good a proposition now as it was then—perhaps better. Sheep look like a good investment at current prices either for feeding or breeding purposes. A flock of fairly good ewes and a good ram will probably make a very good return on the money and feed invested in them by this time next year, if they are given reasonable attention in the meantime. Investors who want a quick turn can get it by buying range ewes and a mutton ram and finishing the lambs early next summer, or by buying cheap feeders and sending them to market next winter. Both look like good prospects for a profitable transaction at present cost of stock.

"Range lambs are cheap now, at least they look so, and many men will be tempted to buy them and summer feed them or graze them. I believe the summer feeding proposition is good. One ought to make a pound of mutton now from those lambs much cheaper and easier than he will in the winter. He ought also to manage it so that their manure will be distributed where it is needed—a considerable matter.

"There are, however, some serious obstacles against which inexperienced sheepmen run when trying to graze or feed western lambs in summer. To lay down a few hard-and-fast rules in this matter may awaken thought. First, never buy native lambs for summer feeding. They are too apt to develop stomach worms on your hands. Native lambs ought to go always from the farm to the butcher. Second, never turn western lambs on any grass where native sheep have run and do not let even one native sheep run with them. Neglect of this rule has cost thousands of dollars. Western lambs come to you usually clean of internal parasites. If then they are put in meadow or pasture where no sheep have been for a year or more and no sheep are put with them they will almost always keep clean and healthy.

"Third, it usually pays well to feed dry grain with the succulent eastern pastures. Western grasses though dry are more nutritious than eastern grasses. The one advantage in the East is that there is abundant feed which was not in the West. If to the abundant succulent grass, clover, alfalfa, rape, weeds of your eastern pasture you can add the hardening and healthful influence of a daily ration of dry grain you will make very substantial gains. Fourth, when you begin feeding grain on pasture enclose a corner of the field with temporary fence of some sort. Put the troughs within this enclosure. When you put in feed go around the lambs and bring every one in. Shut them in till the last one has finished eating.

"I have seen sad wrecks come to feeders who neglected this rule and put out feed in troughs in a corner of the pasture, calling up part of the lambs and trusting to the others to come up. By allowing only a part of the lambs access to the feed they ate too much, some got none. The next feeding time the others probably got too much. Soon there were a lot of dyspeptic lambs that no one could fatten. See to it that every lamb comes and stays till they are all through eating.

"What is the best grain for summer feeding? Begin on oats or barley and fresh wheat bran, equal weights. Gradually change if you like to a corn ration. The oats and bran will make grand lambs. Add a little oilmeal or cottonseed meal if you like. These things will do wonders for the pasture, too. If they are clean they ought not to need tobacco, yet it will not hurt to keep it before them. Water, clean and fresh, and shade, they need both."

CATTLE WHICH TOPPED SIOUX CITY MARKET 30c PER CWT.

Above photo was taken of cattle in the feed lot of L. E. McFarlane of Lake Andes, S. D. They were on the Sioux City market June 20 and were sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. at $8.30, being 30c per cwt higher than any other cattle made that day. Mr. McFarlane is one of the most extensive farmers and feeders in South Dakota and his cattle frequently top the market.

A Survivor of Death Valley.

One of the survivors of the first party that ever crossed Death Valley, California, was at South Omaha last week with stock to Clay, Robinson & Co. His name is John B. Colton, owner of the Buzzard Roost ranch of Eddyville, Neb., and a resident of Kansas City.

Mr. Colton's experiences read like a seven-day thriller. There were thirty-six people in his party, four of whom are living today. One of them is a woman ninety-seven years of age and the other two are "boys" over eighty, all of them living in California. Each year on Feb. 4 Mr. Colton alights from the Limited that has its terminal in the coast state and the four hold a reunion in commemoration of their deliverance. Told in Mr. Colton's own words to the Journal-Stockman, the narrative is more forcible.

"Death Valley was unknown and unexplored at the time we entered it," said Mr. Colton. "It was in the winter of '49 and not until three months later, Feb. 4, '50, did the remnant of our party emerge. The Valley is only fifteen or twenty miles across in its widest place and about sixty miles long, but atmospheric conditions are such that it is a veritable death trap. The heat is so intense and peculiarly baking that any living thing actually shrivels within its grasp. Excepting cactus and greasewood, there is no sign of vegetation anywhere. For fifty-two days we were without food and lived on nothing but greasewood. For five days we were without water. The only thing that sustained us was the hope that there might be rescue beyond the next 'hogback.' Crawling things, such as rattle snakes, centipedes and chug-wallahs, abound and the mere sight of the Valley has been known to make a spectator turn sick with horror. Fortunately, a Death Valley victim generally loses his mind after he has wandered about for a few days, so that he is not conscious of the torture preceding death."

Much of the borax used commercially at present is taken out of the Death Valley, but water depots and provision stores have been provided, so that the trips to and fro are now comparatively free from danger. Even now, however, it is impossible to work the "twenty mule teams" during the summer months. Incidentally, Mr. Colton's party discovered the borax mines during their wanderings.

Condition of Country Sound Financially.

There has been and there is no neason to doubt that the country is sound financially. Evidence of a healthy condition are appearing on every hand. This is gratifying to the cattle, hog and sheepmen, for with the wheels of industry revolving around steadily and swiftly there is assurance of a broad outlet for dressed meat products.

The Government crop reports and the annual reports of the Continental and Commercial National Bank indicate that we shall have in the neighborhood of three billion bushels of corn, which is next to the largest crop that the country has ever produced.

The shortage in the wheat crop seems to be partly offset by the quality of the berry, as all reports show that the grain that has been thrashed out is of better grade than was anticipated. Reports of the poor wheat crops abroad, that are explained by continued rain and cold weather, indicate that there will be a strong demand for American wheat, which, in all probability, will keep the price up around the dollar mark.

The condition of the banks has improved very materially in the last thirty days. During the forepart of July there was a heavy demand from the country banks for accommodation and a draining down of their reserves, but they are now beginning to build up their reserves and have stopped borrowing. One large Chicago bank reports that it has nearly five millions more deposits than it had a month ago.

Taking the situation all in all, the best and clearest judges of financial conditions predict an easy money market, which will facilitate the movement of the crops this fall, and this means continued prosperity throughout the West.

The leading bankers and merchants of Chicago say that they can see no financial cloud even the size of a man's hand.

Buyers Want the Good Cattle.

There is no complaint to be heard of the market for strictly fat beef steers, and buyers are not burdening the ears of salesmen with tales of a poor consumptive demand. In fact, the general trade is on a more satisfactory basis. Of course buyers are as ready as ever to pound the price range down. Yet they seem to want the offerings. First bids are for the better classes, slaughterers being well aware of the shortage of these in the feed lots and fearing that rates will be boosted still higher. However, they are more independent towards plain and medium fleshed lots. They believe that both natives and westerns of those classes will come liberally enough for all trade requirements.

Would Stop Slaughter of Calves.

The plan of the National Butchers' Association, which met in Chicago to check the tendency toward a still further cattle shortage, is rather novel, but it may work for good if it can be enforced. They want a close season on calves. Stop the marketing of calves for three months of the year. March, April and May is their suggestion.

If packers and butcher buyers can be persuaded to stop buying calves in those months, of if they will put down prices to a point where the market will not attract shippers, they can carry out their plans. That is the only way to do it. The man who has calves to sell is moved by his self-interest as he sees it. High prices for calves will cause him to ship them to market, if he believes that he will make more by selling them than by holding them for maturity.

Receipts of calves at the Fort Worth market are about 6 per cent less than for the same time in 1909, says the Reporter. The decrease in receipts of grown cattle is nearly 13 per cent. This shows a comparatively heavier marketing of calves than of mature cattle for the year to date. Receipts of cattle at Chicago show a gain of 122,000 for the year, compared with the same period in 1909, and calf receipts are 85,000 greater. The percentage of increase in calves is a little less than 32 per cent and of cattle 14 per cent, showing that the increase in calf receipts at that market is comparatively more than double the increase of cattle. Kansas City has suffered a loss of 12½ per cent in calves and of 3 1-3 in grown cattle, this market making an exception to the rule, as it shows a comparatively lighter marketing of calves than of grown cattle. St. Louis classes calves and cattle together, and reports from that market throw no light on comparative receipts.

These figures clearly prove that in spite of the impending deficiency in the supply of cattle in the country, that deficiency is being made worse and worse by the slaughter of calves, from which the breeding stock and the supply of the coming four or five years must come. It is time for the butchers and others who are interested in the beef business to do something to put a stop to this depletion of the source of the beef supply.

Germany Facing a Meat Famine.

Germany is rapidly approaching a meat famine, due to the government regulations keeping out of the nation products from other countries, and a big outcry is being raised, aimed at the existing conditions. The only measure that can prevent a meat famine in Germany, it is said, is for the government to lift the ban forbidding the importation of foreign meats, and this the officials steadfastly refuse to do. Slaughterers' and retailers' reports indicate that the quantity of beef, pork and mutton now on sale in the German capital is only two-thirds as large as it was a year ago and the supply is steadily diminishing. The meat famine is felt the greatest among the poorer classes, and it is the poor that are especially bitter against the government regulations.

Conditions are Better in Idaho.

M. Lowry of Heath, Idaho, brings word that things are looking up in the state veined with ditches. Ranges are in excellent shape, he declares, and grass is plentiful. The only thing that is worrying sheep growers at present is the outlook for hay this winter. The first cutting of alfalfa did not amount to much, but second cutting yielded a very good tonnage. Prospects for a heavy third cutting are promising, owing to good rains recently, but even with a bumper final crop, hay insurance against stock loss will not be safe enough to warrant the risk of wintering large flocks. Almost all of the lambs have been marketed and most of the old-time sheepmen intend to clean up well on their old sheep before cold weather arrives.

In speaking of Idaho as a state peculiarly suited to mutton growing, Mr. Lowry is anything but a knocker. The Bitter Root mountains, the Sawtooth reserve and the Seven Devil country afford the finest summer range imaginable, he declares, while the lowlands make excellent grounds for wintering. Mr. Lowry was on the South Omaha market last week with a shipment of lambs which Clay, Robinson & Co. sold to a feeder buyer at $6.40.

There is Rejoicing in the Panhandle.

The rains that have fallen in the Panhandle country of Texas lately has caused rejoicing among the people there. It is stated by old-timers there of the Panhandle that this portion of the country has never been in such good shape as at present. The feed crop promises to be one that can scarcely be gathered and years have elapsed since the grass was in as good shape as now. Cattle and other live stock could not be in better condition and there is a well defined vein of optimism among the Panhandle citizenship.

Range States Wool Clip is Heaviest.

The highest average weight per fleece for the 1910 clip is 7.7 lbs, shared by Montana, Washington and Oregon, Wyoming following with an average of 7.6. The lowest average, 2.6, is credited to Georgia. Ohio, which leads in high class fine wool production shows an average of 6.5. The range states average 7.1, the Mississippi region sections follow with 6.8 and South Atlantic sections with 4.3. The average for the range clips for ten years is 6.9. The rapid improvement now going on in the southern flocks will soon increase the average weight of the United States fleece.

Recent Rains of Great Benefit.

E. F. Wiley, a well known buyer and raiser of cattle and hogs at Wauneta Neb., was at South Omaha with a car of mixed stock to Clay, Robinson & Co. "Crops have suffered a set back with us just as they have in other sections," said Mr. Wiley, "but the recent rains have made a wonderful improvement and corn and pastures are looking good. While we will have enough corn for home use, we will not have any to ship out as usual. Some people think that we have to import corn into our locality, but that is a wrong impression, as we have not had any corn sent in for the last fourteen years. Stock cattle are plentiful, but the hogs are pretty well shipped out. We are pretty proud of the advancement our country has made in the last four years. Four years ago you could get good land at $10 per acre, now improved land sells at from $40@50, with unimproved at $25@30 per acre."

UNCLE SAM FEELS CHEERFUL.

—Chicago Record-Herald.

CLAY, ROBINSON & COMPANY'S LIVE STOCK REPORT

Brevoort Yearling Cattle at $7.80.

W. H Brevoort, the senior member of the famous Indiana feeding firm of Brevoort & Son, with headquarters at Vincennes, was on the Chicago market Aug. 24 with 40 head of yearling steers which averaged 936 lbs and were sold by Clay, Robinson & Co at $7.80. No other yearling cattle sold within 10c per cwt of this price this week. This makes the second time in two weeks that we have topped the market with the Brevoort yearlings. On Wednesday of last week we sold a lot at $7.75, the top that week and up to then the highest by 25c per cwt for six weeks. They were mostly grade Herefords.

Montana Steer at $7.75; Wyoming at $7.25.

It was Wednesday of this week that Clay, Robinson & Co. sold a native Montana steer of 1,680 lbs weight at $7.75. This price is 50c per cwt higher than any other range cattle have made this season. The animal belonged to the Judith Mercantile Co. of Big Sandy, Mont., for whom we also sold on the above day 29 head of 1,340-lb steers at $7.00, the top that day. On Monday we also sold for J. B. Kendrick of Sheridan, Wyo., a native Wyoming steer of 1,260 lbs weight at $7.25, being 25c per cwt higher than any other range cattle made that day.

Graham Beeves Topped Week's Market.

E. T. Graham, the veteran cattle feeder of Nebraska, with headquarters at Creston, had cattle on the South Omaha market Tuesday and Wednesday last week that Clay, Robinson & CO. at $7.75, extreme top for the week.

On Monday of this week Mr. Graham had 53 head of 1,518-lb beeves at South Omaha and Clay, Robinson & Co. landed them at $8.00, top for this week.

Brighter Outlook for Rangemen.

There is a brighter outlook for the trade in both western range cattle and sheep. For awhile it looked as though the markets would be swamped with offerings from there because of a severe drought and that prices would fall to a very low level. A most pleasant surprise for those who held these very pessimistic views. The general demand is strong, the market active and prices encouragingly higher than the recent low spots The main boosting factor has been the remarkably broad outlet for both cattle and sheep through feeder channels. This has lifted a big weight off the market and has resulted in sellers having things more their own way. Of course there may be times when prices will take a temporary dip, but we believe that present and future conditions warrant the assertion that the demand for both fat and feeder classes will continue good and the markets average relatively strong.

Year's Forage Crops Short.

Hay and similar crops are short as a whole, owing to the severe drought which prevailed in many parts of the country at one time or another. Consequently, the year's supply of forage will be much below normal. This can easily be made up if farmers will save their corn fodder. Very few western farmers in particular realize the great feeding value of corn fodder cut at the right time and properly cured. The corn should be cut just after the kernels have become well dented and before the blades have dried very much. They should be placed in good-sized shocks, so that the proportion of the blades that are exposed to the weather is small. Then if the fodder is shredded at the right time, the shortage in hay will not be felt. Live stock are fond of this kind of feed, and it is one of the unexplained problems of agriculture that it is not given more attention. The supply of fodder can be still further increased if a large proportion of the corn crop is put into the silo. This ought to require no argument.

Hog Market a Surprise to Traders.

There has been a high and bounding trade in hogs during the past ten days or so. On the recent low spot the great bulk of the business was done under the $8.00 mark, and there were those who were confident that the big weight packing grades were fast on their way to the $7.00 figure. These discouraging views have been entirely dispelled. The market has travelled an entirely different road. On Wednesday of this week most trading was above the $8.50 mark, and the top at $9.35 paid for assorted light, was the highest since early in July, when $9.60 was recorded. There is a well grounded suspicion that there are not as many hogs in the country as some of the traders anticipated. This is evidenced by the light runs during the past ten days in the face of a sharply higher market. To render conditions more bullish, the producers steadfastly refuse to feed a sinking market liberally and it is thought that packers have a big monetary interest in the provision trade. Although we take a rather optimistic view of the market, we still advise the marketing of all fat swine weighing around 225 lbs and heavier as fast as practicable. There may be such a thing as overstaying a good market, this applying especially to big weight offerings.

Gored to Death by Steer.

While assisting in the sorting of a pen of western range cattle Monday Michael Burns, for a number of years an employe of Clay, Robinson & Co., was gored by a steer so badly that, while he was hurried at once to a hospital and his wounds given every attention, he succumbed some three or four hours after the unfortunate accident occurred. He was a man about 45 years old and a steady, hard-working fellow. He is survived by a wife, but leaves no children.

The fatality is the first that has ever occurred in the Clay, Robinson & Co. ranks, and is naturally a most regrettable circumstanee.

Why Corn Prices Do Not Break.

There is some surprise that corn does not break sharply, in view of the rains during the last week or so over a great portion of the corn belt. The strength of corn is due to combination of conditions, including small contract supplies in all markets, compared to the recent large supplies. The plant is late everywhere, and at the best could not make a bumper yield, and is bound to be in danger of frost. There has been a short hay crop in all the principal feeding states and in the big dairy districts, which has caused feeding of old corn and old forage crops. To the hay shortage there should be added the poorest pasturage of many years in these same sections. The high prices of hay have caused the strongest summer cash demand for corn that they have had in some years.

Two Heavy Rains in the West.

W. M. Woolbridge, proprietor of the Anchorage, Valley county, Mont., writes under date of Aug. 17: "We have had two very heavy rains in this vicinity within the past week. The water holes are again filled up and everybody is much encouraged, stockmen especially. The creeks and streams are rising and the farming and ranching interests of Northeastern Montana are again hopeful."

International Preliminary Classification.

The preliminary classification of the International Live Stock Exposition, to be held at Chicago during Nov. 26 to Dec. 3, is off the press. Secretary-General Superintendent B. H. Heide writes us to the effect that these pamphlets may be had upon application. Those who intend to exhibit at the International, or are otherwise interested, should have one of these preliminary classifications.

THE BEEF STEER IN WISCONSIN

By L. F. GRABER, Student of Wisconsin College of Agriculture

The following article was awarded second in the competition for cash prizes amounting to $100 given by Mr. John Clay for best articles by students of the Agricultural Journalism Course at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

Many farms in Southern Wisconsin are peculiarly adapted to economical beef production. With a large proportion of excellent blue grass pasture land, too rough for tillage and at the same time enough farming land to produce sufficient roughage for wintering feeders and sufficient grain for fattening them, these farms present great possibilities in making beef for profit. The land has an average assessed value of not over $50 per acre. It is estimated that each acre of good blue grass pasture will produce 150 lbs of beef. If steers, thus fattened, can be finished with fall corn, great profits may be realized. I have in mind an extensive feeder owning just such a farm as above described who wintered 66 good quality two-year-old feeders, averaging about 1,050 lbs. They were pastured during the summer and finished with fall corn. When sold these cattle averaged 1,500 lbs and netted $112 per head. The original cost of these steers was just $55 per head.

Buying Stockers and Feeders.

It is generally conceded that the good quality two-year-old, weighing from 800 to 1,000 lbs, is the most profitable for feeding purposes in Wisconsin. It often happens that feeders are scarce locally and buying on the Chicago and South St. Paul markets has become quite popular. The cattle may be purchased through a commission man, who buys and sells cattle every day and who best knows what stockers and feeders are worth. Market buying has its advantages in that it is possible to get uniformity in age, color, weight, condition, breeding and quality, which characteristics are very essential in the production of "top notchers." Oftentimes the buyer is able to take advantage of a glut in the market and thus obtain feeders at really less than they are worth. Successful buying on the market requires close attention to market conditions. A daily stock paper, and circular letters from commission firms, and weeklies, such as Clay, Robinson & Company's Live Stock Report, will keep the cattle feeder well informed.

Wintering Stockers.

With cattle purchased in the fall the Wisconsin feeder does not plan on large winter gains. If he can have them "hold their own weight" it is all he wishes. In other words, he winters them as cheaply as possible. He feeds no grain. He "roughs" them through winter on corn stover, timothy and clover hay. Roughing steers over winter is an art. It is one of the fine points of cattle feeding to know just how well to winter cattle for the most profit. Clover hay is considered the best roughage with which to winter cattle. Of course, alfalfa is better, but it is not as yet grown very extensively in Wisconsin. Hay and corn stover are field fed except on stormy days, when they are fed in racks to prevent waste. Field feeding is a means of great labor saving in the hauling of manure, which always results from shed or barn feeding.

Summer Pasturing of Cattle.

No cheaper gains can be made than those produced on pasture. The average cost of gains with summer grazing is less than 2c per pound. Steers pastured at the rate of one steer for every two and one-half acres will often gain over 300 lbs. In the early spring, after the snow has melted, the cattle relish the old blue grass and will eat but little hay. There is little danger of scours, due to the over succulence of spring grass, if cattle are turned on pastures early when they contain a large proportion of old grass. Pastures of 80 acres or more are most desirable. It is well to have the grass land divided into two or more sections so the cattle can be transferred from one pasture to another, thus affording fresh, clean grass every few weeks. Salt should be kept before the steers at all times and good running water and shade are very essential.

Feeding Fall Corn to Cattle.

No grain is fed until fall, when the corn has become quite well glazed. The corn may be hauled in the field and fed in the stalk. About 15 lbs of green corn fodder should be fed at first, this amount being gradually increased until cattle are on full feed. At this time only about one-half the stalks are consumed and sheep or fall stockers may be turned in the feeding field to clean up the waste.

Hogs are absolutely essential to secure the total utilization of the feed. The importance of hogs in the feed lot cannot be over-estimated. The otherwise wasted grain is saved and converted into pork with great profit to the feeder. Thin, thrifty, well-boned shotes, weighing about 125 lbs, have proven to be the best kind of hogs to follow steers. Two such hogs per head of cattle will clean up all waste and grow fat. It may be necessary to feed a little grain to the hogs in addition to the feed secured from the droppings of the steers, but this is a matter to be determined by observation. Field feeding necessitates the hogs being kept in an enclosure until the cattle have finished eating and then they may be turned out to clean up the waste corn and droppings. On many farms cattle feeding without hogs has at times proven unprofitable.

In the fall, when pastures become dry and somewhat short, the succulent green fodder is a good substitute for the decrease in the grass supply. At this time, flies are not troublesome as they are in summer and the steers make excellent gains, often as high as 3 lbs per day. About the middle of November the cattle will average about 1,500 lbs, at which time they should be marketed. Cattle thus fed will usually bring "top" prices, if they have good quality and are well finished.

Wisconsin as a Beef State.

Wisconsin, while not in the corn belt, and not primarily a beef state, has great possibilities in producing beef. This is particularly true of the southern portion. Good crops of Wisconsin No. 7 corn can be raised and pastures are excellent. In many places good land can be purchased at $60 per acre and the problem of producing beef on $100 land has not as yet confronted the average Wisconsin farmer.

In the past Wisconsin cattle on the Chicago markets were of a nondescript character, but in the last few years they have improved wonderfully. While the dairy industry is making rapid progress, Wisconsin will never cease feeding steers. It is a type of farming for the man who wishes to farm with the minimum amount of farm help and expense and prefers extensive rather than intensive methods. In these days of scarce labor and high prices for farm products making beef with our cheap grazing lands and fall corn is very profitable.

Montana Gets a Soaking Rain.

J. C. Arbogast of Harlem, Mont., was on the South St. Paul market with two cars of cattle Thursday of last week, which Clay, Robinson & Co. handled to his satisfaction. He stated that his section of the country had been favored with a drenching rain just previous to his leaving, and that it would result in a great deal of good. The downfall was of such volume as to fill all water holes and grass was given a fresh start. He mentioned that there would be a good many sheep shipped this fall, but that cattlemen were inclined to hold off unless prices showed improvement.

"Top in This Field."

Commenting upon one of our recent advertisements in their columns, the Breeder's Gazette says:

"Clay, Robinson & Co. in their advertisement present a photographic gallery of the sheep salesmen whom they employ at ten markets. It is a strong staff, and represents years of selection and training. It places Clay, Robinson & Co. at the top in this field of commercial service. Whatever makes for the highest efficiency in salesmanship is brought into play by this old-established live stock commission house."

An Unnecessary Sacrifice of Live Stock.

Let unfavorable crop conditions exist and the first thing some folks think of doing is to sell off most of their stock. For a few weeks in the fall of 1901 every stock center was flooded with cattle and hogs until the markets were demoralized. After it was all over those who sold their stuff down close saw their mistake, and there will probably be those living in the short corn districts who will make the same mistake this year.

It is a bad plan to winter fifty head of cattle on what twenty-five should have. It is better to sell twenty-five at any kind of price the market offers and winter the remaining twenty-five right than to half-winter the whole number, but no one should be in a great hurry about selling the twenty-five. It is this state of mind that demoralizes markets and people should keep clear of precipitating any rush this fall.

In a great many instances there is no need for every man to sell stock cattle simply because one or two individuals get excited over the matter. If the corn crop is short, perhaps amounting to almost nothing as far as grain is concerned, there will be fodder in plenty and corn enough it is now assured to make the fodder a good maintenance ration. So why sell anything that should be kept for a greater growth and age before really marketable?

The water prblem is bothering in some sections. This is bad. The farm without a water supply, at least practically handy, is poorly equipped as a stock farm. Water, not only in an ordinary time, but in an extraordinary dry time, is one of the first elements to consider before bringing together a large herd of cattle. The man who cannot feel sure that his water supply will hold out, cannot feel secure. He may have to sell just when he ought not, just because a scant water supply compels him to do so, or resort to the profit-destroying plan of hauling water. No doubt a considerable number of stock has gone to market already this season because of water failing in the pastures.

But there is little reason for selling young cattle at sacrifice prices for fear they cannot be wintered. The corn fodder, if all put in the shock at the right time, will furnish an abundance of roughness, unless the number of cattle is altogether out of reason in comparison with the size of the farm. In the case of young steers, remember that next year's corn crop may be a big one and that steers are sure to be scarce and sell then at high prices. To sell stock now that may as well be wintered, and on what would otherwise be a waste or could only be sold to little advantage, is an example of very poor judgment. Hold on and keep on holding on through the winter if at all possible.—Iowa Homestead.

AMONG OUR CUSTOMERS

E. S. Bartlett of Lake county, Mich., writes: "Sheep got in in good shape, and am suited with the purchase."

Jas. Graham was on the South Omaha market Aug. 16 with a train of cattle from Fremont county, Wyo.

John A. Smith of Calhoun county, Mich., writes: "Double deck of lambs arrived. I was much pleased with them."

Guiser Bros. of Pierce county, Wis., and John Snoyenbos of Saint Croix county, Wis., had cattle at South St. Paul.

John Cail and his neighbor, John Bolli, had four cars of cattle to our South Omaha house from Garfield county, Neb.

Wm. Steeve of Page county, Ia., writes our South St. Joseph house: "Was highly pleased with sale on my last car of hogs."

Wesley Kays of Putnam county, Ill., writes: "Load of feeding sheep arrived O. K., and I think they are well worth the money."

On Aug. 15 and 16 our South Omaha house handled a nine-car shipment of yearlings and lambs for J. R. Keith of Canyon county, Idaho.

C. S. Hoyt of Cherry county, Neb., prominent cattleman and banker, was on the South Omaha market with two cars of good steers.

A. A. Smith of Hillsdale county, Mich., writes: "I am more than pleased with lambs. They are the best bunch I ever got from Chicago."

The Swan Land and Cattle Co., heavily engaged in stock raising in Laramie county, Wyo., had a train of cattle at South Omaha on Aug. 18.

George W. Henry of York county, Neb., writes our Denver house: "Cattle arrived O. K. I certainly think you made a good purchase for me."

E. R. Thoren had some good feeding yearling wethers at South Omaha on Aug. 16 from Fremont county, Wyo., averaging 76 lbs, that brought $5.25.

On Aug. 19 our South St. Joseph house topped the hog market with 26 head, averaging 193 lbs, at $8.90, shipped by H. S. Rhoades of Atchison county, Mo.

Converse county, Wyo., shipments to South Omaha included those from J. Kennedy, J. Jones and Frank Virden, old-time patrons of our firm at that point.

Sheep shipments to our South Omaha house Aug. 16 included four cars from C. J. Sprague of Butte county, S. D., very good 74-lb feeding yearlings selling at $5.25.

Jacob Harms of Sangamon county, Ill., writes our Kansas City house: "Cattle arrived in good shape and I am well pleased with them. Thank you very much for your work."

Limit for feeding wethers at Chicago last week was $4.25, which price we obtained August 17 for 113 head of 105 lbs average, marketed by O. Osness, of Chouteau county, Mont.

Edgar P. Thompson of Morgan county, Ind., writes: "Received the lambs in good shape and can say I am very much pleased with them. Thank you for your kindness and promptness."

Our house sold for S. O'Connor of Clinton county, Mo., at South St. Joseph on Aug. 18 a car of hogs, averaging 221 lbs, at $8.80, which was 15c per cwt above any other sale of their weight.

On Aug. 15 our South Omaha house handled four cars of cattle for O. J. Hanson, an old-time cattleman of Mead county, S. D. In the shipment were 62 head of 904-lb feeders that brought $5.00.

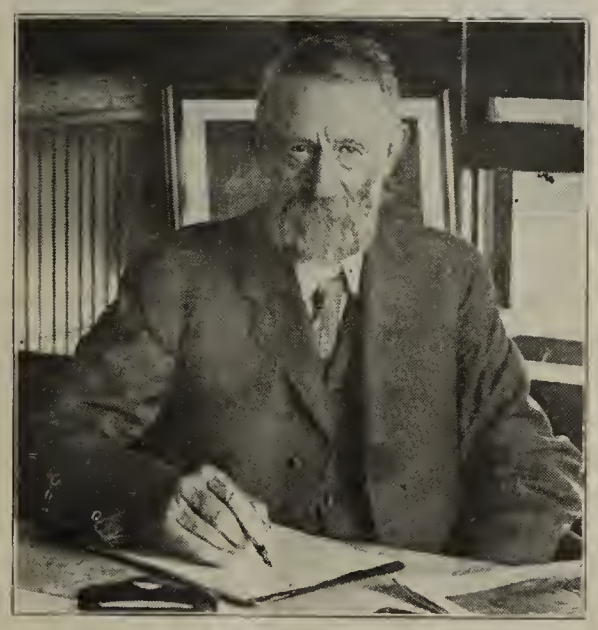
Chas. C. Judy of Menard county, Ill., writes: "Enclosed find exchange payable on your order for $3,212.77 in payment for your recent shipment of lambs. These lambs are very satisfactory."

Enos Hayes of Hamilton county, Ohio, who is proprietor of the Big Miami Stock Farm, writes: "Received double deck of ewes O. K. They are a fine lot of breeders and I could not have suited myself better."

Cassingham & Stone of Johnson county, Mo., write our East St. Louis house: "Returns on car of hogs at hand and we are well pleased with results; in fact, they are better than we anticipated on this stock."

Donald Graham of Teton county, Mont., writes: "Enclosed find 50c in payment of one year's subcription to REPORT. I want to make sure of my copy, as I consider it the most business-like report that I know of."

It was Aug. 17 that our South Omaha house handled a shipment of sheep and lambs for Lowry & Roth of Washington county, Idaho. Included were two doubles of lambs that sold to feeder buyers at $6.40, averaging 65 lbs, top of day's trade and higher than anything else in that line has sold since early in the season. On the same day they sold for E. A. Van Sicklin of Washington county, Idaho, 342 feeding lambs at $6.40, averaging 60 lbs.



FRANK BLOOM OF TRINIDAD, COLO.

Mr. Bloom is one of the pioneer and best known figures in western range cattle circles. He is president and manager of the Bloom Cattle Co., which at one time was one of the heaviest ranching firms in the West. At one time the company had heavy holdings of cattle in Montana, but these have been closed out to a great extent and they now have a big herd on the Cheyenne River Reservation in South Dakota, and also another big herd in the Southwest. Mr. Bloom is keen and alert and has made a great success in the handling of western range cattle, and we are proud to number him among our most valued clients. About thirty-six years ago he started shipping to J. M. Robinson & Co., and when this firm was succeeded by Clay, Robinson & Co. he continued his patronage, never shipping to any other firm.

R. M. Moran, a representative and well-known cattleman of Grant county, Neb., was at South Omaha on Aug. 16 with three cars of cattle, 36 feeders selling at $5.40, averaging 1,146 lbs, and a car of 925-lb cows at $3.95.

J. H. Faulkner of Butte county, S. D., was on the South Omaha market Aug. 15 with four cars of good cattle. One load of steers sold at $5.15, averaging 1,197 lbs and the top end of the cows $3.90, averaging 967 lbs.

The following parties honored our East St. Louis house with shipments of sheep or lambs: W. F. Shultz and Frank Utler, Schuyler county, Ill.; Lindsay & Leach, Lewis county, Mo.; W. C. Allard, Johnson county, Ill.; J. L. Elsey, Carlisle county, Ky.; S. Eastwood, Crawford county, Mo.; Monsess & Bente, Pettis county, Mo.; E. P. Harned, Cooper county, Mo.; W. J. Kays, Benton county, Mo.

Gibson county, Ind., was represented on the [illegible] market at Chicago on Aug. 22 with 22 head w[illegible] averaged 78 lbs and made the top price of $6.60 [illegible] natives. We handled the stock and G. W. Hadelson was the owner.

J. N. Josephson, Washington county, Minn.; Guiser Bros. and C. Struve, Pierce county, Wis., L. E. Potter, Brown county, Minn.; T. F. Meath, Saint Croix county, Wis., were represented with shipments at South St. Paul.

A. L. Goetz of Johnson county, Ia., writes our Sioux City house: "Load of heifers arrived in good shape. I am certainly well pleased with them and have nothing but praise for the manner in which you handled my order."

Yegen Bros. of Yellowstone county, Mont., write: "Your favor, enclosing account sale for eleven cars of ewes, at hand. We are very much pleased with the prices obtained for these sheep and wish to thank you for your efforts in our behalf."

Alvin Swain of Bartholomew county, Ind., writes our Kansas City house: "Received the cattle in first-class condition. They are a nice lot. I could not have bought any better if I had been there myself. Thank you for your good judgment."

The limit for hogs at Sioux City on Aug. 23 was $8.80. This price was obtained by our house for 83 head of 205 lbs average, no other hogs selling within 5c per cwt of this price. They were marketed by Watson Ham of Charles Mix county, S. D.

J. M. Stephenson, the prominent and popular ranchman, Meade county, S. D., was on the Chicago market Aug. 17 with steers and cows, and we are pleased to state that he was elated with the way we handled his cattle and the prices we secured for him.

Our South St. Paul house was favored with shipments from J. A. Estes, Ottertail county, Minn.; W. O. Hultberg, McLean county, N. D.; W. E. Stevens, Douglas county, Minn.; E. B. Pike, Roseau county, Minn.; A. Crossen, Chouteau county, Mont.

Nelson Stead of Mercer county, Ill., writes: "Many thanks for market reports. Corn looks fine, oats going from 40 to 80 bushels per acre and wheat 15 to 30 bushels. The pig crop is an average one and a good many hogs are to be marketed from here soon."

The Donald Sheep Co. of Natrona county, Wyo., obtained through us two different tops for their offerings at Chicago on Aug. 22, when we landed 697 head of their 69-lb yearlings on feeding account at $5.60 and 143 wethers of 85 lbs average on killer account at $4.40.

Writing to our South Omaha house from Unita county, Wyo., under date of Aug. 8, Frank Fear says: "We are having beautiful weather here. Range is very good. Cattle are in good shape, and we expect to have some good beef this fall. Hay going in stack in fine condition."
